Edward Sails Aboard British Destroyer to Exile And 'Woman I Love' After Farewell Broadcast

Peace Treaty Signed by U.S. With Brazil, Argentines

21 Powers Expected To Join in Project

Five-Year Tariff Truce Gets Cold Greeting by Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 11.—Representatives of the United States, Brazil and Argentina signed a joint resolution for peace and security today, the most concrete action yet taken at the Inter-American Peace Conference.

Several other nations—including Mexico, Guatemala and Nicaragua—added their signatures a few minutes after the three great countries approved the consultative accord, which resulted from secret conferences.

The signatures of Chile, Cuba, Peru and Uruguay, quickly following, increased the list of early assenters to ten.

United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared the proposal conveyed "the strongest guarantees for peace that this continent ever had and afford an example to the countries of other continents."

Joint Action Provided.

He said it was "an epochal step," providing for conferences, collaboration and consultation among "the 21 American nations in the event of: A, a menace of peace to the American republics from any source; B, a menace to peace on this continent through inter-American wars, and C, a menace from any war outside this continent that threatens the peace of the Americas."

Observers believed the plan may win the signatures of all the 21 republics represented at the conference tonight. Then it would go before the peace organization committee tomorrow and probably would be approved at a full session of the parley Tuesday.

A separate neutrality convention, originally linked with the peace and security plan, was scheduled to be submitted to the neutrality committee.

Mutual Advice Planned.

The peace and security project would establish a consultative system in case of troubles between American republics, said Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian ambassador to Washington.

Ax Boomerang To Prosecution In Edith's Trial

Physician Says the Weapon Could Not Have Made Fatal Wound.

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 11.—The ax which the prosecution introduced yesterday in the second trial of Edith Maxwell, charged with killing her blacksmith-father, turned out a boomerang today.

Dr. T. J. Tudor, a prosecution witness, said the ax could not have made the wound he found on Trigg Maxwell's head. Dr. Tudor was one of the physicians who performed the autopsy.

The two prosecutors, Commonwealth's Attorney Fred B. Greear and Oscar M. Vickars looked as if the ax had jumped up and nicked them.

From the outset they have tried to explode Edith's story that she struck her father with the slipper while he, in a drunken rage, was beating her and threatening to kill her. They realize that, in the eyes of the jury, a slipper does not seem a very devastating weapon.

At Edith's first trial, when she was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary, the prosecution introduced as evidence an electric iron found in the Maxwell home. They didn't say Edith used this; they merely suggested it.

They have introduced the iron again in this trial, but it has been apparent that they attached more importance to the ax.

This ax, introduced over the objections of defense counsel Charles Henry Smith, is a new one, purchased by the prosecution in a local hardware store. The prosecution got it in as evidence by having two neighbors of the Maxwells, Mr. and Mrs. Carter Tiller, identify it as "similar" to one which disappeared from beneath their porch.

The implication was that Edith stole it to kill her father.

At the end of today's session, however, the ax was without value as evidence. True, Dr. G. T. Faust, who helped Dr. Tudor perform the autopsy, said that it "very possibly" could have been used, but Dr. Tudor had been much more emphatic in saying that it could not have been the weapon in the case. He even measured the ax to bear out his contention.

The name Lee Skeen cropped up again and again in today's testimony.

Skeen, a stocky mountaineer with a short-cropped mustache, is Edith's uncle by marriage, his wife being Trigg Maxwell's sister. He is determined that Edith shall go to the penitentiary, so much so that he is paying Attorney Vickers, one of the best criminal lawyers in the lonesome pine country, to assist young Commonwealth's Attorney Greear.

It came out today that Skeen also hired Dr. Tudor and Dr. Faust to perform the autopsy on Maxwell.

Dr. A. G. Hicks, the coroner for Wise County, was not even consulted about the autopsy. He is be-

"God Bless You All!——God Save the King!"

At long last I am able to say a few words of my own. I have never wanted to withhold anything, but until now it has not been constitutionally possible for me to speak. A few hours ago I discharged my last duty as King and Emperor and now, that I have been succeeded by my brother, the Duke of York, my first words must be to declare my allegiance to him. This I do with all my heart.

You all know the reasons which have impelled me to renounce the throne, but I want you to understand that in making up my mind I did not forget the country or the empire which as Prince of Wales and lately as King I have for 25 years tried to serve, but you must believe me when I tell you that I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the support of the woman I love, and I want you to know that the decision I have made has been mine and mine alone. This was a thing I had to judge entirely for myself.

The other persons, those nearly concerned, have tried to the last to persuade me to take a different course. I have made this most serious decision of my life only upon the single thought of what would in the end be best for all. This decision has been made less difficult to me by the foreknowledge that my brother with his long training in the public affairs of this country and with his fine qualities will be able to take my place forthwith without interruption or injury to the life and progress of the empire.

And he had one blessing, enjoyed by so many of you and not bestowed on me, a happy home with his wife and children.

During these hard days I have been comforted by her majesty my mother and by my family. The ministers of the crown and most particularly Mr. Baldwin, the prime minister, have always treated me with full consideration. There has never been any constitutional difference between me and them and between me and Parliament. Following the constitutional tradition of my father, I should have never allowed any such issue to arise.

Ever since I was Prince of Wales and later on when I occupied the throne, I have been treated with the greatest kindness by all classes of the people wherever I have lived or journeyed throughout the empire. For that I am very grateful. I now quit altogether public affairs and I lay down my burden. It may be some time before I return to my native land, but I shall always follow the fortunes of the British race and empire with profound interest and if at any time in the future I can be found of service to his majesty in a private station I shall not fail. And now we all have a new King.

I wish him and you, his people, happiness and prosperity with all my heart. God bless you all, God save the King.

Leaves Portsmouth for Unknown Port After Last Dinner With the New King and Dowager Queen.

HAILS BROTHER AS GEORGE VI IN MESSAGE ON AIR TO EMPIRE

Mrs. Simpson Hears Broadcast, Weeps; Commons Approves Change in Crown in 2 Hours, 5 Votes Opposing.

Developments as England Changes Monarchs.

Edward Windsor, who renounced the throne of the British Empire for the love of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, sailed from England today after bidding his former subjects farewell in a radio speech.

Earlier Parliament passed a bill of abdication and the accession of the Duke of York as George VI was approved.

The Irish Free State government passed an amendment to its constitution removing England's King from the dominion's internal affairs.

At Cannes, France, where Mrs. Simpson took refuge during the crisis, it was said she and Edward would not meet until her divorce decree becomes final in April.

Edward Sails Aboard Destroyer.

Special Dispatch to The Washington Post.

London (Saturday), Dec. 12.—David Edward Windsor left his home land under cloak of darkness today on a destroyer bound for an unannounced port and exile a few hours after he had said farewell to the regretful empire he had ruled.

The former King Edward VIII told the greatest radio audience that ever had listened to one man that he could not wear Britain's crown without "the woman I love." He sailed from Portsmouth Naval Base at 1:50 a. m.

After his dramatic radio farewell to his subjects, Edward dined with the new King, George VI, the former Duke of York, the Queen mother and other members of the royal family, then slipped away to Portsmouth.

Down on the sunny Riviera Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson sat by her radio and heard the former ruler of the world's greatest empire explain that he renounced his throne because he intended to marry her.

Destination Remains a Secret.

The destination of the destroyer bearing Edward to alien soil where he will make a new life for himself was unknown last night. He was aboard either the Fury or the Enchantress, which left Portsmouth under full steam.

David Edward Windsor's final hours in London began when members of the House of Windsor held a farewell dinner just before His Majesty went before the microphone to address a waiting world and a breathless empire.

Because the hour for his farewell address was nearing, the closing courses of the dinner had to be hurried.

Introduced as Prince Edward.

Then the voice of Sir John Reith, director of the British Broadcasting Co., said simply:

"His Royal Highness, Prince Edward."

Before the broadcast Edward had been consulted as to what title should be used when he was introduced. It had been agreed to call him Prince Edward.

His position, it was said, was that he had been born a prince, and that he was one still. His abdication affected nothing but his kingship.

A movement was afoot today to have a dukedom conferred

Young Bandits Admit Attempt To Rob Bank

Three youths, who were being held by Baltimore police last night after allegedly signing confessions admitting to the attempted holdup of the bank at Brandywine, Md., were to be returned to Upper Marlboro, Md., today to face trial.

Arrested yesterday, the youths were identified as John R. Mason, jr., 21; Carl Harmon, 20, and Thomas Long, 19, all residents of Glen Burnie, Md.

Quoting from the confessions, Lieut. A. T. Conner of the State police said the trio selected the bank of Brandwine as an "easy place to knock off." He said they had planned to use the money "to go to New York to have a good time for a week."

The youths had been delivering coal in the Brandywine section, according to police, and were planning to use part of the money to "buy a tractor and trailer and go into the hauling business."

Harmon and Long were riding on a coal truck near Harrisburg, Pa., when arrested by Pennsylvania State police.

According to the confessions, Mason admitted shooting William T. McPherson, 65-year-old cashier, as he plunged through a door to sound the burglar alarm.

At Casualty Hospital last night McPherson's condition was said to be improved.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie said yesterday the case against the three youths would be presented to the Grand Jury when it reconvenes at Upper Marlboro next Wednesday.

Post to Stage Benefit Today For Yule Toys

Santa's Assistants Report Excellent Progress in Annual Campaign.

Championing a Merry Christmas for every youngster in the District, Santa Claus's army last night reported progress on all fronts.

Led by a band of stage and screen stars from Loew's Capitol Theater, the regular forces are launching a major attack this morning at a special Christmas Toy matinee. Admission to the performance, specially arranged for children, will be a new toy or doll for The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund. The show will start at 9:30 a. m., with doors open half an hour earlier.

From Peoples Drug Stores throughout the city, where special collection boxes for Christmas gifts are located, came the encouraging news that generous Washingtonians are supplying Santa Claus with toys, dolls and games for ammunition.

Transport divisions, utilizing Terminal taxicabs, reported a steady stream of gifts—both old and new—flowing into the Christmas Workshop and Santa Claus Center at 1524 L street northwest. And warm-hearted contributors continued to call Decatur 5130 to arrange for free delivery of gifts that cannot be left in person.

At G. H. Q., Room 101 in The Post Building, 1337 E street northwest, a collection of toys, dolls and games was accumulating. Most encouraging, however, was the steady stream of nickels, dimes and even pennies that filled the cash contributions box in the lobby of The Post Building. Small and large gifts together pushed the Toy and Doll Fund over the $250 mark by the middle of the afternoon.

One discordant note was sounded

Berry Suggests Law to Match Terms of NRA

Co-ordinator Asks Passage of Measure; Jobless Ranks Decrease.

By Felix Bruner.

Enactment by Congress of a new law closely resembling the NRA was advocated yesterday by the Council for Industrial Progress, headed by George L. Berry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation.

At the same time, the American Federation of Labor issued a revised unemployment estimate greatly reducing previous estimates of the number of persons out of work.

The new A. F. of L. statement declared that there were 2,302,000 more persons at work in industry last October than in October, 1935. This reduced the estimate of unemployed to 9,147,000, the lowest figure given by the labor organization since the depression became serious.

Further gains in November were indicated, bringing unemployment figures down to a new low.

"Trade union figures," said the Federation, "for November show 10.7 per cent of the membership unemployed, as compared with 11 per cent in October. This is a small gain, but it is far more significant than its size. Employment rarely gains in November and the gain this year shows that strong business advance has kept many at work who normally would have lost their jobs with the coming of the winter season."

The Berry council recommended the following:

1. Enactment by Congress of a model fair competition act prohibiting as unfair competition any act or conduct which is characterized by fraud, deceit, misrepresentation, bad faith or oppression, or which

Grayson Takes Post as Chief For Inaugural

Red Cross Head Says Plans Wait Roosevelt Return From Buenos Aires.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who was chairman of the last Presidential inauguration to be held on March 4, will act in the same capacity for the first January 20 inaugural.

He announced his acceptance of President Roosevelt's invitation yesterday following a White House conference with Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant secretary to the President.

Acceding to Mr. Roosevelt's urgent request that he again be chairman of the Inaugural Committee, the American Red Cross head declared detailed arrangements for the quadrennial event will not be made until the President returns to Washington. Homeward bound from Buenos Aires aboard the cruiser Indianapolis, he is expected to arrive early next week.

The main question to be decided is whether the second inaugural shall be simple, as the President suggested before his departure for South America, or on a grand scale, as many have demanded. The answer must await a conference between Mr. Roosevelt and himself, Admiral Grayson said.

Appointment of committee members and construction of the Court of Honor on the Capitol steps also will be held in abeyance, as well as the selection of committee headquarters.

Fair weather is assured for the first January 20 inaugural in the Nation's history, Admiral Grayson joked, because the almanac says so.

Rebels Launch Madrid Attack On New Front

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Dec. 11.—Fascist besiegers of Madrid tonight launched a new attack on the Guadalajara front in another effort to smash their way into the capital.

Heavy fighting was reported in that sector, and the government threw reserves to the defense of Guadalajara, 35 miles northeast of Madrid.

The insurgents, meanwhile, jabbed at the line along the western edge of the city, seeking an opening. Government and Fascist batteries roared in a long-range duel.

In northern Sturias, along the Bay of Biscay shore, the government asserted its forces and begun a new offensive, nearly surrounding the important city of Oviedo, now in Fascist hands. The insurgents suffered heavy losses as the Socialist administration's militiamen seized several towns, said the official announcement.

After almost five weeks of siege, newspapers in the capital asserted, the Fascist position was steadily growing hopeless.

They declared Gen. Francisco Franco, insurgent commander in chief, was lost unless he should receive reinforcements.

Louis De-la-Pre, correspondent of the Paris Soir, wounded when a French plane was shot down, died in a hospital.

Andre Chateau, correspondent of the Havas News Agency, wounded at the same time, was reported improved.

Mrs. Simpson Hears Ex-King Speak On Radio in Secluded French Villa

By the Associated Press.

Cannes, France, Dec. 11.—The voice of former King Edward VIII spoke out of a radio tonight in the Villa Lou Viei, where the woman for whom he renounced his throne listened. But secrecy surrounded the emotions of Wallis Warfield Simpson, for whom David Windsor's words to his empire held most meaning.

The only direct information came from Lord Brownlow, the former King's gentleman-in-waiting.

"The King's voice," he said, "was heard at the villa as it was heard everywhere else. There is nothing further to say."

After the broadcast rumors spread through Cannes that Mrs. Simpson, on hearing the former King's tender reference to her as "the woman I love," was overcome with emotion.

Villa in Cold Mist.

Darkness and a cold mist shrouded the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers as the abdicated King spoke. Through the haze lights could be seen through the drawn curtains of the living-room windows. Other lights were switched on and off elsewhere in the villa from time to time.

Hundreds of Cannes' residents, after hearing the farewell over their own radios, walked or drove to the hill-top villa.

For a long time they stood shivering in the cold on the wet road, watching the villa and discussing the message of the former King to those who knew him as Edward VIII.

But they were too far away to observe the emotions of the secluded woman who played a leading role in the drama which changed the rulers of an empire.

About a half hour after the radio message had been broadcast Lord Brownlow and Rogers came out of the guarded villa. Both looked worn and haggard.

Lord Brownlow Speaks.

After a long discussion with Rogers at the villa gate, Lord Brownlow said the broadcast had been heard. Both Rogers' and Brown-

Ireland Passes Act for Liberty In Home Rule

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, Irish Free State, Dec. 11.—In the only land where tonight Edward VIII still was King, the Free State Parliament pushed to final passage a bill abolishing the office of governor general, King's representative.

Thus, the Free State made itself in effect independent of Britain in the conduct of internal affairs although President Eamon De Valera made clear that there would be no break from the Empire for the time being.

De Valera planned to present to the Dail tomorrow legislation ratifying the accession of King George VI, but without that legislation tonight Edward still was technically King.

Henceforth, under the bill to be presented tomorrow, the British King's name will be used only in the conduct of foreign affairs of the Free State.

Governor General Donal-Buckley was expected quickly to sign into law his own official "death warrant," enacted by the Dail tonight, passing to De Valera the duties he had performed in the name of the King.

Bluntly announcing "the government policy wants ultimately to see all of Ireland republic," De Valera asserted he would not take advantage of Edward's abdication to declare it now.

Denies Slap at Britain.

"I am not trying to have a slap at Britain," he said. "I do not want to injure Britain. This bill is our own affair and Britain has no right to interfere in our private affairs."

The measure was passed finally, 80 to 56, after an earlier test vote overrode Labor opposition.

The test vote, won by the government 71 to 53, was on a government motion to invoke rules to hasten passage of the constitutional measure.

Criticizes Haste.

To Cosgrave's question whether De Valera intended to sever all relations with the British commonwealth of nations and whether he had consulted other members of that commonwealth, the Irish President replied he had informed the British government of his intentions, but had not had time to consult dominion leaders.

"Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa have agreed to certain action in the present position," De Valera said. "But the Free State government was not prepared to give assent to the idea that the British Parliament could legislate for the Free State."

The Free State would remain in the commonwealth, De Valera said, but would limit its use of the King's name to foreign affairs. Even continuance of the monarch's name in accrediting Free State ministers would be dropped, he indicated, if other autonomous dominions did likewise.

The President would take over functions of Gov. Gen. Donal Buckley except that of signing of bills and dissolving of Parliament—duties which would be designated to the Dail speaker.

Death Announced Of Mrs. E.B. Akeley

Announcement was received in Alexandria yesterday of the death at noon of Mrs. Eliza Bland Cox Akeley, the wife of the Rev. Tom Gibbs Akeley, at her home in Gardiner, Maine. She was the daughter of Gilbert J. Cox, of Alexandria, and besides her father and husband, is survived by two young sons, Tom Cox and Robert Akeley; a brother, Gilbert J. Cox, jr., of Alexandria; two sisters, Miss Sarah B. Cox, of Alexandria, and Mrs. F. Eric Bloy, of La Jolla, Calif.

The funeral will be held on Monday at her home in Gardiner.

Funeral of Tuan Chi-Jui Kept Orderly by Police

Peiping (Saturday), Dec. 12 (AP).—Thousands of Chinese jammed the streets tonight at the beginning of an elaborate three-day funeral ceremony for Tuan Chi-Jui, World War premier, moved by mixed emotions of reverence and hate. Students had announced demonstrations against the late premier, whom many regarded as a traitor to their country, but abandoned their plans when police, armed with riot guns, swarmed the city.

Council of Churches Closes Biennial Meet

Asbury Park, N. J., Dec. 11 (AP).—Opposition to the United States Government's armament program and a plea for decisive pacifist action today closed the three-day biennial meeting of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The representatives of 23 Protestant denominations adopted after long discussion a resolution refusing their "moral consent" to what it said was the Government's program to spend one billion dollars on the Army and Navy.

Remington-Rand Loses Labor Plea Extension

Cincinnati, Dec. 11 (AP).—Remington-Rand, Inc., today lost a motion for an extension of time in which to prepare its reply to Government charges that it violated the Wagner labor relations act.

Trial Examiner Charles A. Wood scored the company for "dilatory tactics" and transferred the case to the National Labor Relations Board, at Washington.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

OBVIOUSLY much of the current discussion about unemployment and other economic problems still confronting the country springs from an ignorance of basic facts or has not been reorientated to take into consideration the rapid progress toward industrial recovery taken in the last few months.

Thus we have organized labor still talking about the necessity for a 30-hour week. We recently read the contention of the WPA Administrator that the country must become reconciled to a permanent unemployment problem. We hear proposals for increased wages in industry, even though the American Federation of Labor itself finds that the cost of living recently has not outridden wage increases.

Advocates of such proposals look at the single fact that there remains in the country an unemployed army of from 4,000,000 to 9,000,000 persons, variously estimated on differing classifications. They ignore or skip lightly over the evidence, becoming more abundant every day, that adoption of their proposals would create more difficulties than they cured.

Raise wages and thus the workers will have more purchasing power, they assert, ignoring the fact that increased wages means increased prices and a much reduced purchasing power for those who did not enjoy corresponding wage increases.

Reduce the hours of the work week and we shall absorb the unemployed, they assert, ignoring again the fact that this would result in diminished purchasing power and eventually less employment. Specific illustrations may be used to support the feasibility of such proposals, but they cannot be supported as Nation-wide policies.

All the possible light which can be thrown on this situation is desirable. Consequently the remarks of Dr. Harold G. Moulton, of the Brookings Institution, before the Congress of American Industry have value. Having directed Brookings' monumental study of the cause of the depression and the road to "Income and Economic Progress," Dr. Moulton is well qualified to speak.

He disagrees with the contention that the unemployment problem is insoluble without the development of new industries. He denounces the suggestion that the shortened work week or general wages increases is the solution. He maintains that all the Nation's existing man power and productive plants are needed simply to restore the customary comforts and conveniences of life to the American population as a whole.

"Although we have emerged from the depths of the depression," Dr. Moulton asserted, "we are still far below the level of production and national income existing in 1929. Industrial production is still 10 per cent below the level of 1929, notwithstanding a 5 per cent increase in population. On a per capita basis we are, therefore, well below the former levels of production and—it follows—of consumption. To repair the economic damages wrought by the depression and to restore predepression standards of production and living will require a vast expansion of productive activity during the next few years.

"In the durable goods industries we would have to produce at the rate of approximately $33,000,000,000 annually from 1937 to 1941 to re-establish per capita production (and consumption) on the predepression plane. Our actual production of durable goods in 1936 was only about $21,000,000,000, while the 1925-29 average was only about $25,000,000,000.

"What would such an expansion of production over present levels mean in terms of employment? It would require the full-time work of from 8,000,000 to 9,000,000 additional laborers. At the same time a considerable increase in output would also be necessary in the field of non-durable goods if we are to restore the 1929 per capita level of output. Hence the production requirements on the basis of present working hours are more than sufficient to absorb the entire volume of existing unemployment."

Dr. Moulton held that further reductions in working hours might bring about a serious labor shortage in carrying out a program essential to restoration of a satisfactory standard of living. Schemes for reducing working hours in proportion to increasing efficiency would result, he contended, in permanently freezing on existing levels the volume of production and hence of consumption.

But what is the answer? How can the log-jam of unemployment be broken and forces set in motion which will bring about a rise in the standard of living for all Americans? Governmental policies may be a factor, but more important is the course pursued by industry.

"The standard of living of wage-earners," asserted Dr. Moulton, "can be raised only by increasing the spread between wages and prices. Improvement in the ratio of wages to prices depends fundamentally upon increasing the efficiency of production. Only inconsequential increases in wages can be achieved by trenching upon profits. The primary requirement for an improvement in the wage-price ratio is increased productive output through the acceleration of technical advances, improved management, increased labor efficiency, etc. Any practices or policies that tend to work in this direction are sound, and any that work in the opposite direction are economically unsound."

Party Warned By Buchanan Against Blocs

'Wise Leadership,' End to Tight Rules Sought by Texas Member.

By the Associated Press.

A call for "wise leadership" of the topheavy Democratic majority in the House, to prevent its splitting into warring blocs, was sounded yesterday by Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, of the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

The man responsible for steering through the House measures appropriating billions every year said he viewed the record Democratic strength with "apprehension."

"Much depends on the leadership if we are to avoid the formation of blocs," he added in an interview. "I refer to both Presidential and House leadership, from the Speaker down through the keymen on the committees."

Hopes to Avoid Blocs.

A "brutal" and cocksure course, Buchanan said, might cause groups with divergent interests to align against one another.

"I sincerely hope this will not happen," said the gray-haired appropriations chief.

Buchanan contended "gag" rules should be unnecessary in the forthcoming session, although he approved such tactics when necessary to carry out administration plans. "Gag" rules usually restrict discussion and amendment of legislation.

"With the Democratic Party having more than two-thirds of the House membership," Buchanan continued, "I believe there should not be a single rule adopted at the coming session containing anything but a statement that a piece of legislation is in order or, possibly, some limitation of debate.

"What I say is that if a bill is so objectionable or so lacking in merit it cannot command a majority of votes under such circumstances, it should not be passed."

Now engaged in getting appropriation measures ready for Congress soon after it convenes January 5, he expressed belief "an economical government under a republic is impossible.

"However, he said, "the question is whether this defect is not preferable to the evils of some other form of government."

Farm Bureau Asks Retention Of Price Level

New National Policy Voted by Federation Meeting in Pasadena.

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 11.—The American Farm Bureau Federation resolved tonight to use every effort to maintain price levels of farm products in line with the American standard of wages and living to assure agriculture its "rightful share of national income."

The resolution set forth that such a national farm policy must provide:

For restoring and maintaining a high degree of soil fertility;

A schedule of agricultural tariffs to protect the domestic market from competing imports that hold or force American prices below parity levels;

Reduction of excessive industrial tariffs to equalize price levels of industrial and agricultural comomdities;

Aggressive efforts to develop new domestic farm products;

State and Federal marketing agreements;

The holding of surpluses from market channels in the most economical way under a system of Federal loans based on warehousing or trust receipts.

On monetary policies, the organization recommended that the authority given the President be extended until such time as a monetary authority can be created.

Liberal administration of farm loans—especially loans to worthy young men and efficient tenants to enable them to become farm owners—was asked in another resolution, which insisted upon a rate of 3½ per cent interest on farm mortgages.

Staff Prepares Home in Palace For New King

Changes in Household Are Due From Edward's Bachelor Setup.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 11.—King George VI plunged quickly today into his new tasks of rulership by starting to put his house in order.

Officials of the royal household streamed into "the palace with a number," 145 Piccadilly, to discuss with the monarch the changes necessary in his more pretentious new home, Buckingham Palace.

One of the visitors was the Earl of Ancaster, who will be lord great chamberlain in the new reign.

The earl, who is 69, married in 1905 Eloise, daughter of the late W. L. Breese, of New York. His heir, Lord Willoughby de Eresby, married Phyllis Astor, daughter of Viscount Astor and his Virginia-born wife, Lady Nancy Astor.

There are three joint hereditary great chamberlains, the Earl of Ancaster, Marquess of Cholmondeley (pronounced "Chumley"), and Marquess of Lincolnshire.

Proxy Now Serves.

The latter marquessate, however, became extinct with the death of the marquess in 1928. At that time, the late King George V appointed Viscount Lewisham to execute the office of lord great chamberlain. Lord Lewisham is a son of the Earl of Dartmouth by the latter's marriage to a daughter of the first Marquess of Lincolnshire.

Upon the death of King George, the Marquess of Cholmondeley, who holds the post in alternate reigns with either of the other joint hereditary great chamberlains, took office.

The lord great chamberlain's duties mainly involve control of the Palace of Westminster, particularly the House of Lords, as well as an important part in the coronation ceremony and in the openings of Parliament.

Men who apparently are marked out for important positions in the new King's entourage include Sir Eric Mieville, who was private secretary to the Duke of York, and Rear Admiral Sir Basil Brooke, comptroller of his household.

Changes Expected.

It has been taken for granted that since there is now a queen on the throne again, changes are bound to take place in the bachelor household of Edward VIII in Buckingham Palace.

The post of mistress of the robes, which was held by the Duchess of Devonshire when Queen Mary was in Buckingham Palace, is expected to be revived.

On the other hand, the post of master of the robes which was created by Edward VIII and awarded to Lord Colebrooke, presumably will lapse.

It was not immediately apparent whether the new King will recall some of the advisers of his late father, but court circles expressed interest in the fact that Lord Wigram was one of the callers at 145 Piccadilly.

Navy Announces Selection Board

A line selection board will meet January 11 at the Navy Department to select officers in the grade of lieutenant commander for promotion to commander, Secretary of the Navy Swanson announced yesterday. Rear Admiral Harris Laning, commandant of the Third Naval District, New York, will head the board.

Other members will be Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, chairman of the general board; Rear Admiral A. E. Watson, member of the general board; Rear Admiral H. L. Brinser, commander of Cruiser Division No. 4, Scouting Force.

Suspended Term Imposed on Heap

Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Court, yesterday imposed a suspended sentence of four months to a year on Warren L. Heap, former assistant reviewer in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Several days ago he pleaded "nolo contendere" to a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government by obtaining reduction in a proposed income tax assessment.

Explaining that Heap played but a minor part in the alleged offense, Justice Gordon said that he had been sufficiently punished by the loss of his Government position. Heap, 47 years old, lives in Chevy Chase, Md.

The indictment charged Heap with conspiring with Guy S. Burtis, former NRA employe, to advise W. A. Ellis, a Denver mining company official, concerning a then pending income tax assessment of $208,000 against Ellis' company.

Family Weeps Over Farewell To Royal Exile

Queen Mother Shows Grief More Than Others at Sad Dinner Party.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Windsor, England, Dec. 11.—Members of Britain's royal family burst into unabashed tears tonight when they bade farewell to Edward Windsor, who ignored their pleadings and renounced his crown for the love of an American woman.

The family, tragic in its sorrow, gathered at a dinner party in the royal lodge deep in the heart of Windsor Great Park for what was perhaps the last meeting of the family circle that would be attended by Edward.

Tonight he sailed from England into exile.

Queen Mother Pitiful.

Most pitiful of all was the Queen Mother, Mary, who had hoped that Edward's reign would be as long and unblemished as that of his father, George V.

The Queen Mother, last to arrive at the lodge because her limousine was delayed by a London traffic crush, showed the strain and sorrow that came with the crushing of her hopes in her eldest son.

During the dinner she was in tears several times, as were the other women, the new Queen Elizabeth, the Princess Royal and the aged Countess of Athlone.

The royal cars wound over the gravel paths of the park toward the lodge, which was the private residence of the new King, George VI, while he was Duke of York.

King George VI, who went to Fort Belvedere, 7 miles away, to bring Edward into the saddened family circle, returned with him and the Duke of Kent shortly before 8 p. m.

Dinner Party Delayed.

The farewell dinner was to have started at 8 o'clock, but was held up because of the Queen Mother's delay. This cut short the tearful farewells because of Edward's radio broadcast to his former subjects at 10 p. m. from Windsor Castle.

It was announced at Buckingham Palace in London that "the new King and the former King dined at the royal lodge, Windsor, tonight in company with Queen Mary. The Duke of Gloucester, the Princess Royal, Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone."

Colorado Women Form Rescue Squad at Mines

Lafayette, Colo., Dec. 11 (AP).—Women of northern Colorado's coal camps—scene of many tragedies—organized today in a well-trained rescue squad to aid their men, if disaster strikes the mines.

Thomas Allen, Colorado coal mine inspector, who presented the women with first-aid diplomas, told them their "disaster aid" crew was the first to be recognized by the United States Bureau of Mines.

Note's Wording To King Upsets Protocol Unit

Beneath the outward calm of the Protocol Division of the State Department there seethed considerable unofficial agony yesterday, it was learned.

The protocol section, the department's Emily Post bureau, is charged with formulation of official documents of state, such as condolences on the deaths of rulers or state figures in other countries, and the penning of notes of welcome on the accession to power of new rulers.

The agony was over the format and wording of a note to the present King of England and Emperor of India, George VI.

To Be Signed by President.

The note, which is to be signed by the President, cannot very well express condolences over the abdication of Edward VIII.

Neither can it express too full a measure of gladness at the accession of the Duke of York to the throne.

A shade too much in either direction would be bad taste, it is held, and the exact wording must tread the most delicate of diplomatic tightropes, for statesmen, and especially bureaus of protocol, are notoriously quick to take offense at the slightest seeming understatement or overstatement.

Still Not Notified.

Officially, the local protocol gentleman said only yesterday that they had not been notified of the action in England. Radios carefully shut off, newspapers folded with equal care to show only the comic sections, dispatches carefully selected from other sections of the world—only these were visible on protocol desks. Officially they have not heard of the abdication.

When they hear of the abdication and accession officially, they will officially spring forthwith into action and the division will hum with activity, the walls resounding with groans of gentlemen chewing pencils and cursing politely. Then, they said, they will prepare the note.

In the meantime, it is understood first drafts have all been denounced as unacceptable.

News of Right To Crown Kept From Elizabeth

Knows Parents Are Rulers of Britain, However, as She Plays at Home.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 11.—Princess Elizabeth, 10, went to sleep tonight knowing her father, the Duke of York, had become King George VI, but her royal parents refused to tell her she is next in line to the throne.

The golden-haired princess spent the day playing in her gardens at No. 145 Piccadilly, not knowing and unmindful that some day she may be Queen Elizabeth.

Elizabeth played with her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, 6. Both wore green coats over navy blue dresses, brown stockings and shoes and black gloves. They were hatless and their fair hair tossed as they ran.

Wave at Crowds.

Before entering the gardens they waved at the crowd from an upstairs window. Later Elizabeth appeared again when she accompanied the Countess Strathmore to the park gate leading to Hyde Park.

Princess Elizabeth was told her father and mother had become King and Queen after she asked: "What is happening to Uncle David!" Her lessons were curtailed one hour and the Princess knew "something very important" was happening.

p-VXQ

Their home in the fashionable Mayfair district was the scene of extraordinary activity during the day as callers and messengers stormed through the gates. Letters, telegrams and flowers conveyed to the new King and Queen the good wishes and respect of their subjects.

A Typical British Family.

When Edward signed his abdication bill, the four members of a fairly typical British family became Great Britain's royal family. Possessors of palaces and castles, of a $5,000,000 gold dinner service and art treasures that would stock museums.

It was learned the King's birthday Monday, when he becomes 41 years old, will not be observed with the traditional trooping of the colors with the horse guards' parade at Whitehall. It will be officially celebrated next June. The only official recognition of the birthday will be flying of flags from all public buildings and firing of a 21-gun royal salute.

It was unlikely the new King and Queen would take residence at Buckingham Palace for some time, although King George will follow Edward's custom by visiting the palace daily to transact state business. The royal family will spend Christmas with Queen Mary at Sandringham.

British Boys, Girls Told of Abdication In Radio Program

London, Dec. 11 (AP).—The boys and girls of Great Britain were told tonight the empire's objection to Wallis Warfield Simpson as wife of Edward VIII was "simply that she had two husbands living."

The "Children's Hour" of the British Broadcasting Co. carried the story of the romance of Edward and Mrs. Simpson, but lots of grown-ups listened, too, Commander Stephen King-Hall said.

Narrator King-Hall emphasized two facts: "1. The King never suggested marrying the lady in defiance of his ministers; 2, we have lost a King, the crown remains, the kingship is greater than the man who wears the crown, and, although it would be untruthful to say the British empire is not damaged, it is now our job to make good the damage done by rallying around the new King."

Red Cross Adds $15,000 To Philippines Relief

The American Red Cross yesterday sent an additional $15,000 to the Philippines chapter of the Red Cross to be used for the relief of victims of the December 2 typhoon, it was announced by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman.

The sum of $10,000 had been sent Thursday, the additional donation bringing the total amount transmitted to Manila to $25,000.

Direct Control Of Crops Seen As U. S. Policy

Leaders of Administration Show Growing Favor for Voided Law.

By the Associated Press.

There was mounting evidence yesterday that Administration leaders are shaping a long-time Federal farm program that will include direct crop control—once voided by the Supreme Court.

A survey made public by Federal agricultural economists yesterday said harvested acreage should be reduced by from 15,000,000 to 50,000,000 acres below the 1928-32 average. Added significance was attached to this report in view of the trend of the recently announced 1937 farm program and recent statements by Secretary Wallace and H. R. Tolley, the farm administrator.

Discussing demands of some farm leaders that the original AAA program of crop control and processing taxes be re-enacted, Secretary Wallace said this week that "good as that program was, we want to see it improved upon."

Essential Stated.

Wallace said an "essential" of national farm policy was "to keep the supply of farm products in line with domestic needs and foreign demand."

Administrator Tolley was even more direct. Under the present soil conservation act, enacted by Congress as a substitute for the outlawed AAA, he said soil conservation is the primary objective with crop control an incidental "by-product."

Agreeing with Wallace that return of normal weather would increase yields and force down farm prices, Tolley said "nothing less than direct and effective production control for specific commodities will suffice in such emergencies."

He conceded "legal difficulties" face future programs, but added: "If I understand the temper of farmers correctly, they are in no mood to let legalistic barriers and fine-spun interpretations keep them from moving equally with the large corporations in meeting Nation-wide problems of production and prices."

Yesterday's survey report said that any attempt to expand farm cultivation to the 365,000,000-acre average of 1928-32 "would result in a sharp decrease in agricultural income so long as the level of domestic purchasing power and foreign demand does not exceed that which is probable in the next few years."

Some Increase Wise.

Federal farm programs and droughts which reduced farm production in a period of industrial improvement, the survey said, boosted gross farm income from $5,400,000,000 in 1932 to an estimated $9,200,000,000 this year.

The condition of farm lands, the report continued, demands a shift of 20 to 30 million acres from soil-depleting to soil-conserving crops or other uses. This, it said, would prevent further erosion and would maintain soil fertility.

A. G. Black, head of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, signed the survey, which was conducted by his agency, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Soil Conservation Service, and the Resettlement Administration.

Lonergan Seeks to End Tax-Exempt Securities

By the Associated Press.

A constitutional amendment to halt the issuance of tax-exempt securities was proposed yesterday by Senator Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut.

As a preliminary, Lonergan planned to ask the forthcoming Congress to authorize the Treasury to tax income from future Federal bond issues.

His proposed constitutional amendment would permit the Federal Government to tax future issues of State securities, and give the States similar rights concerning Federal bonds.

Election of Presidents By Popular Vote Urged

By the Associated Press.

A proposal for a constitutional amendment, designed to lessen the chance a candidate receiving a minority of the popular vote might be elected President, was advanced yesterday by Representative Lea (Democrat), California.

The amendment would abolish Presidential electors, permit the people to vote directly for the Presidential candidates, and divide the vote among them in direct proportion to the popular vote.

League Pushes Step to Isolate Spanish Strife

Plan to Be Offered Today to Bar Foreign Troops, Arms Shipments.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Dec. 11.—League of Nations leaders moved tonight to swing the League's support behind the International Spanish non-intervention committee in the hope of preventing a European conflict growing out of the Spanish civil war.

Members of the Council said a resolution, to be introduced tomorrow, would support the committee's plan to inaugurate a rigid system of International supervision in order to keep foreign troops and war materials out of Spain.

Pierre Vienot, French delegate to the Council, stimulated the move with an assertion that large groups of foreign soldiers are fighting on Spanish battlefields "and there is reason to fear that soldiers from all over Europe may later be facing one another in Spain."

Julio Alvarez del Vayo, Madrid Foreign Minister, also told the Council an international struggle was being fought in Spain and said "an international conflagration daily becomes more of a menace."

Viscount Cranborne, British parliamentary under-secretary for foreign affairs, declared the "hands-off-Spain" pact had been violated in favor of both sides, with government and Fascist forces increased "to an alarming proportion."

The British delegate, who took the place of the absent Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, said Britain and France would try to arrange an armistice.

U. S. Embassy Notice.

Madrid (Saturday), Dec. 12 (U.P.).—The United States embassy posted notice early today that all United States citizens must be prepared to leave the capital this afternoon for Valencia.

The notice, published by Custodian Francisco Ugarte, said transportation had been arranged for those who wish to board a United States warship at Valencia Monday. Only 5 or 6 of 35 Americans are expected to take advantage of the offer.

It was understood Ugarte published the notice in anticipation of another rebel onslaught, reportedly Gen. Francisco Franco's "final drive" to capture the capital.

Operations along the Madrid front were practically halted by sub-zero weather. All sections of the capital were quiet during the early morning hours except for scattered rifle fire in the Moncloa and Rosales districts in the northwest section.

Loyalists Stage Raid.

Talavera, Spain, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—Loyalist planes today attacked Nationalist headquarters here in a surprise raid and dropped 20 bombs, killing two soldiers.

It was the sixth Loyalist air raid on Talavera in a fortnight and was carried out, the Nationalist general staff believed, in an effort to disrupt the morale of the insurgents before a general offensive can be launched against Madrid.

Sneezes Cured, Margaret Cleer Is Convalescing

Thirteen-year-old Mary Margaret Cleer will be leaving Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, cured of her sneezing, during the next few days, but she will be placed in a convalescents' home before being allowed to return to her parents in Fort Myer, Va.

The golden-haired child, after 10 days of quiet in the famed medical center, where she was taken by the Post, has stopped sneezing spasms which began in her school classroom October 6. She has begun to gain weight.

But the cause of the spells still is a mystery. Doctors have been unable after exhaustive tests and examinations to determine the source of her peculiar ailment.

However, it has been concluded by scientists that the sneezes somehow were related to her surroundings, since whenever she has been removed from her home and placed in a hospital, the spells abated. She previously spent 2 days in Children's Hospital here and the sneezings came to a stop, only to recommence later.

Johns Hopkins specialists hope that by reintroducing her to her home surroundings gradually, she will accustom herself to whatever it is there which makes her sneeze, and that through educational processes the psychological irritation can be overcome.

U. S. Signs Pact With Argentina, Brazil on Peace

Other Powers Hasten to Join Mutual Accord; 21 Expected to Agree.

the plan originally bore was removed, however, he said.

This change was made at the request of Argentina, which opposed giving the impression that a rigid, permanent organization was being established, in view of its desire to co-operate with the League of Nations.

Informed persons said the machinery proposed under the convention would not affect commitments of American members of the League.

Aranha declared the accord also safeguarded Brazil's three demands for nonintervention by one nation in the internal affairs of another, internal security, and external security.

Union Plan Included.

Observers believed the main points of Brazil's plan for union of the American republics against outside aggression were retained in the joint project.

Uruguay's project for a five-year inter-American tariff truce met what appeared tonight to be insurmountable barriers in a sub-committee of the inter-American conference.

Various sources asserted, after a meeting of the sub-committee on tariff and reciprocal trade, that the group agreed it was useless to try to get uniform consent to any resolution urging no increases in tariffs for a fixed period.

It was understood, however, a section of the sub-committee would be instructed to draft a general recommendation for reduction of tariff barriers and in favor of a general policy of bilateral trade treaties.

Court Losing Ground.

A proposal for creation of an inter-American court to judge international American disputes also appeared to be losing ground. Members of a committee considering the plan said unofficially it had met more opposition than support.

Among the new projects dropped into the conference hopper—which now contains about 100—was a Uruguayan plan to call a meeting of representatives of finance ministries and central banks to stabilize American currencies and abandon monetary restrictions such as control of foreign exchange.

Another new proposal—this one from Peru—would provide for a treaty under which the signatories would agree to refrain from diplomatic intervention in another country to collect debts.

Monroe Doctrine "Out."

By the United Press.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 11.—Reference to the Monroe Doctrine, which is disliked throughout Latin-America, will be excluded from the inter-American Peace Conference's neutrality convention, the United Press learned today.

The convention will include provisions for an arms embargo and is expected to embody the principal provisions of United States revised ideas on neutrality.

Reports that it would exclude any mention of the Monroe Doctrine came somewhat as a shock to those who expected the keystone of United States foreign policy in the Western Hemisphere to be extended to a multi-lateral declaration of all nations of the Americas. A "modernized" doctrine, including the principles of the 113-year-old United States "hands off" warning to nations outside the Americas, was discussed by leading statesmen at the conference and even was virtually proposed in several peace projects which provided for common defense of the American Continent against a foreign invader.

Speech a Puzzle.

In his address at Montevideo on December 3, just prior to ending his South American visit, President Roosevelt said the days of President Monroe are outmoded and predicted a "new era of friendship and confidence among the Americas." While he did not specifically mention the Monroe Doctrine, his listeners wondered whether he implied some possible change in United States foreign policy in the Americas.

Meanwhile, delegates continued intensive efforts to solve the Chaco question involving Paraquay and Bolivia. Although firing in their savage three-year war ended in June, 1933, diplomatic relations have not yet been re-established and final settlement of the dispute has been impossible so far.

Peace efforts, in which the inter-American Conference has joined forces with the Chaco Peace Conference, have been handicapped by the failure of Foreign Minister Juan Stefanich, of Paraguay, to attend the present parley. A new attempt has been made to get him to come to Buenos Aires, but no reply has been received yet.

The board of directors of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday appealed to Secretary Hull in Buenos Aires to advocate suffrage for Pan-American women.

WPA Seamstresses End City Hall Siege

Pleasantville, N. J., Dec. 11 (AP).—The WPA seamstresses who have held possession of the city council chamber for days walked out tonight, declaring the city had made it impossible for them longer to maintain their "siege."

They said they had obtained the promise of Edward Stephenson, Pleasantville Republican leader, that he would do all possible to assist them in restoring a WPA sewing project.

Hunger-Striker Forced To Eat in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Dec. 11 (AP).—The 15-day hunger strike of William H. Evans was halted unceremoniously today by jail officials who forced food down his throat—on the premise that the sheriff is charged with keeping prisoners from harming themselves.

Evans, 23, a writer from Ojai, Calif., began his strike when jailed on his divorced wife's charge that he took their six-year-old daughter forcibly from home.

Private Firms Seek to 'Freeze' TVA Activity

Injunction Asked to Stay Program Until After High Court Ruling.

By the United Press.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 11.—TVA attorneys fought tonight to block an injunction sought by 19 private utilities to "freeze" activities of the great "yardstick power" program until constitutionality of the New Deal's colossus can be determined.

After arguments that continued past 7:30 p. m., United States District Judge John J. Gore, former law partner of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, adjourned the hearing until 11 a. m. tomorrow. He instructed TVA counsel to prepare affidavits on the number of men and projects which would be affected by granting of the injunction.

The injunction move is supplementary to the board suit in which the 19 private companies, chiefly subsidiaries of Commonwealth & Southern, are seeking to invalidate the TVA on constitutional grounds.

Co-operatives Join Move.

By the injunction, the private operators hope to prevent further expansion of the yard-stick power program until the United States Supreme Court hands down a final and definitive decision on constitutionality of the New Deal's most monumental project.

Two small co-operatives joined forces with TVA in fighting the injunction, fearful that the restraining order would hamstring their own development.

They were the Middle Tennessee Electric Membership Corporation, and the North Georgia Membership Corporation. Stockton Cooke, representing Sheffield, Ala., sought to intervene in behalf of TVA, but withdrew his briefs after he was assured the projected injunction could have no reaction in the Sheffield territory.

Counsel Clashes.

Chief TVA Solicitor James Lawrence Fly and his assistant, James Lord O'Brian, led the fight for the Federal agency. Clashing with a battery of private utility attorneys headed by Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War during the Wilson Administration.

Terming the utilities' plea for an injunction "mere sophistry," Fly held the petition inconsistent since TVA's activities over a period of "three or four years" had brought no previous move for an injunction.

Monopoly Charged.

"This injunction would give them monopolistic control—the very situation the petition is aimed at," O'Brian said, adding that a restraining order "freezing" activities would mean instant dismissal of at least 650 men.

Raymond Jackson, of Cleveland, member of Baker's law firm, carried the brunt of argument for the private operators. Mere fact of existence of TVA competition in the field means "irreparable damage to these private enterprises with capital investments aggregating $900,000,000," he said.

"The duplication of physical facilities is in itself a damage to the value of our property, regardless of whether they take our customers," he said.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Margaret Tolson, pianist; Elizabeth Everett, soprano, (Lois Abernethy, accompanist), and Helen Turley, contralto, (Mrs. J. Horace Smithey, accompanist), in Barker Hall. Program: Kreisleriana (Schumann), Elsas Traum (Wagner), Die weise Rose (Robert Heger), The House That Jack Built (Sidney Homer), Die Allmacht (Schubert), Du bist die Ruh' (Schubert), Marias Wiegenlied (Max Reger).

One compliments Margaret Tolson upon her excellent reading of Robert Schumann's "Kreisleriana," a work which the majority of pianists seem to avoid as though it were abtruse and incomprehensible. She brought to her interpretation a keen sympathy for its emotional content, an intelligent perception of its intellectual undercurrents, and an understanding of its passages vitalized by humorous fantasy. It was as lucid and interesting a performance of the music as I have ever heard, because the playing was animated by sincere affection.

In most of Schumann's compositions can be traced the major influences upon his character: his love for Clara Wieck and his admiration for Jean Paul Friedrich Richter. In "Kreisleriana," these influences continue, while to them is added a third: his appreciation of that eccentric legal clerk, composed and fantastical romancer, Ernst Theodor Amadeus Hoffman. The music was a tribute to the critical essays published by Hoffman under the pseudonym of Johannes Kreisler, Kapellmeister; essays in which hte significance of Bach was analyzed before Mendelssohn focussed attention on that forgotten composer by conducting the "Matthew Passion," and in which the symphonies of Beethoven were discussed with a sharp and prophetic intuition.

A split personality, Schumann recognized an affinity between himself and Hoffman, who was capable of both the wildest flights of macabre imagination and the most penetrative insight into the philosophy of art. In the music of "Kreisleriana," Schumann identifies himself to a certain extent with that strange spirit, and the result is a unique admixture of fanciful excitement and meditative calm. Its eerie beauty is that of the borderland between the physical and the psychic planes.

Helen Turley's singing of Schubert and Reger was suffused with a moving earnestness that carried conviction. The simplicity and warmth of the vocalism left the impression that the songs came from her heart. Not so assured was Elizabeth Everett, whose pliable voice seemed somewhat timid in timbre.

Records of King's Talk By Stations Ruled Out

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—The farewell speech, as it was delivered today by the voice of the man introduced to millions of radio listeners as "Prince Edward," probably has been heard for the last time.

The government-controlled British Broadcasting Co. made a special request of co-operating networks to refrain from making recordings of the retiring King's farewell.

Trouble Flares In Ship Strike; Talks Reopen

Unions to Ask for Support in East; Peace Hopes Believed Gaining.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 11.—Trouble and dissent flared on widely separated maritime strike fronts today simultaneously with a union leader's announcement that long-stymied peace negotiations were about to start again.

Oregon's Gov. Charles H. Martin reported poultry growers were threatening to march on the Portland waterfront to unload a shipload of corn which striking longshoremen had declined to handle.

The Lykes Brothers-Ripley Steamship Co. announced in New Orleans it would attempt operations of its strikebound ships with "replacement workers." Company Vice President S. P. Truman said "we are now prepared to attempt to move our vessels in any way that is humanly possible."

Extends to Atlantic.

Western strikers extended to the Atlantic coast their campaign for wider support, announcing Harry Bridges, coast International Longshoremen's leader, would address mass meetings in New York and elsewhere appealing for action by Eastern unions.

Conferees on the Western shipowners' new peace formula indicated actual negotiations might get under way about the time Bridges would leave here for his Eastern

The Oregon Governor and Mayor J. K. Carson, of Portland, appealed to Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady to seek "action" from the central strike committee here in view of the poultry growers' threat.

Diaconate Rite Is Announced For Tomorrow

The Rt. Rev. F. D. Goodwin, D.D., bishop coadjutor of the Diocese of Virginia, will ordain Temple G. Wheeler, of Falls Church, to the diaconate in the Falls Church at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. He will be the first man to be ordained in the Falls Church since its founding. The candidate will be presented by the rector, the Rev. Watkins Leigh Ribble.

The Rev. George F. Mayo, D.D., superintendent of the Blue Ridge Industrial School, Green County, Va., will preach the sermon and deliver the charge to the candidate. The litany for ordinations will be read by the Rev. John G. Sadtler, of Falls Church.

Temple G. Wheeler, the son of Mrs. Edna Johnson Wheeler and the late Arthur M. Wheeler, is a native of Falls Church and lifelong member of historic The Falls Church. His father served on the vestry and taught the Bible class for 30 years. He received his training in the Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria, and in the DuBose Church Training School, Monteagle, Tenn.

For a time he worked in the diocesan mission field under direction of tomorrow's guest preacher, who is known throughout the Episcopal Church for his work in founding and developing the Blue Ridge Industrial School for underprivileged children.

Tomorrow evening Bishop Goodwin will pay his annual official visit to The Falls Church and will confirm a class of 12. Special music will be rendered by the choir.

Sheriff Arrested In Rail Bombings

Harrisburg, Ill., Dec. 11 (AP).—Federal officers, investigating rail bombings during the long drawn Illinois mine union dispute arrested Sheriff Earl Evans, of Saline County, today.

The county peace officer was taken in custody on a bench warrant signed by G. A. Stevens, a special Federal investigator from St. Louis, and released later on $10,000 bail.

Post Will Stage Big Show Today For Yule Toys

Santa's Helpers Report Good Progress in Annual Campaign.

by the internecine strife between Arthur Godfrey and Arch McDonald, WJSV announcers. Last week McDonald appealed to his listeners to send in dolls and toys and money to The Post Fund, and wagered that his own audience would be more responsive than Godfrey's listeners. Godfrey accepted the challenge and agreed that the loser would dance Pavlowa's "Dance of the Dying Swan" on the Capitol's stage at the matinee this morning.

Trucks of Toys.

McDonald precipitated a near revolution yesterday afternoon by appearing at The Post Building with a truck load of toys and dolls to be credited to his audience. Ten minutes later, tipped off by spies within the McDonald camp, Godfrey descended with an equally impressive array of gifts.

Both announcers disclaimed any intention of stuffing the ballot box, and both stood by the terms of the original agreement—that one of them would dance, in full ballet costume, at this morning's matinee.

The dancer's name continued to be unknown, however, with a special corps of accountants still laboring in counting the two piles of gifts. Further complications set in when several toys and dolls were found to be labeled "For Arch for Art's sake."

So both McDonald and Godfrey will appear at the theater this morning, no one knowing until the curtain rises who will be Pavlowa's "successor." Each announcer, however, has been training intensively for several days and both contenders for the ballet crown are reported in the pink of condition.

More Gifts Needed.

But additional recruits for the army are sorely needed, Commander Santa Claus announced. Every Washingtonian is a potential contributor in this campaign against a drab, joyless December 25 for the District's poorest children.

Toys and dolls—old or new—can be left at any Peoples Drug Store at Loew's Capitol, Columbia and Palace theaters, at The Post Building, or will be called for by a Terminal taxicab. Old toys and dolls can be repaired and repainted to look like new; everything sent in by generous readers will go directly into making this Christmas a merry one for every youngster.

Won't you help Santa Claus in his efforts to make one day a year a happy one throughout the District? A nickel or a dime—or a frayed and dilapidated toy—may mean a world of difference to one more underfavored child this Christmas morning.

Big Program Offered.

The complete program of this Christmas Toy Matinee at Loew's Capitol this morning at 9:30:

Music by Loew's Boys Band, Capt. McKenzie conducting.

Our Gang in "Pinch Singers."

Popeye in "What, No Spinach."

Walt Disney's cartoon, "Robber Kitten."

"Dance of the Dying Swan," by either Arthur Godfrey or Arch McDonald.

Radio Announcer Surveys Gifts

Arch McDonald, WJSV announcer, surveys gifts sent into The Post Toy and Doll Fund by his radio audience. Shortly afterwards Arthur Godfrey, who maintains his WJSV listeners will send in even more, appeared with an equally impressive accumulation of toys and dolls.

Many Ships Downed En Route to Races

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—Murky skies north of here opened enough to let some entries through for a few stock plane races today in the All-American air meet.

With hundreds of planes, Miami-bound before ceiling-zero weather closed in, still stranded at scattered airports, two score pilots kept the crowd interested.

The first competitive event, an invitation dash for eight light stock (Taylor cub) craft, was captured by Mike Murphy, of Kokomo, Ind. The Argentine Trophy went to Dewane L. Wallace, of Wichita, Kans., at 165.13 miles an hour for the 25-mile, five-lap course.

3 Shoe Unions Plan to Merge With C.I.O. Help

Labor Officials Announce Decision to Organize 300,000 Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Officials of three shoe unions announced plans yesterday to combine their organizations with the help of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

William B. Mahan, general organizer of the United Shoe and Leather Workers, said his union would join with the Shoe Workers Protective Union and the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen of Brockton, Mass., in an effort to organize more than 300,0000 workers in the shoe industry.

The principal shoe centers this proposed plan would embrace are in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rochester, N. Y., Milwaukee, Chicago, Belleville, Ill.; Cincinnati, St. Louis and Pontiac, Mich.

Mahan said the three unions now represented a total membership of 40,000 workers.

The principal objectives of the amalgamation, he added, are establishment of standard prices, equalization of hours of labor, and an attempt to prevent migration of the industry from one municipality to another.

Among those taking part in the conference at which the plan was evolved were John P. Brophy, director of the C. I. O.; Mahan and James J. Mitchell, of Lynn, Mass., general secretary of the United Shoe and Leather Workers Union, and Ernest Henry, general organizer for the United; Daniel Collins, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen of Brockton, Mass., and John Nolan, president of the Shoe Workers Protective Union.

The Record Quits Publishers' Group

Philadelphia, Dec. 11 (AP).—The Record resigned its membership in the American Newspaper Publishers' Association today in protest against what it called the "unfair attitude" of that organization toward the American Newspaper Guild.

The board of directors of the publishers' association in resolutions adopted Thursday urged its members not to bargain with representatives of the guild, which is a union representing reporters, photographers, and other editorial employes.

J. David Stern, publisher of the Record, in the letter of resignation declared:

"We are resigning because your association, founded to benefit and strengthen the daily newspapers of this country, has in the last few years so conducted itself as to lower American newspapers in popular esteem, to endanger the freedom of the press, and has even gone so far as to urge its members to breach the law."

Antietam Committee To Organize Monday

A commission appointed to make plans for the celebration of the Battle of Antietam in Maryland next fall will meet Monday to organize formally, according to the Associated Press.

Widow of Chief Of the Census In 1916 Dies

Mrs. A. P. Gordon-Cumming Succumbs at O Street Residence.

Mrs. Alastair Penrose Gordon-Cumming, the former Miss Frances Campbell Eames, died at her residence, 2032 O street northwest, yesterday afternoon.

She spent most of her life in Washington, and lived here between extended visits abroad. She was the daughter of Charles Eames, onetime Minster to Venezuela and distinguished lawyer. Her mother was Frances Campbell, daughter of Judge James Campbell, of New York, surrogate of the City of New York for 20 years.

Her husband, the late Alastair Gordon-Cumming, was a native of Altyre, Scotland, the son of Sir William Gordon-Cumming. He was head of the Census Bureau here for many years before his death, which occurred two decades ago.

Mrs. Gordon-Cumming leaves no immediate descendants, her only daughter, Margaret, having died years ago while in school in Dresden. Her nearest relatives are Mrs. William Crawford Johnson, of Frederick, Md., and Miss Maud Campbell Gouverneur, of Washington, who are cousins.

Funeral services will be held at the Church of the Epiphany Monday at 10:30 a. m., followed by burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

William M. Kal Dies in Florida Of Heart Attack

Father of Capital Man Was Ill Short Time; Rites to Be Tomorrow.

Word was received in Washington yesterday of the death of William M. Kal, father of Norman C. Kal, president of the Advertising Club of Washington and head of an advertising agency bearing his name.

Mr. Kal was a native of West Palm Beach, Fla., where he had lived since the World War. He died of a heart ailment, after a short illness.

He was born in Manchester, England, 59 years ago, and was a resident of the District for twenty years, where he had many friends. He was the owner of the St. Charles Hotel, at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue, in the days when the Pennsylvania Railroad station was located at that point and the area was the mecca for hotels.

As a young man, Mr. Kal was the manager of the Thompson Company, a well known firm of decorators who, among other things, gilded the dome of the Library of Congress and also placed the famous mosaics that adorn that world-renowned building. As art director of the Lee Lash Studios, Mr. Kal was also responsible for the famous scenic productions of an earlier era.

On the outbreak of the World War Mr. Kal enlisted, was quickly made an officer and placed in charge of camouflage operations for the A. E. F.

After the war Mr. Kal settled in West Palm Beach, Fla., conducting an advertising art studio until his retirement in 1924.

Funeral services and interment for the deceased will be held at West Palm Beach tomorrow afternoon.

Baltimore Student Heads Parley Here

Richard Maas, of Baltimore City College, was elected chairman of George Washington University's conference for senior high-school students at the opening session yesterday.

The delegates named Gladys Hendricks, of Eastern High School, Washington, as secretary of the conference; Frank Davis, of Richard Montgomery High School, Rockville, as sergeant at arms, and Margaret Wells, of Western High School, Baltimore, as clerk.

The delegates heard relative merits of public versus private ownership of electric utilities, the subject of the conference, debated yesterday by Dr. Harry W. Laidler, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, and Frank A. Newton, of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation.

This morning committee reports will be presented and the conference will adopt resolutions expressing views on the question. The conference is an annual event held under the auspices of the university's department of public speaking, to give high-school students in this region the opportunity to hear outstanding speakers.

by the maintenance of unjust or unreasonable wage or hour standards or the employment of child labor, or by reason of merchandising, distributing, or advertising practices, or otherwise would tend in its results to create monopolies or to be injurious or oppressive particularly as to small enterprise, or to reduce involuntarily the number of independent competitors willing and able to maintain just and reasonable labor standards and to operate at a reasonable profit.

2. Creation of an administrative body either in the Federal Trade Commission or otherwise, empowered and required to investigate and prosecute violation of the fair competition act.

3. Establishment of a system of agreements voluntarily submitted by management and labor dealing with minimum wages and maximum hours and fair trade practices.

4. Creation of a judicial body for the adjudication of all complaints of violation of the proposed fair competition act.

5. Uniform State fair competition acts.

Labor Approval.

It was stipulated that labor representatives on the committee approved the recommendations on the condition that the tribunal named to enforce the proposed law will include a specified number of representatives nominated by organized labor.

In addition, the council meeting, which was attended by about 800 representatives of business and labor, advocated modification of the anti-trust laws and financial aid to small enterprises through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Most of the large business enterprises of the country, including steel, automobile manufacturers, textiles and rubber manufacturers were not represented. Also absent were representatives of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Association of Manufacturers and the Committee for Industrial Organization, rival labor group of the American Federation of Labor. William Green, president of the federation, is co-chairman of the council.

Following the conclusion of the council session, which opened Thursday, Berry in a radio broadcast last night offered to resign as co-ordinator for industrial co-operation if his resignation would promote co-operation of business with the New Deal.

"Kindly Sort of Person."

"Of course," he said, "I fully understand that there are those who previously declined to join us because they disliked the President; and also because they disliked representation of organized labor. I realize that. They had nothing against me. I was a nice, kindly sort of person. I went through the NRA and tried to compose differences and help them. They disliked the President and disliked organized labor.

(Berry is president of the International union of printing pressmen and formerly was connected with the NRA.)

"Now they don't dislike the President, if we are to read the newspapers. They want to co-operate. But in order for them to co-operate with the Federal Government, the President must get a new co-ordinator.

"Well, if it helps to save their faces, and rather than to abridge the furtherance of this program of national understanding, which means national patriotism and national protection—well, my friends, I am not so vain as to want to be coordinator and thereby abridge progress. I am no office seeker. I wouldn't ask a public office of any kind within the gift of the President that paid a dime. That is the record. I am glad to be able to be free."

Berry at no time, as an official of the NRA or as co-ordinator for industrial co-operation, has accepted a salary from the Government.

Red Cross Unit Maps Plans for Year's Work

The National Red Cross committee on volunteer service, which has been in session here for two days, adjourned at noon yesterday when delegates from all sections of the United States left for their homes.

With Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman, presiding, the committee discussed plans for the coming year's work, and reviewed the accomplishments of hundreds of thousands of volunteer workers. Mrs. William Howard Taft and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, honorary vice chairmen, attended both days. Washington members of the committee who attended included Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. C. G. Edgar and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson.

Pappas to Furnish Free Yule Dinners

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pappas announced yesterday that according to their usual custom they will furnish free Christmas dinners to the needy at their restaurant, 511 Ninth street northwest, the Gayety Cafe.

Through the police department hundreds of tickets have been distributed to patrolmen who will give them to deserving persons.

Tickets can also be secured from John F. Scott (Scotty) from 9 until 11 a. m. each day at the restaurant.

District Auto Tag Sale Held Lagging

Approximately 9,000 Washington motorists are going to find themselves without 1937 automobile license plates on January 1 unless they visit the Department of Vehicles and Traffic within the next few days, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer warned yesterday.

With 13 distribution days yet to go, a total of 78,000 tags remain unclaimed, he said. Thus far, the traffic department is ahead of last year's schedule by 13,000 plates. But at the rate tags are now being sold, 9,000 will be left over when the deadline arrives at midnight, December 31, Van Duzer added.

There will be no extension of time on 1936 tags and motorists who have not secured new plates by the first of the new year will not be permitted to drive.

So-called "special" tags — low numbered plates—will not be held after next Thursday, Van Duzer said. Many of these have already been assigned, but have not been called for.

Charles West to Speak.

Charles E. West, Undersecretary of State, and Frederick J. Rice, local attorney, will be the principal speakers at a luncheon meeting of the Democratic League of the District at the Burlington Hotel today at 1:30 o'clock. Arthur Clarendon Smith will preside.

Edward Decides on Exile for 'Woman I Love,' He Declares in His Farewell Talk

After Sir John spoke, there was only a slight pause.

Then there came over the air the voice of Edward himself. It appeared as if he were uncertain of himself. Sometimes his voice seemed choked.

Throughout his address it trembled. But as he neared the conclusion, it became firm. When he finished he fervently said:

"God bless you all! God save the King!"

Edward's brief farewell cleared many matters that have puzzled the world.

Foremost was the fact that he abdicated for love, and love alone.

Needed Mrs. Simpson.

"You must believe me," said he, "when I tell you that I have found it impossible to carry this heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the help and support of the woman I love."

On his arrival and his departure from Windsor Castle Edward was cheered. For him there was great sympathy throughout England. This had grown as he pledged allegiance to the new King.

Plans Are Secret.

He might even have slipped out of the country without anyone but his family and servants knowing, had there not been too much activity in the dockyards at Portsmouth, which lie at the end of squalid Unicorn street.

At the head was the car in which Edward usually rides. It was followed by another automobile which recently had been seen at Fort Belvedere.

Then came a police car. Then two baggage trucks. Headlights were flashed into the faces of the reporters, so they could not identify the occupants of the big cars.

Car Races to Docks.

Persons who should know, however, said later Edward was riding on the front seat beside his chauffeur. He had on, they said, a fawn-colored coat.

He came into the dockyards by a roundabout route, they added. A guard halted the car. The chauffeur whispered to the guard. The automobile, throttle open, then raced onto the docks.

What craft bore Edward toward his unannounced destination had not been definitely established early today.

By some he was believed to have boarded the admirality yacht Enchantress. Others thought he might be pacing the decks of the destroyer Fury or the destroyer Wolfhound.

Approaches to both the Enchantress and the Fury were blocked by Naval authorities, and the craft could be seen only from a distance.

The Wolfhound was reported to have slipped alongside the jetties in the darkness and waited with full steam up.

Under Full Steam.

As the Enchantress and the Fury streaked out to sea under full steam, reports spread around the streets of Portsmouth the former ruler was bound for the Mediterranean.

Where he would disembark was a secret closely guarded by naval authorities.

Most of those left behind, however, felt it would be some port in France, where the woman for whom he abdicated the world's most powerful throne, awaits.

Englishmen will wake up later today to learn Edward has left the country and then their thoughts will turn to the centuries-old ritual by which accession to the throne of a British King is proclaimed.

The proclamation is a survival of the days when news traveled by stagecoach or mounted couriers.

Ceremony in London.

The principal ceremony will be in London. First there will be a special meeting of the Privy Council, called the accession council, attended by members of the royal family, the lord mayor, aldermen and other civic officials. They will assemble at St. James Palace at 11 a. m.

Thehe the King will recite a proclamation, reading:

"Solemnly, sincerely, in the presence of God, I profess, testify and declare that I am a faithful Protestant and will, according to the true intent of enactments which secure the Protestant succession to the throne of my realm, uphold and maintain such enactment to the best, of my power and according to law."

This declaration will be published in a special supplement of the London Gazette later in the day.

Later, in St. James Park, Sir Gerald Wollaston, principal king of arms, will unroll a scroll and read:

"That Prince Abert Frederick Arthur George became our only lawful and rightful King, defender of the faith, Emperor of India."

The proclamation also will include the coronation date which is expected to be the same set for Edward, May 12.

The last words of Edward's farewell fell on hushed and spellbound listeners. In thousands of groups there was not a murmur.

But all London paused with the rest of the Empire to listen.

Wherever there was a radio, in streets, homes, theaters and pubs, people gathered. They wanted to hear the last words of their King.

Women Weep in Streets.

When Edward mentioned "the woman I love," women wept in the streets, and when he said that George VI "had one blessing, enjoyed by so many of you and not bestowed on me—a happy home with his wife and children" men squared their jaws.

The clear words of Edward were heard as those of an old friend baring his distressed heart.

But always they kept watch of the time. As the hour neared for the chimes of Big Ben, summoning Edward to his date with the people, those on the fringe left, taking a chance on missing George rather than Edward.

The pubs were scenes of some of the largest gatherings. These spots always are crowded just before the 10:30 p. m. curfew for drinking places.

Men paused respectfully, then raised their glasses of beer and muttered:

"God save the King."

Plays Suspended.

When Edward's voice came over the loudspeaker, fashionable and West End Theater performances were suspended.

A short time after the broadcast, streets and every available means of transportation were crowded, as thousands trailed home.

Men and women jammed trams and buses, and pedestrians clogged the avenues and streets.

Some of the older men who had known Edward's father, George V, "the sailor king," mournfully shook their heads. Their eyes filled with tears.

Admiral Martin Dunbar Nasmith, chairman of the dinner, called for a toast to "The King," and the roomful of men leaped to their feet and responded, "The King, and God bless him."

Edward's reign of less than 11 months passed into history at 1:52 p. m. (8:52 a. m. Eastern standard time) December 11, 1936, and his brother, Albert, became automatically King George VI, sovereign of some 500,000,000 subjects in a realm covering almost one-third of the globe.

In action swift for all its solemnity, Parliament required only two hours and two minutes to give the reign of Edward VIII to another generation to judge, and to give the 42-year-old man freedom to marry the woman he loves.

First in History.

The first voluntary adbication bill in the long history of the British Empire was passed into law with only five members of the House of Commons voicing opposition.

The regal House of Lords, shocked by the momentous precedent it must establish, accepted Edward's abdication and his brother's accession in just six minutes—six minutes to write perhaps the most amazing annal of the world's biggest empire.

With traditional British desire to "get on with it" the austere peers then took up two minor matters before they adjourned.

The Houses will meet again at 2:45 p. m. today (9:45 a. m. Eastern standard time), to take the oath of allegiance to the new King after George himself has taken his vows as England's King in historic St. James Palace, at 11 a. m. (6 a. m., Eastern standard time).

On Monday, the new King's forty-first birthday, he will send a message to Parliament to which the anxious leaders of the realm look for assurance from the new King that he will steadfastly use his high office to hold and strengthen the allegiance of the far-flung dominions.

Christened Albert Frederick Arthur George, the second son of the late King George V, the new King will reign as King George VI.

Dominions to Approve.

In a manner as expeditious as it was grave did the House of England's Parliament accept the abdication bill and pass it on to the dominion governments all of which, said Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, had indicated it would have their approval.

At the close of the most consequential days Britain ever experienced, there remained little to be done to end for all time the reign of Edward VIII and make him a wanderer on the face of the earth, hand in hand with the American-born Wallis Warfield Simpson, the lady of his chosen destiny.

Presented by Commission.

The abdication bill was formally presented by a three-man royal commission appointed by Edward to act for him in the matter of giving up his throne.

Because of this procedure, he, himself, would not be required to sign the document, unless he so preferred. Passed by both houses it became final and "irrevocable" as Edward requested in his formal renunciation the day before.

With Edward thus walking through the door of obscurity which he hopes will enable him and Mrs. Simpson "to live happily ever after," the man who will be England's next King took on his shoulders the crushing burden of an empire in a time of the most widespread unrest.

King George VI will face a world arming for it knows not what, a world divided into the bitterest of political ideologies already being fought on the battlefields of Spain.

He will face a world asking universally:

"What, now, is the destiny of Britain and her dominions beyond the seas?"

In manner at the same time cold and poignant did the peers and commoners of England on December 11, 1936, enable Edward VIII to step down from his throne and his younger brother to ascend it.

The once-glamorous Edward, Prince of Wales, was gone from them.

Elizabeth in Line.

With the paternalism of people clinging to a symbol, they turned to the little, curly-haired Princess Elizabeth, 10-year-old daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, who is next in line to succeed her father.

Edward's formal abdication bill was presented to a grave-faced Parliament and passed through the necessary three readings.

Prime Minister Baldwin, he who alone assumed responsibility the day before for advising Edward's decision, put the motion to a vote with the words:

"This is the last bill which will be presented for royal assent during the present reign."

"The Demise of the Crown."

It was not without minor opposition, however, that the bill was enacted into law.

James Maxton, left-wing leader, first introduced a motion opposing passage after a speech in which he said the British monarchy was a "fool's paradise."

His motion was seconded by the Rev. Campbell Stephen, who asserted the only reason advanced for retaining the monarchy had been that it alone remained the link binding together England and her dominions.

"A Very Weak Link."

"If that is the case," he said, "the empire is being held together by a very weak link."

"The dilemma of the king," he continued as the House rustled impatiently, "arose because the King, like the rest of them, was a human being. The problems that have arisen in the present instance might well arise in the next few years.

"I know that the new monarch is a married man. So was Mr. Simpson, and just as it happened with others it also might happen here."

The Commons speedily voted down Maxton's motion by a vote of 409 to 5, and then passed the abdication bill without a record tabulation.

In stately procession as those before them had done throughout the centuries, the prime minister and the members of Parliament then marched into the House of Lords to witness the final chapter in the story of a man who gave up his throne for love of a commoner.

Halifax Speaks.

The clerk announced receipt of the bill from the House of Commons and the peers passed the first reading.

Then arose Lord Halifax, leader of the August body. To move second reading.

Said he:

"Your lordships will recollect that in the gracious message which we had before us yesterday, the wish was expressed by his majesty that this matter should be dealt with by both houses with all practical expedition.

"The bill itself is plain and simple and a short one. Your lordships will please observe that in the second paragraph of the preamble, the bill records the consent of the Dominion of Canada and the assent of the commonwealth of Australia, the dominion of New Zealand and the Union of South Africa (to bring the abdication bill before Parliament)."

Lord Snell, opposition leader, and Lord Mottistone, for the Liberal Party, pledged their supporters to pass the act and it was moved through second and third readings in a matter of minutes.

"Le Roy Le Veult"—The King wishes it.

Thus, in four words of ancient Norman French ended the reign of Edward VIII, of England, Ireland and the dominions beyond the seas King, and Emporer of India.

Wires, Cables Hum.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Cable and wireless companies reported today the abdication of King Edward gave them the busiest day they had since the Armistice was signed in 1918.

A check-up showed more than 160,000 words of press copy was sent from Europe to the United States, the major part of it on the King's abdication and romance with Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

The Commercial Cable Co., which is affiliated with Postal Telegraph, reported it handled 50,000 words from Europe yesterday. French Cable, Inc., said it handled 25,000 words. Other companies reported a total wordage of more than 85,000 words.

In addition, a large volume was transmitted by Transatlantic Telephone.

The Associated Press received more than 30,000 words of cable matter from London yesterday, the largest amount received by a single news organization.

Mrs. Simpson Hears Address At Home Radio

French Neighbors of Fiancee Say Ex-King's Words Moved Her Deeply.

low's voices showed tension and strain.

Mrs. Simpson indicated through an intermediary earlier in the day that she and the former King would not meet until next April, when her divorce decree becomes final.

"There is no reason," this spokesman said, "why the former King should come here. There is every reason why he cannot come."

The American friend of the former ruler, the intermediary said, would remain at the villa at least until Christmas.

Roses came for Mrs. Simpson, a great box of them. It was taken for granted they were from the man who gave an empire for her love.

The two betrothed have said, through friends, they wish to avoid any close association that might cause the public or the King's proctor to frown before Mrs. Simpson's divorce decree nisi becomes final April 27.

Expects No Hitch.

She expects to receive the complete divorce without complications, a spokesman for Mrs. Simpson said.

His declaration was taken as an indication her time of waiting for her 42-year-old fiance—a man who has charmed women throughout the world—would be shortened, as it could be by special action.

The spokesman even declared the attractive brunette, once a Baltimore society belle, has "no arrangements to meet Edward."

She will stay in southern France for several weeks at least, he said.

She has conversed by phone with London previously from the villa here, and presumably some of her talks at least have been with Edward, but Lord Brownlow refused to say whether she had done so today.

He said she spent the morning inside the villa with her hosts. Rain fell intermittently from a dull sky.

In the afternoon Mrs. Simpson and Lord Brownlow took what was described as a "short drive" in the car she used in her dash across France from the English Channel last week—a car which is a duplicate of the abdicated King's.

She remained in bed until 10:30 a. m. and when she arose her mental attitude was "no different from other mornings," villa guards said—although it was the morning after the ruler of the British Empire abdicated so he could marry her.

The cordon of Scotland Yard officers and French police which has surrounded the villa since Mrs. Simpson's arrival continued to keep her isolated from a world waiting for some word directly from her.

It was understood there would be no public holidays either for the proclamation of the new King George VI in the union tomorrow or on Monday, his forty-first birthday, but the customary royal salutes were expected to be given tomorrow.

Edward Sees Famed Naval Port As His Last Glimpse of England

Nelson Sailed FFom Historic Portsmouth to His Death at Trafalgar and Victoria Passed Through Harbor to Her Grave.

By the Associated Press.

When his royal highness, Prince Edward, David Windsor, former King-Emperor, sailed into voluntary exile today from Portsmouth, his last glimpse of England was of one of her most famous naval ports.

As the ship which bore him steamed out into the English Channel it passed close by the famous steps of the old naval landing down which Admiral Nelson walked when he sailed in the Victory for the battle of Trafalgar in 1805—a battle from which he never came back.

At the beginnnig of this storm-ridden century the body of Queen Victoria was brought into this same port from her residence on the Isle of Wight, separated from Portsmouth by only a narrow strip of sea.

She, too, on her last journey, had passed through the port never to return to it in life.

As her body, borne on the Royal yacht, steamed slowly along the Portsmouth waterfront, a deep sigh from her mourning subjects, who lined the Esplanade, accompanied it—the voice of an empire's grief at her passing.

DowagerQueen Calls on Empire To Back King

London, Dec. 11.—Queen Mary, idol of an empire, addressed the far-flung dominions today asking its half-billion people to seek an understanding of Edward's abdication and give their loyalty to his brother Albert, the new King.

She said: "To the people of this nation and empire: I have been so deeply touched by the sympathy which has surrounded me in this time of anxiety that I must send a message of gratitude from the depth of my heart.

"The sympathy and affection which has sustained me in my great sorrow less than a year ago has not failed me now and are once again my strength and stay.

"I need not speak to you of the distress which fills a mother's heart, when I think that my dear son has deemed it to be his duty to lay down his charge and that the reign which was begun with so much hope and promise has so suddenly ended.

"I know that you will realize what it has cost him to come to this decision and that remembering the years in which he tried so eagerly to serve and help his country and empire you will ever keep grateful remembrance of him in your hearts.

"I commend to you his brother, summoned so unexpectedly and in circumstances so painful to take his place.

"I ask you to give him the same full measure of generous loyalty which you gave my beloved husband and which you would willingly have continued to give his brother.

"With him I commend my dear daughter-in-law, who will be his Queen. May she receive the same unfailing affection and trust that you have given me for 6 and 20 years.

"I know that you already have taken her children to your hearts. It is my earnest prayer that, in spite of, nay, through this present trouble, the loyalty and unity of our land and empire may by God's blessing be maintained and strengthened.

"May He bless, keep and guide you.

"MARY R."

Ottawa Cabinet Ready To Proclaim New King

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (AP).—Canada's cabinet council prepared today for proclamation of the new King simultaneously with similar functions in London and decided that Monday, birthday of the new sovereign, would be a holiday.

The cabinet council will meet tomorrow to pass the necessary orders-in-council proclaiming the new sovereign and instructing all servants of the Crown to continue their functions until they can take oaths of allegiance to the new sovereign.

Md. Senate Passes Job Insurance Act

Annapolis, Dec. 11 (AP).—Rejecting all amendments which would change the committee bill, Senate Democrats tonight passed the unemployment insurance bill on second reading and paved the way for adjournment of the legislature early tomorrow.

Committee amendments making necessary for minor changes in the measure were adopted without trouble, the voting almost following party lines. The bill levies a pay roll tax of .9 per cent in 1936, 1.8 in 1937 and 2.7 in 1938. The committee bill brings employers of eight or more under the bill but does not decrease that figure.

X-ics Invite Edward To Annual Banquet

By the Associated Press.

The Ancient and Honorable Order of X-ics, composed of former Senators and Representatives, yesterday cabled an invitation to England's abdicated King Edward VIII to attend their annual banquet here next May.

The X-ics expect a big crowd because of the huge Congressional turnover in the 1936 elections. The order was organized four years ago by former Representative Royal Johnson, South Dakota; Robert Clancy, Michigan, and Edward W. Goss, Connecticut, and drew 100 members to its first banquet.

Carnegie Board Adopts Budget, Elects Officers

Elihu Root Again Chosen Chairman; Institution to Hold Exhibits.

With former President Herbert Hoover among the members making a special trip here for the occasion, the board of trustees of the Carnegie Institution held its annual meeting yesterday to adopt a $1,620,237 budget for 1937, hold elections and view scientific exhibits.

The exhibition, illustrating achievements of staff scientists during the last year, will be thrown open to the public this afternoon and be continued through Monday.

Elihu Root, 91-year-old statesman, who did not attend, was re-elected chairman of the board. Other officers returned for another year were W. Cameron Forbes, grandson of Ralph Waldo Emerson and former Ambassador to Japan, and Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt, and holder of many high posts in public and private life.

Trustees Elected.

Elected trustees for three-year terms were Robert Woods Bliss, of Washington, former Ambassador to the Argentine; Henry S. Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan and partner in his New York banking firm, and Charles P. Taft 2d, of Cincinnati, son of the former President.

Members present at yesterday's meeting, besides those already named, were Thomas Barbour, James F. Bell, Homer L. Ferguson, Walter S. Gifford, Frank B. Jewett, Alfred L. Loomis, Roswell Miller (son-in-law of the late Andrew Carnegie), Stewart Paton, William V. Storey, Richard P. Strong, James W. Wadsworth, Frederick C. Walcott and Lewis H. Weed.

Co-ordination of the research activities of scientists in all fields was recommended by Dr. John C. Merriam, president of Carnegie Institution, in his annual report to the trustees.

Integrating the different sciences—physical, biological and social—is highly desirable as a means of preserving gains already made and preventing the various branches from working at cross-purposes.

"From a number of directions," said Dr. Merriam, "we have the suggestion that for guidance in development of new ideas and for the protection of society it is desirable to set up types of organization which may bring together scientists, engineers and the forward-looking students of social and economic problems with a view to keeping close watch on related developments in these several fields.

New Technique Needed.

"The finding of something like a common viewpoint for investigators in these subjects may be difficult, but it will have increasing importance. Such an activity might be established in the hope of fitting new ideas and new techniques to new industries and new phases of social and economic endeavor.

"If developed guardedly, such a forward-looking program would presumably not hinder the advance of civilization and might be expected to aid in adjustment of human groups to some of the changes which inevitably take place."

Pointing out that in the past scientists have been content to go their separate ways, he likened the natural world to "a forest which is not just board feet per acre, but consists of all the elements of life, from the most insignificant to the greatest, and if it is to be replaced it must be on the basis of all values concerned."

Annual Exhibit Given.

Last night, in keeping with annual custom, they attended a preview of the biological, ethnological, archeological, astronomical and physical exhibits. They witnessed demonstrations of pinocytosis, which means the drinking of fluids by body cells. They viewed Mayan relics, examined artifacts found in ancient Southwest caves, learned of the latest explorations into the earth's high atmosphere and peered through telescopes for demonstrations of star behavior.

Public visiting hours today, tomorrow and Monday are 2 to 5:30 p. m. and 7:30 to 10:30 p. m. Auditorium lectures are scheduled on all three days and each exhibit will be in charge of a scientist who will answer questions.

Mrs. Boerner Dies After Short Illness

Mrs. Marie Cammon Boerner, 62, of 2813 Quarry road northwest, wife of E. J. Boerner, marketing specialist and grain standard expert with the Department of Agriculture, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital after a brief illness.

A native of Northfield, Minn., she was married in Minneapolis in 1906. She was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star here and the Twentieth Century Club.

Surviving are her husband, two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Hurtt, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Elizabeth Espeland, of Duluth, Minn., and a brother, Frank Cammon, of Minneapolis. Funeral services will be held at Lee's undertaking establishment today at 4 p. m., and the body then will be taken to Minneapolis for burial.

Margaret Dorrance Engaged to Broker

Philadelphia, Dec. 11 (AP).—Mrs. John T. Dorrance announced today the engagement of her daughter, Miss Margaret Winifred Dorrance, to George Strawbridge, son of John Strawbridge, broker and prominent amateur jockey.

Miss Dorrance is one of five children of the late John T. Dorrance, head of the Campbell Soup Co., who left a $150,000,000 estate.

Webster Students To Fete 100 Needy

One hundred needy Washington children, chosen by the Central Union Mission, will be entertained and presented gifts by girls of the Marjorie Webster School at a Christmas party at the school, 7775 Seventeenth street, at 7 p. m. today.

The names and ages of the needy children already have been furnished the students to enable them to provide each child with suitable gifts.

The children will meet at the Central Union Mission and will be taken to the school in buses. Each child will be taken charge of at the school by the students. The children range in age from 2 to 12 years. The students will provide a program of music and dancing as entertainment.

Seaplane, Crew Found in Atlantic

Paris, Dec. 11 (U.P.).—The French Ministry of Marine announced tonight that the missing seaplane, Southern Cross, its pilot, Jean Mermoz, and its crew of two had been found floating 120 miles from St. Peter's Island. The advices came from Fernando Noranha.

By the Associated Press

Reductions in WPA rolls were made at an even faster rate during the week ended December 5 than during the two previous weeks.

The work relief agency reported yesterday that during the next week ended last Saturday, there was a net decrease of 93,770 non-administrative employes, reducing the load to 2,384,202 persons. The reduction in the District of Columbia was 62 persons.

In the previous two weeks, the reduction was 104,510.

WPA announced some time ago it plans to remove all workers who do not need relief, and to transfer 250,000 drought cases to the Resettlement Administration where they will receive direct money grants instead of jobs.

Whether a modification of this WPA economy program has been ordered recently, as was indicated by conflicting statements coming from the WPA high command during the last week, is expected to be shown when figures on the number of employes dropped since December 5 are made public.

Congressional action was started yesterday to obtain "preferred" treatment for communities still suffering from effects of drought. Representative Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, called a meeting of 128 drought-area Congressmen for December 21.

"I am hopeful that out of this meeting will come an organization which can speak for the rural sections," Nichols said, "just as the association of mayors does for the metropolitan areas."

Referring to the plan to transfer drought cases to the Resettlement Administration, he said RA "is already loaded with more clients than their funds will permit them to adequately take care of."

Schoolgirls to Attend Athletics Conference

Girls from 22 senior high schools and private schools in Washington and vicinity will attend a conference on girls' athletics at the George Washington University today. The meeting is sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association of the university and students of the university's teacher training course in physical education.

At the opening session in Corcoran Hall at 10 a. m. Virginia Rath, of Swarthmore College, president of the Eastern Society of Directors of Physical Education for College Women, will address the conference on "Athletics for Girls Today." Panel discussion will follow throughout the morning.

Dock Worker Real 'Bird' as Smuggler, His Arrest Shows

A tale of a smuggler who would put many magicians to shame was told yesterday in the annual report of the Biological Survey.

The smuggler, a longshoreman, boarded a steamer as it arrived in New York from Italy. A short time later he went ashore with "12 canaries, two cardinal birds and one parakeet concealed in his clothing."

RayburnAid Grows In Leadership Race

By the Associated Press.

Describing the development as "significant," Representative Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, said yesterday Representative Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, former acting majority leader of the House, had pledged "100 per cent support" of Rayburn's leadership candidacy.

Questioned concerning his attitude toward the proposal by Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, also in the leadership race, that all candidates withdraw and support Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, for the post, Rayburn said:

"Yesterday seemed to be abdication day."

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 11 (AP).—The North Carolina Congressional delegation, after a caucus here today, announced 6 of its 11 votes would be cast for Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, for Democratic floor leader of the House, 2 for Representative John O'Connor, of New York, and 3 members were listed as "undecided."

C.T.C. Adopts Plan For Loop at Circle

Several District agencies and the Capital Transit Co. yesterday agreed upon a tentative plan for treatment of Barney Circle at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast in connection with the drafting of plans for a new Pennsylvania avenue bridge.

The plan, drawn up by the Public Utilities Commission, envisions a street car turning loop and a half circle for buses in a parkway in the midst of Pennsylvania avenue.

The Highway Department, the traffic director, and the commission submit the proposal to Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan for submission to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The Mask Is Off.

Transparent efforts to conceal the fact that the Administration soil conservation program is a production-control device of the type declared to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court have been abandoned. Plans for the coming year quite openly aim at limitation of the acreage planted in corn in the North Central region and in Kansas.

These limitations, says Administrator Tolley of the AAA, are "designed to prevent increases which might not only defeat the effort to conserve the soil but with normal yields result in surpluses which would greatly reduce prices." Hence if the corn acreage limit is exceeded, the farmer will be penalized. In the discreet language of the official announcement a "deduction will be made for each acre over the limit at the rate paid for diversion from the general soil depleting base."

Perhaps the AAA can "get away" with this virtual defiance of the Supreme Court decision in the Hoosac Mills case. But the public ought to understand what tactics are being used. The court held that "if the plan in question (AAA production control) were one for purely voluntary co-operation, it would stand no better so far as Federal power is concerned." "At best," the opinion continued, "it is a scheme for purchasing with Federal funds submission to Federal regulation of a subject reserved to the States." If control of agriculture is a local matter, and if Federal action to that end invades the rights of the States, as the Court maintains, elimination of the processing taxes and the absence of definite contracts with farmers will not meet constitutional objections to the present program.

Regardless of any merits of the crop-control plan, the question is whether the Federal Government has power to achieve by indirection objectives that cannot be openly reached. The present makeshift arrangement stands condemned in any case, for, in an endeavor to circumvent the Supreme Court decision, the AAA has devised a plan that provides neither for intelligent production control nor for bona fide conservation of the soil. This sham conservation program merely postpones open discussion of the real problem and makes it the more difficult to rely upon methods of relief that can pass legal as well as economic tests of adequacy.

Speaking recently before the American Farm Bureau Federation at Pasadena, Edward A. O'Neal, president of that organization, and Secretary Wallace both stressed the importance of production control as a means of improving the economic status of the farmer. Their openly expressed regrets for the passing of the AAA affords a further suggestion, if any is needed, that the soil-conservation program is chiefly a means of temporarily nullifying the Hoosac Mills decision.

Sunless Italian.

No bright finiculi-finiculas were found in the plays of Italy's leading dramatist, Luigi Pirandello, now dead in Rome. His stark austerities were more in the tradition of Ibsen and Strindberg. And certainly part of the explanation for this cold temper in a dramatist of sunny Italy can be sought in the dark story of Pirandello's life.

Son of a Greek mine operator in Sicily, he was schooled in the mordant atmosphere of nineteenth century German metaphysics. He published his first poems at the age of 22, but further pursuit of literary ambitions became all but impossible when his young wife fell victim to an acute melancholia, demanding expenses outside his modest budget. As a result, Pirandello became a lecturer in a normal school, and not until he was almost 50 did he turn his hand again to more than an occasional poem or short story.

Pirandello's philosophy was easily as cynical as any student of frustration would expect. He was overwhelmed at every turn with doubts as to the nature of reality. "Nothing is true and everything might be" was his credo and this assumption, which the modern age makes decidedly plausible, ran through his entire writing. American playgoers saw samples of it in "Right You Are if You Think You Are," and the more generally popular "Six Characters in Search of an Author." Though never quite certain as to the intent of his subtleties, all joined in applauding the new techniques of the bitter yet witty Italian. His hope someday to "revolutionize" motion pictures only added to the enthusiasm of his American admirers.

At the time of his death Pirandello was engaged upon an autobiography, to have been titled "Information About My Involuntary Sojourn on Earth." Presumably it would have been based on his conviction that "life is a very sad piece of buffoonery." Presumably, too, the book would have concluded with his funeral which, if his stipulations are followed, will consist only of a pauper's hearse unattended by mourners.

For all his greatness that would not be an unappropriate exit for the unhappy man who melted his gold Nobel medal to aid the conquest of Ethiopia, although fascism and imperialism contradicted all his convictions.

Unity And The Symbol.

In the historic debate in the House of Commons on the abdication of Edward VIII, speaker after speaker waxed emotional in referring to the crown and its place in the British scheme of things.

Thus Sir Archibald Sinclair, for the Liberal Party, spoke of the crown as "the one remaining link uniting all the people of his (the King's) Empire." Similar statements had been made by others. And there is sufficient truth in the assertion, if it is not regarded as the whole truth.

Behind that symbol which is the crown there are powerful forces which give reality to the unity which the common monarch symbolizes. Without them the kingship alone would be insufficient to hold together the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

It must not be forgotten that between Great Britain and the dominions are intangible, but none the less real, ties arising out of a common origin and long years of association. Between the members of this family of nations, also, there have developed extremely important financial and economic cultural and sentimental ties. And, not least, these independent states are joined together by a realistic sense of common destiny. Even should the crown some day disappear it is likely that the British Empire and the British Commonwealth would remain.

And it becomes more, rather than less, evident that the nations composing the British Commonwealth are intent on maintaining the links between them. The grim specter of war and chaos sits astride many an horizon. That democracy which the British dominions share with the mother country, and with only a few other nations in the world, is under attack. This danger from without has inevitably led to a rediscovery and a revivification of that community of interest of which the crown is the obvious symbol.

Had the League of Nations really succeeded in doing what it was designed to do, it is not unlikely that the separatist tendencies noted for some time in the dominions, particularly in South Africa and the Irish Free State, might have increased. Had the feeling grown up that the Covenant is a real bulwark of peace, that because of it nations would be really secure from external attack, the group harmony among the British states might have become attenuated.

It is in part, no doubt, because the League has shown itself weak rather than strong; because events in Manchuria and Ethiopia yesterday, and in Spain today, have demonstrated the insecurity of nations, particularly weak nations, that the Commonwealth today is more of a living force than ever.

In this connection it becomes the more significant that Dublin seemingly does not intend to use the present crisis in Great Britain to weaken the remaining links with the other members of the British Commonwealth. The Irish Free State is planning to move no further or faster in the direction of complete independence than it had already planned to do before the abdication of Edward VIII.

Internally, the Free State will be made completely autonomous, President de Valera has announced. But it is practically so already. Externally, however, the link with the empire will be retained.

At The Corcoran.

Unless one is willing to travel from one end of the country to the other for the purpose, the display in the Corcoran Gallery which ends tomorrow evening will never again be seen in its entirety. Designs for murals and other decorations, to be placed not only in postoffices but in all manner of public buildings, comprise the exhibit. The work of artists commissioned by Federal relief agents, the display has carried convincing appeal to all who have an appreciation for contemporary art.

No expert knowledge is needed to detect that youth predominates among the artists represented. Freshness and verve radiate from every corner of the gallery's usually somber second floor. Whether the subject is a landscape from the neighborhood of La Jolla, Calif., or a representation of the industries of rural New England destined for White River Junction, Vt., each reflects a competency which should reassure in large measure the many who have doubted the desirability of Government intervention in the field of art.

What is more, the pictures may be taken as an encouraging reflection of the country's present level of creative talent. Anyone professing an interest in the future of American art can scarcely afford to miss this fleeting opportunity to view the collection as a whole.

The British Debt Note.

On December 15 payments on war debt account to the amount of $155,100,000 fall due. Of that total, $117,700,000 is owing by Great Britain. Added to sums previously due and unpaid, this brings the arrears for Britain alone to the huge sum of $786,100,000.

The current British debt note, however, is not confined to a terse declaration of inability to meet the payment due. It contains a suggestion that "His Majesty's Government will be ready to reopen discussions on the matter whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that a satisfactory result might be reached." Taken in conjunction with the renewed interest in a settlement manifested by the French, it begins to look as if the debt issue is again becoming a live problem.

Nevertheless it would clearly be futile for our Government to respond to these delicate overtures unless there is a reasonable hope that its demands will be brought within the compass of the very limited ability of the debtor countries to pay. That ability, be it noted, cannot be measured solely with reference to the domestic situation of the debtors. Even assuming that the amounts payable each year, as interest and reduction of principal, could be collected from the taxpayers without undue hardship, there remains the major difficulty of effecting transfers in dollars.

The American people have stubbornly or ignorantly refused to admit the cogency of the argument that transfers on debt account build up our favorable balance of payments and thereby necessitate our purchasing more goods and services from foreigners in order to offset this inflow of funds. Yet it ought to be obvious to all that nations forced to part with large sums in payment of war debts must be in a position to expand their exports of goods and services in commensurate measure.

The British balance of payments last year, excluding capital movements, is estimated to have shown the small net surplus of £37,000,000—far less than the amount needed to cover debt payments. This year, it is believed that the current balance will be actually unfavorable. The amounts owing abroad will be slightly greater than the amounts due from abroad. While the basically weak position of Great Britain's present foregin exchange position is temporarily concealed by the abnormally heavy capital inflow from foreign countries, it is none the less real.

Under such conditions, the fact that the British Government has made even a tentative and ultra-cautious approach to the subject of a debt settlement indicates real eagerness to solve this vexed problem, and in so doing remove a most serious obstacle to permanent restoration of stabilized exchanges.

The Home Will Endure.

From the New Orleans Item.

Trailers are coming in for mass production. We already have big and luxurious trailers, small and modest trailers, trailers for families of seven and a servant, trailers for three, and honeymoon trailers. The gypsy gas wagon is to have its era.

It will be all right with us, even though the prospect has shivery aspects. We shall be having trailer tragedies on the highways. But that evil, grisly as it is in anticipation, suggests its own compensations. Trailer travelers may be less likely to hold their motors at 70 or 80 miles an hour than motorists running light. The trailer contingent may even be able to force the rest of the drivers to abate their recklessness.

One alarm is sure to be sounded—that the trailer is about to destroy the American home. But the home has survived movies, jazz and companionate marriage, phonographs, saxophones, radio and the automobile without trailer. Hooking a bedroom to the gas tank may put the home out of business, but we doubt it. Nobody has yet explained how all the populace trailing about the country are going to earn a living. Trailers and airplanes notwithstanding, most of us are pretty firmly anchored.

Rural Carrier's Routine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial about the bird feeding permission given by Postmaster J. Farley to the rural carriers indicates that you have no idea what a rural carrier actually does in the performance of his daily duty.

Many of us have carried mail for over 30 years to the same families and the same homes. We have seen the babies as they grew up and in turn their babies as they grew up. We have had quite often beat the stork as we carried messages to neighbors, nurses or doctors; have given first-aid treatment to little fingers or toes as they needed first aid; have had to help in sickness and death, even arranged funerals.

We have extracted livestock from fences and called the veterinarian in emergency cases. In my years as a carrier I honestly believe I've done everything except act as a midwife. I know I've been Santa Claus over and over again. Many such things the P. M. G. did not order. One time I had to carry a tiny baby from its sick mother to where the old grandma lived several miles away. We cannot class such things as duties. They are all blessed privileges. Our patrons are not just patrons, they are more than that. They are our friends.

We are glad our P. M. G. thinks we should help feed the birds. Most of us have been doing that for years. A RURAL CARRIER.

Fanatics And Prophets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your scholarly editorial of yesterday, setting forth the reasons for your support of the school board in banning Scholastic for its pronouncement on peace, interested me both as a magazine editor, and as the head of a home and school association.

While it seems to me that the peace platform of Scholastic might have been expressed just as effectively with a better choice of words, at the same time we should not lose sight of the part played by "fanatics" in economic, social and political progress. From Galileo to the Wright brothers, we find many men who were described as fanatics, the majority demanding that they be put in jail as dangerous.

More often than not the fanatic is one who is out ahead of the procession, but later on when history is written and the procession catches up with him, he becomes a prophet.

"Tugwell Homes."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article on Government housing on December 4 is the truth.

President Roosevelt is right. If Russia, Germany, Italy and Norway can build homes for their people, why can't we? Tugwell homes helped thousands of unemployed men to make a decent living for their loved ones while they were, and are, being built.

They will also give good homes to many, and the low rental will help to lift the burden from the shoulder of the wage earner, who in the past has had his nose to the grindstone.

Very few builders would have benefited if they had built them for low wages, no contractor could have bought the material as cheaply as the Government.

If good homes and decent wages are a horrible crime for President Roosevelt to commit, the Nation will rise up and call him blessed for such noble deeds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dictatorship in Germany has reached that point where even mail entering that country from the United States and other places is being censored. Britain's Sovereignty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That was a good editorial you had on Dec. 11, "Ithuriel's Hour." This has been an affair of kings in England and it was left to Mr. Baldwin to supply the kingly touch. There can be no doubt now where the sovereignty resides in the British commonwealth. It inheres in the people and Commons. The whole great momentous action and decision should give sobering thought to other rulers.

Reply To A Teacher.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Emma C. Miller, in your columns of December 8, points to the danger of discussing vital problems in the classroom because "children of poor understanding" might tell their parents and their parents might complain. Teachers who present all sides of issues to their students should have no fear of losing their positions. If it is true that they do not now have this right; if, as Miss Miller says, they must hold back vital information about present-day problems for fear of outside censorship, then the Fascist spirit has already taken hold in this country.

Miss Miller says further: "We can not discuss in high school classrooms the debatable questions of history, for history is still in the making." That is an amusing view. Shall we wait 40 years or so to begin discussing the Townsend plan or the share-the-wealth plan? Shall we stop voting and bring all governmental operations to a halt until we see what future historians have to say? Should the founders of the Constitution have said, "Let's don't talk about these problems now, because history is in the making. These problems aren't settled yet, so we really shouldn't discuss them." The absurdity of this viewpoint must be obvious to all.

Miss Miller's final statement is that current newspapers are "safe only for minds that have been taught to weigh carefully what they read in the papers." Where are people going to be taught how to do this if they don't receive such instruction in the schools? The average adult certainly does not know how to do this. Why? Because he has had no training. He does not know when he is being propagandized. He has not been taught to examine all sides of a question. He does not know the best sources of information. He does not know how to be on the lookout for the activities of special interests. He did not receive this citizenship training in the schools and thus he went out into the world of work without knowing how to study public problems scientifically.

"Bad Taste."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The press informs us that Senator Wheeler, chairman of the Senate committee for the investigation of railroad financing, has appointed his own young son as assistant counsel to that committee. There is nothing illegal nor reprehensible about this but it certainly is unfair and is another example of the bad taste in Federal government. Only a few days ago the President appointed his own young son to the grade of lieutenant-colonel in the Marine Reserve, and put him on immediate active duty with pay. Now, here is another instance of the same kind.

This country severely suffers from a lack of discipline, morale, and public spirit and these petty methods are not contributing to improvement. Let this young man get out and take his chances with the rest of the young law students. There is no defense for this.

Amendment Needed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of November 27, "The Wrong Approach," you deprecate the need of a constitutional amendment to require competitive examinations as far as practicable in filling Government positions. May I suggest a reason, not immediately apparent, why such an amendment is not merely desirable but imperative to guard the merit system from being undermined?

For many years past Congress has been in the habit of excepting new agencies from the civil service act. In creating these agencies, not only the alphabetical, but the older ones, such as the Federal Reserve Board and others, in the past 20 years a proviso has been inserted in the act that appointments be made without regard to the civil service act. The President has ample authority to make exceptions from examinations and such a proviso by Congress was not merely unnecessary but mischievous since it prevented the President from requiring tests of fitness at any time in the future, however desirable. Only an amendment to the Constitution can curb Congress in making these harmful and adroit exceptions.

Praise For Tugwell Homes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To every one opposed to President Roosevelt's resettlement homes of the Tugwell plan, a thousand approve, because it gives work to unemployed (many veterans) and low cost housing to many that cannot afford better homes.

There was not one word of criticism about spending $16,000,000 on the new Supreme Court building, to replace the one room used in the United States Capitol for about a hundred years, where they break the laws which 450 lawyers in the House and Senate passed at a cost of a million a year of our money, but it seems to be a horrible crime to spend $8,000,000 to give 5,000 Americans decent homes to live in. England, Germany, Russia and Italy have built similar homes and their people have praised them.

President Roosevelt will be honored for this worthy cause when his critics are gone and forgotten.

Washington's Vision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an article published in the newspaper by the Gobel concern in which the company outlined its plans, it stated that plants similar to their proposed plant in Washington are in operation within six blocks of the most exclusive residential districts in New York and one of the largest plants in Pennsylvania adjoins the State capitol square in Harrisburg. Here is convincing proof that their rebuilt plant in Washington should not be a subject for complaint.

Washington, as the Capital, will never appeal to the country as a whole with merely Government buildings and parks. Only with a variety in its make-up can it ever expect to appeal to the people.

George Washington wanted the Capital to appeal to all of the people and his great skill and foresight proved to him that both commercial development and beauty in the city could be properly combined and that one need not be sacrificed for the other. E. M. A.,

Explanation Asked.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Through your columns will an enthusiastic admirer of "Gone With the Wind" enlighten the density of my ignorance.

The Civil War was valiantly fought by soldiers of the Confederacy in an attempt to enforce States' rights (certainly slavery had nothing to do with it). Seventy some years later the same "Solid South" valiantly assists in the destruction of States' rights.

What is the explanation?

The Post Impressionist

Home, Home, Sweet Home.

THE Old Timers had been discussing what the whole world had been talking about but they listened with their usual patience when Casual Smith started to discourse, even though he seemed to be changing the subject.

* * * *

Roisterers and gadabouts (said Casual Smith) say that home is where you go when all the other places are closed. Let it be admitted at once. Sometimes our flippancies are based on the soundest philosophy. What seems ribaldry is plain truth; a truth pondered over and realized by the Prodigal Son of the parable as he ate husks; a truth admitted by thousands of other prodigal sons since that time; a truth unchanged by modern details. Papa may no longer be a domestic monarch whose word is law; fields and flocks may have given way to radio and kitchenette; and the fatted calf may come from the delicatessen store in a small paper bag; but to the prodigal son home still contains that intangible something which seek where you will, as Mr. Payne has remarked, you will not find elsewhere.

Newspaper stories are briefly opened doors which give us glimpses of the insides of many homes. Not all of them are normal homes; probably not enough of them are so to make them a fair Gallup-cross-section; but the peeps are none the less enlightening. Few of the homes are old-fashioned homes; for they know the turbulence of modern times, the jazz of the radio and the finkle of the cocktail glasses. Indeed, some of the chance views seem to suggest case-histories from the note book of a psychopathist; but they are not without value to the student; and not the less valuable because they seldom mean what they seem to mean.

What some of them seem to mean is that home ties are weakening; and here they serve as evidence confirming other social testimony; ours; yours and mine; if not from our personal experience then from what we see about us and what we hear. Home, we say, is assuredly not what it used to be.

* * * *

It doesn't seem possible that we can be mistaken; but mistaken we probably are. Home in its essentials is exactly what it has always been; a place to go to when other places are closed.

So long as this urge for new home ties continues, and it will continue as long as humankind exists, it is folly and waste of time to worry over the future of the race. The race and the future have a way of taking care of themselves.

This desire to have a mate of your own, a family of your own and a home of your own is one of the fatal commonplaces. No social system that ignores it can possibly endure. No economic system is strong enough to successfully oppose a biological urge. Any system, to survive, must accept the family and all it implies. This is equally true of the enthusiasts who would turn the world into an ant-hill or a beehive (for here the family would die) and of the democracy that sets up a living symbol of its might (for the symbol may when his heart is tugged proclaim himself plain John Doe rather than King or Emperor.)

* * * *

"Ah, I knew you'd get round to it by and by," cried Demosthenes McGinnis. "Now what I was about to remark was—"

* * * *

The Parson didn't mean to be rude. He was just carried away by his thought and hadn't heard Mr. McGinnis. "I think we are in no danger of losing our family life in America," he said, "nor will family ties appreciably weaken. Nor have all the large families yet died out. I have in mind two especially large families; more than a dozen children in each. One lives in a large city in a house in a row. All the children have their duties. Each one has some particular thing to do to help mother. They are models of neatness because their father insists on it. They hang up their hats and coats on a particular hook when they enter the house and their overshoes are put where they belong. The other large family lives in a house in the suburbs of a large city. The children live in more or less haphazard fashion. They toss their clothes here and there and the visitor is likely to trip over toys in unexpected places. Once in a while one of the youngest will tumble downstairs. I don't pretend to know which is the better system. The parents in both cases are estimable people and good citizens. Still, it must be confessed, laughter is heard oftener in the careless house, and happy laughter."

* * * *

"How are we going to have large families when we all live in trailers?" demanded Demosthenes McGinnis. "Casual, your old formula will need revision. The Prodigal Son, instead of arising to go to his father, will drop him a postal card and have the old bus pick him up. Home, instead of being the place to go when all the other places are closed, will be the faithful old car that will pick up the Prodigal Son wherever he may happen to be stranded." GRIP ALEXANDER.

Fair Enough

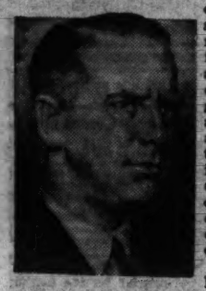
The American Interest.

IT WILL BE hard for our friends the British to admit that the row over Mrs. Simpson was our affair as well as theirs, but a little quiet inspection of the case will convince them that the decision either way was bound to affect not only us but the rest of the world. The British Empire, saving certain awkward variations in the outposts, is the only other great democracy in reasonably good political, social and military health. Anything which threatens to impair the character of that democracy or to blow the empire into scattered and defenseless units in a world of prowling bandits immediately affects this country.



Unlike the British publishers Rothermere and Beaverbrook, I claim no right to negotiate military alliances, but it may as well be recognized that we and the British represent everything that dictators hate. Dictatorship is spreading and spoiling for a fight, and the mere existence of the British Empire as a strong, sound democracy is a comfort which this country would not fully appreciate until it vanished, leaving us alone. We do nag each other, but we have in common free courts, the right to vote, religious freedom, free speech and a free press. We speak the same language and read the same literature, and we are envied and detested by the same potential enemies because our success with popular government is a constant refutation of every article on which they take their stand. We also stand together or stand aside in the Orient.

• • • •

SO WHEN the king began to sulk and pull down his lip this country immediately had an interest which was not only historical but practical, although, for candor's special sake, I will admit that the popular interest ended with the delicious scandal of the crush. And we shouldn't be blamed even for that, because, after all the scandal wasn't any of our doing but the sole responsibility of a man who always has shown a preference for the hard and flashy social parasites of his own country and ours.

He is said to have shown some earnest sympathy with the poor in England, but they were poor throughout his term as Prince of Wales, when he was playing the drums in night clubs, and certainly on his visits to the United States the Prince never sought the company of earnest Americans. Not to rub it in, but just for the record, the scandal arose from the conduct of the King of England in playing around with the wife of a brother officer, and the blow-off was due to his selfish refusal to play ball according to the conditions which he accepted when he took the job.

• • • •

"LOVE" is a word so cheapened by the husky mooing of the crooners and the panting and eye-rolling of moving picture people, on and off, that it ought to be accompanied by a smirk. But, to use it in its pure, obsolete meaning, the King was asked to make only a nominal sacrifice for love. Kings are allowed to have their unofficial love life without prejudice where the regulations make formal marriage inconvenient—a concession not available to common people. But he made an issue of a personal determination and wouldn't make the slight concession which would have avoided a dangerous situation and the possibility of a serious blow to the crown.

Yet thousands of younger people in whom romance was fresh and as dear as very life have given up marriage during his time in his country to support and care for aged parents or because they couldn't get work to support themselves and children. Such tragedies are common everywhere, and none but the neighbors mention the sacrifice—and they, like as not, in mockery.

Probably the crown won't suffer, after all, however stuffy York may be. It has been put in its place, and the sort of reforms which Edward is said to have projected can come from the people. But, though the British press has been first wrong, then hysterical, the nation gains respect for fighting out a dangerous, humiliating issue without flinching at a time when external dangers might have dictated a compromise of principle in a people of less character.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

His Majesty's Relief.

A pledge, a ring, a lady's hand.
A missing crown, a scepter gone . . .
But no more building dedications!

A weak defense for Cupid's shooting;
Some wedding bells, some flying rice . . .
And no more arm aches from saluting.

A gay defiance of state pleadings;
A whispered answer of "I do." . . .
An no more corner-stone proceedings.

A dizzy spell and loads of cooing;
A little palace just for two . . .
And no more endless troop reviewing!

A yachting trip, a honeymoon,
Two hearts that seem to boil and sizzle:
A man who takes the gal he loves . . .
And no more launchings in a drizzle!

Unceasing bliss, the sweetest thoughts,
The moonlight night, the warm embraces;
Just "Mr.-Mrs. Windsor" and . . .
No speeches at all sorts of places!

The happiness of married life,
Full freedom from convention's forces;
Just Eddie and "the better half" . . .

The Final Cropper.

We all knew Edward was a little uncertain in a saddle but few people had an idea he would fall from a throne.

They may shout it "The King is wed; long live the bridegroom!"

Edward's attitude is probably that it is going to feel swell not to have to review, dedicate or launch anything.

You can imagine Edward, after his marriage, sitting at breakfast with his charming bride and exclaiming with a look of happiness seldom seen on his face before, "Think of it, dear! Not a damned thing that I've got to do unless I wish to!"

"Lawyer Flies to Mrs. Simpson."—headline. As if she didn't have trouble enough!

The Broadway songster was in a peeve. His love lyric had failed to make the slightest impression. "Why," he squawked, "the audience was terrible. It was like singing a love song to a houseful of Stanley Baldwins."

Spanish War Reveals Dynamism Of Totalitarian Powers To Be Only Expansionism, Drawing France And Britain Together.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

WHILE antagonistic foreign forces are fighting each other in Spain and are openly using the Spanish troubles to fulfill their own ambitions, there appears to be at least one good feature of the Spanish civil war. It has brought the French and British viewpoints closer together than they have been in many years, and it is most generally admitted that, should such a rapprochement prove sound and durable, it is the best guarantee of European peace. In this the Spanish showdown may help to clear the situation.

On one hand, the Communist interference in Spain has been used by Germany, Italy and Japan as a pretext to unite into an alignment whose "dynamism" may well go beyond a mere anti-Communist drive. On the other hand, the potential danger of this very bloc of totalitarian, war-minded, unsatisfied nations which are ready to act together in Spain, in the Mediterranean, in Central Europe and elsewhere, has struck equally the French and the British peoples in their vital interests.

The Spanish revolution has been seized by the Fascist countries of Europe as an opportunity to isolate France by representing it as the natural ally of anarchy, and to weaken it by causing it to defend its hitherto unguarded Spanish frontier. But they have gone too far. By too much interference in Spain, by too much meddling in the Mediterranean Sea, by too many pacts, they have affected Great Britain. For the first time in many years, England is worried for the same causes and to the same extent as France and it is likely to react in much the same way. So, as an indirect consequence of the Spanish troubles, the signs are that the Franco-British entente will be revived.

Alliance With British A Tenet Of French Diplomacy.

ON THE FRENCH side, it is true, the Franco-British understanding has long been regarded as a fundamental of French diplomacy, the alliance "par excellence." Yet its smooth working has always been made difficult—if not impossible—by the attitude of a large body of the French public opinion.

Ever since the war ended, the French rightist elements or so-called nationalists have been in the habit of distrusting Great Britain on the ground that she was leading France toward concessions to Germany. In the past two years, they have again become distrustful of Englandon the ground that, for selffish reasons, it is standing in the way of Franco-Italian friendship. All in all, they have always regarded Great Britain as perfidious, unreliable and utterly imperial.

As to the leftist elements, or so-called liberals of France, they have aways blurred their keener sence of foreign policy with so many idealogies and universal panaceas that, until the British last year began wholeheartedly to support the League of Nations, they failed to speak the language which would win over the British.

NOW, the greater part of French public opinion agrees that the system of French friendship on the Continent does not look as sound as it used to. On one hand, the uncertainties of French foreign policy in recent years, on such questions as collective security, the Franco-German rapprochement, the Italo-French collaboration, have given rise to the feeling that France is isloted, that her ideologies have failed, that she must do something about it.

On the other hand, there also is a widespread feeling that, in the present diplomatic tension in Europe, the strengthening of French bonds in central and eastern Europe may entangle France in some unfortunate complications. As to the much discussed Franco-Russian mutual assistance pact, its strengthening into an out-and-out military alliance at this time would enrage a section of the French people and increase the domestic divisions now prevailing. The result is that the only card to play now is the English card.

Italo-German Campaign Stirs Distrust In France.

EVEN SUCH an ultra-nationalist and conservative newspaper as the Echo de Paris, which has been repeatedly accused of Fascist tendencies and pro-Italian or pro-German sympathies, is now showing its distrust for the newly launched, anti-Communistic Italo-German campaign. This is what Henri de Kerillis, its editor and a conservative, Italophile deputy, recently wrote:

"Japan feels more confidence in its plans regarding Asia by affirming it wants to destroy communism. Germany feels more confidence in its plans regarding Europe by affirming it wants to destroy communism. Russia feels more confidence for the spread of communism by proclaiming that she is fighting for the cause of the forgotten man, of labor.

"There is every reason to believe that Great Britain has not fallen into the trap of such false crusades. Should Japan have it its own way in Asia, should Germany triumph in Europe, should Italy rule the Mediterranean, Britain's old power would presently die out and disappear. Like France, she is interested in preserving the existing political order and, like France, she would only lose in the great changes which some nations are meditating and dreaming about."

On the British side, it appears that the Spanish affair was urst regarded as a showdown between order and disorder and it may even be that England extended some help to Gen. Franco and his rebel forces through Portugal. This now looks all the more possible as the beginning of the Spanish civil war coincided with a period when things looked none too good in France and many Englishmen thought the latter, also, might become anarchistic.

This attitude, however, has changed. Great Britain has been keenly sensible to the danger of a possible modification of the Mediterranean balance of power. The hasty recognition by Germany and Italy of Gen. Franco's rebel government, the public assertion in the House of Commons by Sir Anthony Eden that there were Italian volunteers in Mallorca, have led many Englishman to think that Germany and Italy may have taken sides too openly in the internal affairs of a foreign country. This may show more than a mere common hostility toward communism. Policing is usually regarded as nearly the same thing as expansion.

Cooperation Of Germany And Japan Long Suspected.

LE FIGARO, a French conservative newspaper, has recently given excerpts of the usually well-informed National Zeitung in Switzerland and the Frankfurter Zeitung, a German paper, tending to show that as far back as ten months ago Germany and Japan were considering the question of a new distribution of colonies, particularly British colonies. The paper added that Italy was willing to join the bloc of so-called "proletarian powers."

Today, under the anti-Bolschevik banner, the "proletarian," expansionist bloc appears to be sharpening its ambitions. There is no doubt, however, that the collaboration of the three leading expansionist and dictatorial countries in the world, Germany, Japan and Italy, pricks great Britain in her two most vital points: the Mediterranean and the Far East. The very life of the empire is affected.

The British Dominions which have long been concerned over Japan are now upset by its agreement with Germany. In England itself, Socialist opposition has become so violently anti-Hitler that it joins, on purley ideological grounds, the views of the old imperialist conservatives. There appears to be a rather general realization that French and British interests are alike.

Such interests are those of conservative, pacific nations of long democratic tradition. They are face to face with so-called "dynamic" nations preaching new crusades. But more and more Englishmen and Frenchmen are understanding that, as Mr. Walter Lippmann recently put it, such "dynamism" is but a new form of the old German expansionism, of the old Slav expansionism, of the old Japanese expansionism of prewar days.

This is why it has been unequivocally declared by the British Foreign Secretary for the first time since the war that all British military forces would side with France and Belgium, if they were attacked, in compliance with "existing obligations."

That is why the French Ambassador in London has been instructed by his government to let it be known that France would reciprocate the gesture and why it is expected that French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos will announce this publicly in the Chamber of Deputies during the next debate on foreign affairs.

"On second thought, maybe I should abdicate."

Abdication

By Barnet Nover

The King Goes—So The Monarchy May Remain.

IN THE LONG history of the monarchial system in Europe, there have been innumerable instances of kings who were forced to abdicate. Our own times offer no small number of examples. There was, in that sunset period of kings—the prewar era—the case of Manoel II of Portugal whose extravagant attentions to a French music hall dancer helped bring about his downfall.

There was Nicholas II, Czar of all the Russians, whose throne disappeared in the wake of a world-shaking revolution. There were the rulers of Germany and of the German states, of Austria-Hungary, of Turkey and of Bulgaria. Their peoples visited upon them the wrath reserved for those who had led their nations into disaster.

More recently, Alfonso XIII was forced to relinquish his crown when the tide of republican sentiment in Spain rose to great heights. In every instance except the Bulgarian, however, the abdication of the monarch coincided with or was quickly followed by the disappearance of the throne.

The only instance in recent history which shows any degree of similarity with the action taken by Edward VIII of Great Britain is that associated with the name of Carol II of Rumania. The "playboy of the Balkans" renounced the throne for an amour. The British monarch, less light-heartedly, to be sure, but none the less determinedly, abdicated because his personal desires did not coincide with his role as king.

Carol later had a change of heart. The rapidly shifting kaleidoscope of Rumanian politics ultimately offered him an opportunity to regain the throne he had forsaken. Thus Carol ate his cake and had it too. But David Windsor is hardly likely to have a similar opportunity. His "irrevocable decision" is likely to remain irrevocable.

• • • •

THE INSTITUTION of monarchy has, in our era, steadily lost ground. A striking illustration of this is that the Caesars and Napoleons of the present show no eagerness to place a crown on their heads as did their prototypes. And for good reason. The monarchic idea as such has, in most instances, lost its historic justification.

In the evolution of organized society from family to clan to nation the monarch was an essential institution. He represented either the unifying force of religion or the unifying force of military power, or both. That is why, inevitably, the number of kings tended to decline as the power of kings grew. But by the very act of establishing unity over large and integrated areas, kings paved the way for the decline of monarchies.

When nations, in the modern sense, arose the king became a vestigial organ, like the vermiform appendix in the human anatomy—to be let alone so long as it caused no trouble; to be removed when it did.

• • • •

TODAY, to a very large extent, monarchies where they exist do so only by sufferance. In return for the appearance of power, kings are expected to renounce its substance. When they obey this rule, and when their ceremonial value is believed by their subjects to overbalance the not inconsiderable expense of maintaining them and their families in comfort and luxury, they are permitted to remain.

That is certainly the case in the Scandinavian kingdoms, in the Netherlands, in Belgium and practically everywhere else on the continent where the institution of monarchy has survived the anti-dynastic developments of the last generation.

But even when the throne is hallowed by age, encrusted with tradition, buttressed by prestige, it is everywhere, even in Japan, a fragile institution. One moment it may, like a mirror, reflect the sun in all its glory; but like a mirror it can easily be shattered into a thousand fragments through the single misstep of its custodian. And once broken, it cannot easily be mended.

That is precisely why Edward VIII was forced to abdicate. For in seeking to do what his constitutional advisers believed he could not safely do and continue adequately to perform his function as king, the monarch was endangering the throne. Thus in taking a stand in opposition to the monarch Prime Minister Baldwin was not only fighting for the continued supremacy of parliament; he was also fighting for the maintenance of the throne.

• • • •

IT IS A STRANGE paradox. In the past, the parallel to the present-day antithesis of democracy-dictatorship was republic-monarchy. In the recent crisis in Great Britain, however, Baldwin found himself simultaneously fighting for democracy and monarchy.

The institution of monarchy, as the prime minister pointed out in his moving statement in the House of Commons, is no luxury for Great Britain; it is a real necessity. The British empire is undoubtedly held together by far more than the institution of the multiple crown. There is among the independent members a community of interest which, if forgotten in good times, is quickly recalled in moments of world confusion. Nonetheless the crown plays a valuable role in unifying loyalties.

In comparison with this vital need of preserving the British crown, the monarch's personal whims were of little importance. When it became clear that those desires tended to weaken the prestige of the throne there was no other course Mr. Baldwin could take than to oppose the king.

In forcing Edward VIII's abdication, the British government was eliminating the monarch in order to save the monarchy.

"Not Under Forty"

By William Lyon Phelps

Book By Willa Cather.

This is the title of a new and very short book by our distinguished American novelist Willa Cather. She calls it "Not Under Forty" because she does not believe the book will appeal to those under that age. In order to enjoy it one must be, first, really mature, and mature because of years and experience; second, one must be such an intense lover of books that even the merest gossip about them is as exciting as football gossip to lovers of athletic games. Third, one must have read considerably in European literature.

• • • •

Now I know that many of the readers of this column qualify on all three points; to them I recommend this little book with unqualified praise. And if those who are younger or less well-read should read it, its literary allusions might inspire them to become more well-read themselves, just as many persons have learned a foreign language because they have heard others speak it, and they cannot bear to remain in ignorance.

This is a volume whose secondary title describes its contents: It is "Studies of Literary Personalities and Certain Aspects of Literature." It is published by Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

• • • •

It contains literary conversations with a wonderful old lady on Turgenev and Flaubert, some remarks on the structure of novels, talks on literature with that astonishing woman, Mrs. Fields of Boston, a tribute to Sarah Orne Jewett, another to the famous living German novelist Thomas Mann, and a final tribute to Katherine Mansfield.

Apart from the sheer beauty of this book, the best thing about it is that the reader is enjoying an intimate conversation with one of the foremost living novelists—Willa Cather.

A New Deal for Civil Service

Public Inertia Main Bar To Civil Service Reform

A Nast cartoon of 1872 depicting President Grant offering civil service broth to Schurz, Sumner, Trumbull, Fenton and others. Caption read "Children Cry for It."

Weaknesses Inherent in Present System Can Be Overcome Only by Long and Intensive Educational Campaign.

This is the third article in a series by Robert C. Albright, of The Post's National News Staff, reciting the history of the merit system for the Federal civil service, what has been accomplished and what remains to be done in the way of legislation and administration to achieve the objective of a career service based on merit and not party spoils.

By Robert C. Albright.

"What's wrong with civil service?"

Correctly answer that query, and you probably have the answer to a much larger question:

"What's wrong with Government?"

One answer to both is—there is too large a gap between Federal civil service and Federal service based on merit.

Certain it is that existence of about 325,000 positions in the unclassified Federal service, outside the high competitive standards of the civil service law, presents the chief challenge to extension of the merit principle in Government.

There are many weaknesses in the executive civil service—technical weaknesses that can be overcome by improved administration and tighter personnel coordination. But until the last job has been removed from the reach of the political spoilsman, every effort to establish a uniform career service, on sound merit foundations, may be set to nought.

Public inertia on the ingrown American practices of patronage and spoils have been the main barriers to progress. Recognizing this as fundamental, organizations and students of Government dedicated to better management of public affairs, have launched a crusade of education that is beginning to yield its first fruits.

Recently business aid has been solicited, and no less a spokesman than Robert L. Johnson, vice-president of Time-Fortune, Inc., has taken over leadership of the National Civil Service Reform League, pioneer in the merit reform movement.

People Must Demand Improvement.

"I feel there is a place for the league as interpreter between the Government and the public," Johnson told a gathering of Federal personnel experts here. "It is your job to build Government personnel along the right lines. It is our job to see that the public understands and supports and demands extension of your work."

Civil Service Commissioner Leonard D. White, appealing for business aid in a radio address early this year, predicted that the campaign will gather momentum during 1936 and the years ahead.

"It is time for the business interests of the country through their chambers of commerce and industrial associations to take a stand upon this vital issue," White said. "The facts do not warrant a defeatist attitude. Our public service must be improved and will be improved just as rapidly as the people of the country demand improvement in no uncertain terms."

No. 1 on the commisison's list of recommendations to Congress last year was extension of the provisions of the civil service law and rules to recently created agencies which were by law placed outside the competitive classified services.

The last two sessions of Congress have exempted from the terms of the civil service act thousands of jobs in the newer agencies. There has been no corresponding cut in the number of workers under the competitive civil service. But as the number of Government workers has increased over the depression period—on October 31 there were 841,017 civilian employes in the executive branch—the percentage of merit workers has fallen.

The President single-handed has power to cover only about 15 per cent of these unclassified workers under civil service laws. The rest can be reached only by Congress, through repeal of existing exemptions.

Field Workers Should Be Included.

Probably the second outstanding need in rebuilding the Federal service on the merit principle is extension of the scope of the classification act to include positions in the field service which are not fixed by specific legislative schedule or wage board method, and to include the recently created agencies.

The classification act of 1923 applied only to the departmental offices in Washington. The field service, which embraces the great mass of Federal workers, is not classified except where departments have voluntarily extended the principle, and even where this has been done there is vast lack of consistency and uniformity. A sound start toward reclassification of the field service has been made by the personnel classification board, now a part of the civil service conditions, and specific proposals are before Congress.

Other weaknesses held to be jeopardizing the operation and spread of the merit system as it exists in the Government today, could be enumerated:

1. Lack of a career incentive to the rank and file of Federal workers, except in a few isolated bureaus specializing in work mainly of a professional or scientific nature. By and large, an efficient employe entering the Government service has no assurance that by diligent work he may advance up a clearly defined ladder, to the extent his abilities are demonstrated. Training of employes frequently is neglected.

2. Need of closer personnel supervision within the departments, and personnel co-ordination between the departments. The Civil Service Commission estimated that between 50 to 75 per cent of all personnel problems are due to inadequate supervision. Frequent turnover of department heads and their immediate assistants often is to blame.

Salaries Inadequate.

3. Inadequate salaries in some of the higher and intermediate posts, failing to attract men of higher capabilities and often enabling private concerns to skim off men of specialized talents. Salaries paid major executives by private concerns exceed those paid by the Government in positions of similar responsibility anywhere from 100 to 500 per cent. The personnel classification board found that in clerical, administrative, fiscal and sub-professional services, the Federal pay scale below $2,000 is more liberal than in private employment. Above the $2,000 class, it is less liberal for similar work.

4. Need for revision of present Federal retirement laws, and a failure to build up adequate reserves. Theoretically, most employes are still obliged to serve until 70, when retirement is mandatory. Many, forced by health to retire at an earlier age, receive only disability allowances until the retirement deadline is reached. Establishment of a uniform optional retirement age of 60 years, after 30 years of service, has been repeatedly recommended to Congress by the Civil Service Commission.

5. Discrimination against married workers. Section 213 of the economy act of 1932 provided that married persons living with husband or wife is in Government service, in hiring new personnel. The rule gives no weight to merit, to total family income, to the number of dependents, or other factors.

Veterans' Preference.

6. Need for amending veterans' preference laws and providing recognition for war service without endangering merit principles or efficiency. Under present regulations, a veteran making a passing grade of 70 in a civil service examination is placed ahead of all other nonveteran applicants. If a disabled veteran makes the below-passing grade of 60, 10 per cent additional is allowed, enabling him not only to pass, but placing him at the head of the list from which he will be appointed. Women's organizations have complained that veterans preference laws exclude women from many opportunities, and do violence to the merit theory. These hold that other means should be found of rewarding those who have served with the Nation's colors.

7. Need for revision or repeal of the apportionment rule of residence requirements in appointments, now stipulating that the number of residents of any one State who hold classified positions in Washington must be proportioned to population.

8. Lack of central board of appeals or disputes, to which a Federal employe might carry his complaint when instances of injustice arise.

9. Insufficient appropriations and personnel for the already overburdened United States Civil Service Commission to conduct and speedily grade necessary examinations, and perform its vast advisory and appointment functions.

To these might be added the need of more full time personnel officers, and designation of a personnel office in every agency; want of adequate co-operation between Federal, State and local administrations; insecurity of employes from dismissal for trivial, personal or arbitrary reasons; and shortcomings of the four year tenure law, which encourages large periodic turnovers in a large group of non-political offices.

Confusion in the public mind on what constitutes "civil service" also has been an important barrier to progress. Educational efforts are now being directed to clarify popular misconceptions. The average person frequently uses the term "civil service" synonymously with the "merit system." Properly, it designates all Government positions not in the military forces, whether appointment is by spoils, or competitive examinations. The merit system is limited to those jobs in the so-called "classified civil service," subject to the competitive requirements of the civil service act and rules. As of last June 30, there were 498,725 such jobs, compared with 325,534 unclassified Federal positions outside the merit principle.

Mr. Albright's fourth article in this series will appear tomorrow.

Shippers Urge I. C. C. to Halt Rail Surcharge

Warn Trucks Will Gain at Roads' Expense if High Rates Last.

By Sidney Olson.

More than a score of shippers appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to protest vigorously against further extension of emergency freight rates beyond January 1, the date set by the commission for their expiration.

The railroads of the country, which petitioned the day before for continuance of the surcharges until their entire base rate schedules are revised, a six-to-eight-month process, will be heard in final rebuttal of shippers' arguments late today at conclusion of the three-day hearings.

The commission, which has listened closely in full attendance on the case, is understood to be almost evenly divided over the rate extension. A six-to-five or seven-to-four decision in favor of the railroads is looked for at the present time, although Commission members have shown considerable impatience with arguments of representatives of railroads and railroad securities.

The parade of shippers to the stand was featured by an attack on the surcharges by Wilbur La Roe, jr., appearing for the paper industry of the country against the extension.

Says Emergency Is Ended.

La Roe, reminding the Commissioners they had allowed imposition of surcharges because an acute railroad emergency existed, said:

"That period of acute emergency no longer exists, as was proved by the railroad's own figures, introduced yesterday."

Referring to rail statistics for 1930, 1935 and 1936, La Roe contended the most important figures, those for 1932, had been left out; and that comparison of 1936 and 1932 figures showed no emergency had existed for some time.

The shipper invariably suffered, no matter how prosperous the rest of the country, by continuance of emergency rates, he indicated.

Other shippers' representatives contended that if the surcharges were further extended, much shipping carried by railroads will go by trucks. They said their companies had refrained from making necessary capital investment in trucking systems, driver relays, and so on, while awaiting commission action reducing tariffs toward the permanent base rates. If the commission further extends the surcharges beyond January 1, they said, it will indicate further delay in setting up shippers' trucking systems will be wasteful.

Hearing January 6.

The railroads, which have admitted the surcharges have yielded an average of $10,000,000 per month in revenues this year, today will present closing arguments for continuance of the surcharges until the commission can rule on advisability of partially offsetting permanent rate increases. That hearing is set for January 6.

Those appearing as representatives of shippers yesterday included:

J. S. Burchmore, National Industrial Traffic League; T. M. Henderson, Southern Traffic League; C. F. Hosford, jr., T. M. Woodward, E. C. Calhoun, of the National Bituminous Coal Commission; K. D. Loos, National Coal Association; J. J. Hickey, Anthracite Institute; J. V. Norman, Property Owners Commission; A. G. Gutheim, Coal Control Association of Western Pennsylvania; J. E. O'Tool, National Retail Coal Merchants; H. A. Hollopeter, C. F. A. Coke Producers; W. B. Faukner, Donner-Hanna Coke Corporation; D. C. Beelar, Chicago Coal Merchants; N. H. Kendall, Illinois Fuel Merchants Association; E. E. Williamson, Providence Gas Co.; R. D. Rynder, Swift & Co.; N. D. Belnap, Cudahy Packing Co.; W. H. Wagner, Iowa Packers; Parker McCollester, Newpaper Publishers; Wilbur La Roe, jr., paper industry; Ferdinand Born, Terre Haute Paper Co.; Edgar Watkins, National Wholesale Grocers Association; Edward P. Girl, 17, Charged With Gas Murder

Schenectary, N. Y., Dec. 11 (AP).—Josephine Coggins, 17, formerly of Carbondale, Pa., and known here as Mary Brady, was charged with homicide today as the result of the death by asphyxiation of her roommate, Miss Jean Kilczewski, 19, of Schenectady.

Miss Coggins is in a critical condition at a hospital here, under guard. Police said medical opinion was that she would not recover.

The girls were found in their gas-filled room on the third floor of a rooming house here when an employe smelled gas and opened the door with a master key.

Police Captain A. P. Mountain said an eight-page suicide note was found in the room, indicating the writer's jealousy of another girl whom she wrote she would "haunt" until she could "get even."

Roosevelt, Jr., Faces Operation on Monday

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 11 (AP).—A high temperature which prevented surgeons from operating on Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., to relieve an acute sinus infection yesterday was more nearly normal tonight, hospital officials said.

The operation probably will be performed Monday, they added.

Young Roosevelt's fiancee, Miss Ethel duPont, arrived at Phillips House of the Massachusetts General Hospital, where he is awaiting his operation, at noon today and remained with him all afternoon.

War Debt Note Of British Stirs Hope of Accord

Omits Phrase Relative to Inability, in Notifying U. S. of Default.

A significant omission in the usual war-debt default note from Great Britain yesterday aroused speculation in Washington once again over the possibility that new debt discussions may be opened.

The British note, informing the State Department, as usual, that the semiannual payment due from Great Britain on December 15 would be defaulted, omitted the usual statement that Great Britain was unable to meet the regular installments on its $5,029,163,198 debt, which have been in default since 1933.

The hope was expressed in some quarters Britain might follow the French lead in making preliminary overtures leading to discussions of the debts again.

Britain on December 15 will owe $117,670,765 on its regular six-month payment, together with $668,474,071 already in arrears.

The usual British statement had said no new reasons had been found to warrant a resumption of payment. The present note, omitting that phrase, said, in accordance with previous assertions, the British government would be "glad to reopen negotiations whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that a more satisfactory result might be reached."

No formal approach has been made, however.

20 Seamstresses Overcome by Gas

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 11 (AP).—Gas seeping into their second-floor quarters overcame more than 20 women engaged in a WPA sewing project today. Eighteen were taken to hospitals for oxygen treatment.

Dr. W. J. Cameron, called to give first aid at the scene, expressed belief none was in serious condition. Crowds surged about the front of the building as the unconscious women were carried to ambulances by police and firemen.

Police Capt. John F. O'Brien said monoxide gas from a first-floor garage in the building may have overcome the women.

Free Tuberculosis Tests Completed

The series of free x-ray chest examinations of all senior high school students showing positive tuberculin test reaction was completed yesterday at Eastern and Roosevelt High Schools.

These tests are conducted under the direction of the District Health Department, and financed by the Christmas seals funds of the Tuberculosis Association.

Today, in addition to the high school examinations, similar free examinations will be given 800 students of Howard University.

Nazi Persecutions Cited in Murder Case

Chur, Switzerland, Dec. 11 (AP).—The trial of David Frankfurter, Jewish medical student accused of killing the German Nazi leader in Switzerland, tonight turned into a hearing of Jewry's charges against Germany.

The defense attorney, Dr. Eugene Curti, introduced as evidence six huge albums of photographs which he said showed various phases of Germany's anti-Semetic campaign since 1933.

Frankfurter has confessed to shooting Wilhelm Gustloff, leader of Nazis in this country, as a protest against anti-Semitism in Germany.

Reich Scores Soviet For Arresting Nazis

Berlin, Dec. 11 (AP).—Germany today renewed protests to Moscow against further arrests of German citizens, but got no satisfaction, a semi-official statement said tonight.

The announcement said 32 Germans were in custody in Russia on charges of sabotage.

(Emil I. Stickling, a German engineer, was sentenced to death in Russia in November for plotting against the Soviet regime and causing the death of 14 miners by sabotage, but his sentence was commuted to 10 years' imprisonment after the German Embassy intervened.)

Boy, 6, Drowned.

Stevensville, Md., Dec. 11 (AP).—Funeral services were held here today for Carl Kolata, 6-year-old boy who fell through the thin ice of a reservoir here Tuesday and drowned. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kolata. Burial was in the Stevensville Cemetery.

Clevenger Case Murderer Dies In GasChamber

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 11.—Martin Moore, 22-year-old colored youth, was executed in North Carolina's gas chamber today for the hotel-room slaying of Helen Clevenger, New York University student, in Asheville last July.

The former hotel bellboy, a hulking giant who had previously confessed, officers said, that he shot and beat the 18-year-old victim to death, was pronounced dead at 10:46 a. m., 12½ minutes after he entered the death chamber.

At the last moment Warden H. H. Honeycutt said Moore repudiated the confession previously ascribed to him by Parole Commissioner Edwin M. Gill and several officers.

Before being led from his cell, the Negro and two ministers of his race joined in singing a hymn, "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Savior."

After being strapped in the death chair, Moore was asked if he had anything further to say.

"No sir," he replied.

Miss Clevenger, whose home was on Staten Island, was found dead in her hotel room early on the morning of July 6. For nearly a month her slaying baffled officers. Then Moore was arrested and, after a week's trial, was convicted August 22. He denied his guilt, but the court allowed the introduction of a purported confession which Sheriff Laurence E. Brown and other officers said he made voluntarily.

A final effort to delay his execution was made early this week by a group of Asheville Negroes who sought a reprieve, asserting they believed complete details of the slaying had not been learned.

Helen Clevenger was born in Washington, on Fifth street northwest, near Shepherd street. She lived here for many years when her father was with the Department of Agriculture as a scientist.

Police Dog Saves Life of Salesman In Suicide Effort

"Joe," handsome 3-year-old police dog, saved Harry Thorn, 39, former Northeast Motor Co. salesman, from death by asphyxiation in a gas-filled garage at 643 Maryland avenue northeast early yesterday.

It was the habit of Thorn to let the dog roam about the garage, where he is employed as a watchman during the night. Yesterday, worried over financial reverses, Thorn told police, he decided to end his life, and tied the dog outside before taking gas.

Cries of the dog awakened nearby residents, who called his owner, Frank Steger, of 1841 Columbia road northwest. Steger arrived at the garage, found Thorn unconscious. Taken to Gallinger Hospital, Thorn was said to be not in a serious condition.

The salesman last lived in the 400 block of Webster street northwest. He has a wife and three children who live in Oklahoma.

Pope Displays New Strength, Gets Stimulant

Vatican City, Dec. 11.—Pope Pius displayed new strength today in his fight against partial leg paralysis, but his physician prescribed stimulants to correct irregularity of his heart action.

He endured the most prolonged activity since he was stricken last Saturday, talking for nearly an hour with the Archbishop of Toledo, Spain, about events in that strife-torn country.

Vatican sources have asserted the 79-year-old pontiff's worries over the Spanish struggle, in which Catholic leaders and church property have been reported attacked, were in part responsible for the Holy Father's collapse.

Dr. Amanti Milani, his physician, ordered discontinuance of the application of hot packs to the Pope's chest. They had been used to stimulate circulation.

Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, printed an official bulletin saying:

The progressive improvement previously noticed in the Pope's condition continues most satisfactorily.

The local disturbance, which necessitates some further period or rest, has moderated.

Chinese Capture 5,000 Irregulars

Peiping (Saturday), Dec. 12 (U.P.).—Chinese dispatches today said that 5,000 irregulars and 200 officers under Wang Ying, pro-Japanese Mongol war lord, had surrendered to Chinese provincial troops at Kweihua. One rumor was that Ying had been assassinated.

U. S. Fines, Jails 2 Men in 'Obscene Literature' Case

Henry Marcus, president of Best Publishing Co., of New York, and John F. Edwards, president of the Reliance News Co, Inc., of New York, yesterday were sentenced to serve three months in jail and pay fines of $1,000 each in the United States District Court at Baltimore on charges of violating Federal laws prohibiting interstate transportation of obscene literature. The charges were made after Department of Justice agents investigated several magazines being sold on newstands in this city.

Announcement that the men had been fined and sentenced was made by the Department of Justice, which began its investigation in September of last year. The magazines involved, the department said, included "Stolen Sweets" and "Ginger."

Ickes Gave $1,100 In Campaign Funds

By the Associated Press.

Campaign contributions totalling $1,100 by Secretary of Interior Ickes were reported yesterday by the special Senate committee investigating political spending. They included $1,000 to the Democratic Party and $100 to the personal fund of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska.

Other donations disclosed included $5,000 from Henry Morgenthau, of New York, father of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Largest contributions on yesterday's list were $12,400 from Hugh D. Auchincloss, of Washington, and $10,200 from J. R. McCuen, of Pittsburgh, both to Republican campaign funds.

Samuel Herbert McVitty, Salem, Va., was listed as a $1,700 contributor to Republican organizations. Democratic contributors listed included:

O. Max Gardner, Washington, $2,500, and P. S. Arkwright, Atlanta, Ga., $1,700.

19 of Black Legion To Be Tried in Plot

Detroit, Dec. 11 (AP).—The State struck at the political aims of the Black Legion today, winning the right to try on criminal syndicalism charges 19 men accused of conspiring in the night-riding organization to overthrow the government.

The men were named in a grand jury report August 21 as having advocated "crime, sabotage, violence or other forms of terrorism as a means of accomplishing industrial or political reform."

Common Pleas Judge Ned Smith concluded the preliminary examination today by ordering them held for trial. One of the 22 originally indicted, Viggo C. Rasmussen, suburban Highland Park policeman, was released.

Science Churches Announce Topic

"God the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 16:1: "Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth our fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love." (I John 4:18).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "He that touches the hem of Christ's robe and masters his mortal beliefs, animality, and hate, rejoices in the proof of healing—in a sweet and certain sense that God is Love."

'Revealing Christ' Is Perkins' Theme

"The Revealing Christ" is the subject on which the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins, D. D., pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Universalist National Memorial Church. The sermon is the third in a series of Advent sermons on "Jesus in the Life of Today."

Thomas C. Parker, assistant director of the Federal Art Project, will lead a discussion on the project's activities at the 10:15 a. m. meeting of the Adult Forum.

All Souls' Church, Unitarian. The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Making Ready for Christmas." Judge C. S. Lobingier will lecture before the Adult Comparative Religion Class on "The Bible As a Law Book."

New Vestments for Mass.

New purple vestments from Cologne, Germany, will be worn at the singing of solemn high mass at 11:15 a. m. tomorrow in the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor, will sing the mass, and the Rev. Francis P. Harrity will preach the sermon. The mass of the Good Shepherd by Turner will be sung by the boy choristers.

Rev. H. G. Burroughs Will Preach Tomorrow

The Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of the newly organized Spiritualist Church, the Church of Two Worlds, will give an address at the Hotel Continental at 8 p. m., tomorrow. Max Kobra, violinist, will be soloist of the evening.

Reform Federation to Hold Peace Meeting Tomorrow

Bishop Freeman Will Preside at Gathering to Unite Protestant, Catholic and Jewish Congregations.

A rally to unite Protestants, Jews and Catholics in a movement to end war will be staged in Foundry M. E. Church tomorrow night, with several prominent local clergymen participating.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, will preside over the meeting arranged by the International Reform Federation. Others taking part in the exercises will include Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Church; Clinton N. Howard, chairman of the World Peace Commission; Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, and Dr. Mordecai Wyatt Johnson, president of Howard University.

The objective of tomorrow night's meeting according to William Sheafe Chase, superintendent of the federation, will be to inaugurate a movement for the union of all religious forces. "The pronouncements made by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull at Buenos Aires," he said yesterday, "make the present a happily propitious time for our country to take the lead as only America can take it most effectively, for world peace."

Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. services on "Moral Reality." At the evening hour his subject will be "Lengthened Ropes." At the 8 p. m. service R. Deane Shure, director of music, will play a group of compositions of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Jackson, a local composer who is organist at Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. The Takoma Park Women's Club Chorus, directed by Mrs. Edmund L. Green, will sing two numbers.

Petworth M. E. Church. The Rev. R. L. Wood, pastor, will have charge of the annual Christmas carol service to be presented tomorrow night. The three choirs, with a total of 120 voices, will sing the processional hymn, and a concluding chorus. At 11 a. m. the pastor will preach on "The Madness of Religion."

Dumbarton Avenue M. E. Church. The Rev. Walter F. Atkinson, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Divine Provision." The sermon to the children will be on "Giving Gifts." A carol candlelight service has been prepared by the director of music for the evening worship.

Lincoln Road M. E. Church. Christmas carols will be sung in all departments of the church school at 9:45 a. m. The Rev. R. H. Stone, pastor, will preach on "The Word Was Made Flesh" at 11 a. m. and on "The Incarnation" at 8 p. m.

Congress Street M. P. Church. The Rev. Hirl A. Kester, pastor, preaches in the morning on "Mary's Vision," and at 8 p. m. on "I Saw a Vision." Dr. J. Frank Butts, director of the Bureau of Sanitary Inspection, will address the Harrison Bible Class at 9:45 a. m.

McKendree M. E. Church. The Rev. Samuel E. Rose, pastor, will preach on "The Lord's Secret" at 11 a. m., and on "The Armageddon" at 8 p. m. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ward will sing.

Eldbrooke M. E. Church. The Rev. Walter M. Michael, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "What Do You Think of the Church?" and at 8 p. m. on "Extendnig Our Influences." Members of Singleton and Stansbury lodges of Masons and members of Chevy Chase, Friendship, Ruth and Washington Centennial chapters of the Eastern Star will attend evening service.

Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. A. B. Potorf, professor of Bible at the American University, will be guest preacher at 11 a. m. service. Dr. Ralph Dela Smith, pastor, will preach on "The Gifts of the Wise Men," at 8 o'clock.

Chevy Chase Methodist Episcopal Church. The Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor, has selected "The Secret of Living Victorious" for his 11 a. m. sermon subject.

Francis Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church. The Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. on "The Power of God," and at 8 p. m. on "The Final Authority."

Lewis Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church. The Rev. John A. Trader, pastor, preaches at 11 a. m. on "On to Bethlehem." An illustrated sermon will be presented at 8 o'clock.

Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Dan L. Ennis, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. on "Jesus' Exquisite Sympathy," and at 8 p. m. on "Nathaniel—a Pure Mind."

Calvary M. E. Church South. The Rev. W. D. Keene, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Incarnate Word," and at the evening service on "Christ Is the Morning Star of Our Modern World."

Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church. The Rev. William Andrew Keese, pastor, will preach on "The Benedictus" tomorrow morning. Advent music will be played by Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, organist, and sung by the vested choir, of which Harlan Randall is director.

Ryland Methodist Episcopal Church. "The Shepherds' Christmas" is the Rev. Karl Newell's sermon subject for the 11 a. m. service. In the evening he will give Dickens' "Chrismas Carol" as a story sermon. It will be followed by a fellowship hour featuring a Christmas carol contest.

Window Dedication Set at St. Mark's

Three new stained glass windows, recently installed in St. Mark's Episcopal Church, will be dedicated by the rector, the Rev. William Moody, at 11 a. m. services tomorrow.

The windows, of English and German glass, but made by an American firm, form a notal addition to the church, which already has several important window pieces. Representing King David, St. Christopher and Moses, the new windows in the clerestory of the church, are to be dedicated, respectively, to the memory of David Meade Lea; William Billings Trott and Artimesia, Margaret and Alice Bean.

Mr. Lea, a man prominent in business and civic affairs, died in 1932. At that time he was senior warden of the church. The window is given by his widow. The St. Christopher window is given by his many friends in memory of Mr. Trott, former organist and choirmaster who died two years ago at the age of 93. The Moses window, provide for in the will of hte late Mrs. Alice Bean, is in memory of members of her family.

Dr. Moody will preach at the dedicatory service tomorrow morning.

Bradley-Hume Wedding Solemnized in Georgetown

Mr. James Orme, of New York, Gives Niece Away at Old Christ Church; Virginians Are Among Marriage Guests.

By Dudley Harmon.

In the presence of members of the two families and close friends, Miss Mary Murray Hume, daughter of Mrs. Rawlins Hume, of Washington, and the late Mr. Hume, was married yesterday afternoon to Dr. Thomas Bradley, son of Mrs. Thomas Bradley of this city and the late Mr. Bradley. Old Christ Church in Georgetown was the scene of the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Gillespie Armstrong at 4:30. The church was decorated with tropical ferns and Easter lilies.

The bride entered on the arm of her uncle, Mr. James Orme, of New York City, who gave her in marriage, and her only attendants were her sister, Mrs. Frederick Hitz, and Mrs. Joseph McCammon, her cousin.

Her gown of white satin had a yoke of rose point lace which her mother wore at her wedding. Her cap was trimmed with the same lace and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Her attendants were dressed alike in gowns of white chiffon with American beauty sashes of the same material. They wore coronets of lacquered lilies in their hair and carried shower bouquets of rubrum lilies, whose red and white shades matched their gowns.

Mr. Fontaine Bradley served as his brother's best man and the ushers were Mr. Frederick M. Bradley, another brother, Mr. Charles H. Bradley, a cousin, Dr. Allan E. Walker, Dr. Alva Daughton, Mr. Alfred T. Hobson and Mr. Frank Dexter, all of Washington, and Mr. Frank Dexter Cheney, of Manchester, Conn.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. Edward deS. Melcher, of New York, Mr. Nathaniel Clifford, of Fitchburg, Mass., the bride's brother-in-law; and Miss Virginia Randolph and Miss Hilda Hordern, of Warrenton, Va.

Others at the wedding were Dr. and Mrs. C. Stanley, Mrs. James R. Ellerson, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Meem, Miss Mary Banks, Mrs. C. R. Johnson, Mrs. Heram Hollereth and Miss Mary Bradley, a cousin of the bridegroom.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Hitz, held a reception after the ceremony at the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. William Hitz, who is now traveling in Europe. The table in the dining room was decorated with white chrysanthemums and white candles, and in the center was a wedding cake. Mrs. Hume, the bride's mother, wore a frock of green lace and Mrs. Bradford was gowned in blue crepe and a sable scarf. Both wore corsages of gardenias.

After the reception Dr. Bradley and his bride left for a wedding trip. The bride was wearing a dark green tailored suit trimmed with mink and a green hat trimmed with the same fur, and carried a mink muff. After January 1 the couple will be at home at 1601 Twenty-eighth street in Georgetown.

The bride, a graduate of Gunston Hall, made her debut here several seasons ago. Dr. Bradley was graduated from the University of Virginia and is associated in Washington with Dr. Harry Kerr.

Miss Caldwell Will Bow Today

Mrs. George Kearsley Caldwell is presenting her daughter, Miss Kearsley Caldwell, at a tea dance this afternoon in the Mayflower. Assisting the debutante will be the Misses Hebe Reynolds, Martha Talley, Gertrude Pearson, Henrietta Talbott and Jane Ramseyer.

Miss Caldwell will wear a frock of white crepe with a fitted jacket and carry a bouquet of red roses. Her mother's gown is black velvet made with a slightly draped neckline. She will wear a corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Caldwell will be assisted by her three sisters, Mrs. John Harmon Snyder, Mrs. M. W. Stearns, of Center-Lowell, Maine, and Mrs. A. L. Tunstall, of Mountclair, N. J. Also assisting her will be: Miss Portia Oberley, Miss Gertrude Lutz, and Mrs. Howard Snyder.

The debutante's brother, Mr. Davis Caldwell, of New York City, and her cousin, Mr. Eckley Stearns, of Center-Lowell, Maine, are here for the function, which will be given in the garden of the hotel. Red roses and stevia will be used for table decorations.

Daughter of Envoy Plans Christmas With N. Y. Friends

Miss Maria Trucco, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile, will spend the Christmas season in New York with Dr. Juan Sacasa, Mme. Sacasa, and their two daughters, the Misses Maruca and Gloria Sacasa. Dr. Sacasa, former President of Nicaragua, and his family are now making their home in New York.

The Misses Sacasa will return with Miss Trucco shortly after Christmas to visit her at the embassy over New Year's Day.

Theta Tau to Initiate 5 New Members Today

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Little Fathy Helmy, sone of the agricultural attache of the Egyptian legation, who speaks four languages, the other morning was posing for pictures to be used in connection with the Christmas broadcast of the children of all of the embassies and legations here, which will take place in the Shoreham ballroom on December 21. Fathy regarded the cameraman and his "box" with serious round eyes and after he had posed a number of times walked over to examine it, acting as though he knew more about this business of clicking lenses than most of his elders do.

Another interesting youngster who is taking part in the international broadcast is Martin Althaus, son of the Peruvian Naval Attache, and Senora de Althaus. A young chap of four winters, he speaks German, English and Spanish fluently.

What would you think of a shoe size 37? Yes, we, too, were astounded and had visions of a person who would completely dwarf the Monument. However, the story soon cleared it all up. The Tom McAvoys were the bearers of this surprising bit of information. While they were down in Buenos Aires, Frances, whose trousseau was plentifully stocked with everything one could need in the way of clothes suitable for this climate, suddenly discovered, to her discomfort, that she had reckoned without considering the climate below the equator. So a-shopping she did go. First on the list of things to buy were shoes. In the course of her hunt for footgear she found no two pairs of shoes were alike—that exactly—because they were not made by patterns as are ours here, but are cleverly copied from those seen on the screen or in magazine pictures, to fit the feet of the buyer. Thus, there are any number of sizes. Frances McAvoy, who wears a six, was horrified when informed that her South American size was 37.

Jack Nicolls not only remembers faces and names of people he has met, but goes further. The other evening at the Pall Mall room he was introduced to a group of young people at a table near his own. Among those he met was Mary Munroe. Following the introduction, Jack thoughtfully regarded the titian-haired young girl (she, by the way, certainly knows her horses) and then came out with——

"Didn't I see you going into such and such a shop on Connecticut avenue a little before 6 this evening?"

He did. Each had been on a shopping expedition.

Women's Groups Will Gather Today To Hear Better Housing Discussed

Alley Clearance, Model Apartment in Southwest Planned.

Better housing and the construction of model apartments and alley clearance in Southwest Washington will be discussed at the luncheon meeting of the joint committee on better housing representing the American Association of University Women, the Women's City Club and the Board of Trustees of the Barney Neighborhood House at the American Association of University Women at 1:15 p. m. today.

Mrs. Harvey Wiley, who has a really constructive and comprehensive knowledge of the housing conditions and needs and projects in the District of Columbia, will preside at the meeting.

Plans for the clearance of an alley and the construction of model apartments in Southwest Washington will be presented by Mr. R. B. Turner and Dr. Leroy Halbert.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, will talk on "Housing Conditions of Self-Respecting Citizens in the Southwest."

Mrs. Alton R. Hodgkins and Miss Laura Silsby will be hostesses at the monthly bridge luncheon of the American Association of University Women today at 1:15 p. m. A Christmas party is planned.

Members will meet in the lounge tonight at 8 o'clock for the third old-fashioned square dance sponsored by the club this year. Mrs. Willed S. Crane is teaching the waltz quadrille, the mazurka, lancers, contras, the Money Musk and other old-fashioned dances to members who care to learn them. The group meets the second and fourth Saturdays of each month. Mrs. F. C. Brown is in charge of the section.

To stimulate interest in creative writing, the poetry section of the American Association of University Women is conducting the fifth annual poetry contest for undergraduate students in the colleges and universities of the District of Columbia and vicinity.

Students from the following colleges are invited to compete for the three prizes: American University, Gallaudet College, Georgetown University, George Washington University, Wilson Teachers College, Trinity College and the University of Maryland. The contest will close January 16, 1937. Information regarding it may be obtained through the English department of the institutions or at American Association of University Women Clubhouse.

Miss Ruth Henderson, chairman of the poetry group, is in charge of the contest. Other members of the committee are Miss Mary Louise Brown, Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, Miss Alberta Walker, Miss Grace Barnes and Miss Elizabeth Peet.

Awards will be made at a dinner at the clubhouse February 17, 1937.

Delegates who attend the D. A. R. Congress next April will be surprised at the changed appearance of Eighteenth street at the entrance to stately Constitution Hall.

Spacious lawns will front the building, and perhaps by the time of the Continental Congress, the last of the war-time barracks near Constitution Hall will have been demolished.

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R., today pointed to the changes that have taken place. She said:

"Surely those who planned our D. A. R. Headquarters, the largest group of buildings in the world built and financed entirely by a woman's organization, were guided by a Divine Hand.

"When Memorial Continental Hall was built in 1904, nothing much was thought about the rear end of the block reaching along Eighteenth street. Time passed on and when the World War came, the Eighteenth street side of the D. A. R. property became fringed about with stucco plastered war-time buildings. They still were there when the D. A. R. built Constitution Hall in 1928-1929.

"Construction of Constitution Hall was a vast improvement to Eighteenth street and it was in keeping with the Federal plans developed a few years later.

"The stately Interior Department Building enhances the beauty of Constitution Hall and makes the D. A. R. group of buildings one of the finest in the Nation's Capital.

Miss Leah Watters, of Lockport, N. Y., spoke on "Edinburgh, Burns and Scott" at the meeting of the Women's Alliance of All Souls' Unitarian Church yesterday. The lecture was illustrated. Mrs. Fred G. Harden was hostess at the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. B. R. Sonnen, Mrs. A. F. Spanhoofd, Mrs. Arthur Bryant, Mrs. F. O. Smith, Miss Helen Nichols, Mrs. W. F. Lawrence, Mrs. W. E. Bryant, Miss Ruth Hendershott, Mrs. W. R. Johnston, Mrs. T. L. Hutton and Mrs. J. C. Settle.

Mrs. William C. Teubner, regent of the E Pluribus Unum Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, presided at the meeting in the Wedgewood room of 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. Thursday night, when a special feature of the meeting was the collection of gifts for the annual Christmas barrel which is sent each year to the Hindman School, a mountain school in Kentucky. Attractive presents always are sent, and also clothing. Mrs. Lyle R. Mabrey is in charge of this feature this year.

Another important feature of Thursday's meeting was the ceremonial acceptance into this chapter of four new members and one transferred from another chapter. The new members are:

Mrs. C. P. Katlett, Mrs. L. G. Fishach, Mrs. William Gordon Hills and Mrs. Charles E. Hughes, jr.

The transferred member is Mrs. Rosalie Field Doss.

Mrs. Fulton R. Gordon gave a program of songs appropriate to the Christmas season. Mr. Ted Fields gave impersonations that won much applause.

Mrs. E. E. Curry reported on the November banquet and Mrs. Contee S. Ficklen on the tea and sale held December 5 for patriotic and educational funds. From this benefit a sum was raised to give one full scholarship to a deserving child for the Hindman School.

The first social meeting of the Washington Research Club will be a dinner in honor of the new superintendents of schools at the Mayflower Hotel on Monday, December 14, at 6:45 p. m.

Dr. Charles Tansill, head of the history department of the American University, of this city, will be the guest speaker. Dr. Tansill is nationally known in the field of history. He has recently returned from Germany, where he was sent by the Carl Schurz Foundation for purposes of promoting friendly relations. The subject of Dr. Tansill's talk is "Modern Trends in Biography." The members of the Research Club feel fortunate in having Dr. Tansill as the first speaker of what is expected to be a very successful year.

The present officers of the club are: President, Mrs. Dora Bresler; vice president, Miss M. Neeb; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. Percy; recording secretary, Miss C. M. Roach; treasurer, Mrs. R. Hall.

Among those attending the Kappa Kappa Gamma Alumnae Association dinner dance Wednesday evening at the Shoreham Hotel were: Mr. and Mrs. Archie Burgers, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Calhoun, Miss Martha Coffin, Mr. Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Banks Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Grove, Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hamilton Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Rothballer, Miss Suzanne Waters, Mr. Stimson and Mr. and Mrs. Torrence Wolford.

A tacky party will be held at Klein's Tavern, Rhode Island avenue at the District line, Saturday, December 19, by the Michigan Washington Democratic Club.

This party will be the last for this year. Music, dancing, refreshments will add to the gayety. All Michigan residents are invited.

The Service Council, an auxiliary of the Jewish Community Center, is sponsoring a minstrel show, "Hot Peppers," followed by dancing to music by Barnee and Shorham Hotel Orchestra, tomorrow evening at 8:15 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center auditorium, Sixteenth and Q streets. The Service Council was organized four years ago and is composed of young men and women interested in promoting the activities of the Jewish Community Center. This is the first time an activity of this type has been attempted and it is hoped that it will become an annual affair. The board of trustees, of which Mr. Benjamin Ourisman is president, is assisting the Service Council. Members of the Service Council are in the cast which is under the personal direction of Mr. Bernie Fischgrund, well-known director of this city.

Part of the proceeds of the minstrel is to be used to furnish a recreation room for the boys' and girls' clubs of the center. Mr. Lee W. Cowan, general manager for the Service Council, is being assisted by a committee on which the Misses Ann and Sadie Edlavitch, Henrietta Halam, Hilda Levy, Theresa Shefferman and Mr. Henry Salus are serving. Mr. Benjamin Goldstein, president of the Service Council; Mr. Benjamin Ourisman, president of the Jewish Community Center; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Viner, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Turover, Mr. and Mrs. Burnette Siman, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Streett, Mr. and Mrs. Moe Offenberg, Mr. and Mrs. David Weiner, Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Hershfield, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg and other members of the board of the center are to be patrons for the evening.

The Inauguration Dinner Rumored at Welles' House

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Rumor has it that the dinner inauguration eve, January 19, will be given by the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles at their home on Massachusetts avenue. With their stay in South America dependent on the duration of the peace conference, there is a possibility of course that they may not be able to return to the Capital in time to carry out such plans.

Naturally, no invitations have been issued because no one as yet has any idea just when the Buenos Aires parley will end. The approach of the New Year, however, with the inauguration coming close on the heels of the holidays, gives rise to speculation as to what the January social calendar may include in addition to the schedule of state functions at the White House already announced.

The peak of the inaugural festivities is reached the night preceding the ceremonies, with the ball inauguration night to complete the round of entertaining. In addition to the dinner always given by one of the Capital's leading hostesses for the Governors of the various States and other distinguished visitors in the Capital, there are countless smaller functions, including those arranged by the State societies honoring official representatives from their home States.

In the past, the inaugural eve dinner was usually given by the John R. McLeans and later by the Edward Beale McLeans. On the eve of President Roosevelt's first inauguration four years ago, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean entertained at a brilliant affair at the Sulgrave Club. This season, she is not expected to repeat the function because of the large dinner and ball for which she has issued invitations on New Year's.

The last official inaugural ball was given in the administration of William Howard Taft. Since then, the party on inauguration night has been held under the sponsorship of prominent Washington women, headed by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, who has been responsible for the success of four such occasions. Proceeds of the last were given to the Community Chest.

This year, all plans await the arrival of the President from South America the first of the week. Mrs. Dougherty, who has as her guest Mrs. Fenton B. Turck, of New York, and is entertaining at dinner for her on Tuesday, said last night nothing had even been discussed regarding it.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who has accepted the chairmanship of the inaugural ceremonies, has been busy with Red Cross work since his return from abroad and is preparing to devote attention to inauguration plans after the President's arrival. He and Mrs. Grayson may be among those entertaining when inauguration day arrives but as yet they have had no opportunity to make plans.

Morrises Hosts For Hutchins

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Morris will entertain tomorrow at dinner in honor of Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, who is to address the Town Hall at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow night.

Their other guests will be: Dr. Roberts Greenfield, who holds the chair of history at Johns Hopkins University, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman T. Arnold, of New Haven, Conn., and Mrs. Morris' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, and brother, Mr. Wilbur Hubbard, jr., who has come from Chestertown, Md., to spend the winter in the Capital.

Dr. Hutchins' subject will be, "Is Anything Wrong with Our Educational System?" Members of the panel will include: Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, former president of the University of Maryland, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District Board of Education; Canon Albert H. Lucas, headmaster at St. Alban's School for Boys; and Mr. Walter E. Myer, editor of the American Observer.

The Bachelor Party Set for Tonight At Fort Myer

Unmarried Officers of Army Post Will Be Hosts of Wedded Couples.

Fort Myer, one of the busiest posts of the Army, socially, will be the scene of the Second Annual Bachelor Party tonight. At this affair, which was given for the first time last year, the officers of the post and their wives are the guests in whose honor the bachelor officers of the garrison entertain.

It will start off with a cocktail party in the "bachelor quarters" at 7:30 o'clock, to be followed an hour later by a buffet supper. At 9:30 o'clock there will be dancing at the hop hall.

Maj. George Millholland is in charge of arrangements and is assisted by Capt. David Erskine, Lieut. George Grunert, Lieut. Richard Bauer and Lieut. John Pugh.

The indoor horse shows, which are such a popular feature of the winter season at the Army post, are about to start again. The first of the series will be held in the large riding hall, Tuesday evening, December 22 at 7:30 o'clock. Maj. Arthur P. Thayer is in charge of the program and has selected a list of events that will be of equal interest to spectator as well as exhibitor.

Tea to Be Given For Daughter By Mrs. Gudger

Function Is in Compliment of New Book Written by Mrs. Keyes.

Mrs. Emmet Carlyle Gudger, wife of Capt. Gudger, U. S. N., has issued invitations for a tea which read "in compliment of her goddaughter, 'Honor Bright.'"

This is the book recently published by Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, and for which Mrs. Gudger's daughter, Elinor, served as model for the portrait on the jacket. The tea will be held on Thursday from 5 to 7 at Capt. and Mrs. Gudger's quarters at the Navy Yard.

Miss Elinor Gudger is at present in her senior year at Friends School. Although she posed for the picture on the jacket, this is her only connection with the book, as the characters are fictitious.

Mrs. Keyes, who has written several books and many magazine articles under the name "Frances Parkinson Keyes," is at present staying with Mrs. Gudger, having closed her home in Alexandria. Senator Keyes is at their home in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Keyes has traveled extensively throughout the world, and spent last summer in Europe. Her "Letters of a Senator's Wife" ran for several years in a national magazine, and several of her books have been best sellers.

Bradley-Hume Wedding Solemnized in Georgetown

Mr. James Orme, of New York, Gives Niece Away at Old Christ Church; Virginians Are Among Marriage Guests.

By Dudley Harmon.

In the presence of members of the two families and close friends, Miss Mary Murray Hume, daughter of Mrs. Rawlins Hume, of Washington, and the late Mr. Hume, was married yesterday afternoon to Dr. Thomas Bradley, son of Mrs. Thomas Bradley of this city and the late Mr. Bradley. Old Christ Church in Georgetown was the scene of the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Gillespie Armstrong at 4:30. The church was decorated with tropical ferns and Easter lilies.

The bride entered on the arm of her uncle, Mr. James Orme, of New York City, who gave her in marriage, and her only attendants were her sister, Mrs. Frederick Hitz, and Mrs. Joseph McCammon, her cousin.

Her gown of white satin had a yoke of rose point lace which her mother wore at her wedding. Her cap was trimmed with the same lace and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Her attendants were dressed alike in gowns of white chiffon with American beauty sashes of the same material. They wore coronets of lacquered lilies in their hair and carried shower bouquets of rubrum lilies, whose red and white shades matched their gowns.

Mr. Fontaine Bradley served as his brother's best man and the ushers were Mr. Frederick M. Bradley, another brother, Mr. Charles H. Bradley, a cousin, Dr. Allan E. Walker, Dr. Alva Daughton, Mr. Alfred T. Hobson and Mr. Frank Dexter, all of Washington, and Mr. Frank Dexter Cheney, of Manchester, Conn.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. Edward deS. Melcher, of New York, Mr. Nathaniel Clifford, of Fitchburg, Mass., the bride's brother-in-law; and Miss Virginia Randolph and Miss Hilda Hordern, of Warrenton, Va.

Others at the wedding were Dr. and Mrs. C. Stanley, Mrs. James R. Ellerson, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Meem, Miss Mary Banks, Mrs. C. R. Johnson, Mrs. Heram Hollereth and Miss Mary Bradley, a cousin of the bridegroom.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Hitz, held a reception after the ceremony at the home of her mother-in-law, Mrs. William Hitz, who is now traveling in Europe. The table in the dining room was decorated with white chrysanthemums and white candles, and in the center was a wedding cake. Mrs. Hume, the bride's mother, wore a frock of green lace and Mrs. Bradford was gowned in blue crepe and a sable scarf. Both wore corsages of gardenias.

After the reception Dr. Bradley and his bride left for a wedding trip. The bride was wearing a dark green tailored suit trimmed with mink and a green hat trimmed with the same fur, and carried a mink muff. After January 1 the couple will be at home at 1601 Twenty-eighth street in Georgetown.

The bride, a graduate of Gunston Hall, made her debut here several seasons ago. Dr. Bradley was graduated from the University of Virginia and is associated in Washington with Dr. Harry Kerr.

Women's Groups Will Gather Today To Hear Better Housing Discussed

Alley Clearance, Model Apartment in Southwest Planned.

Better housing and the construction of model apartments and alley clearance in Southwest Washington will be discussed at the luncheon meeting of the joint committee on better housing representing the American Association of University Women, the Women's City Club and the Board of Trustees of the Barney Neighborhood House at the American Association of University Women at 1:15 p. m. today.

Mrs. Harvey Wiley, who has a really constructive and comprehensive knowledge of the housing conditions and needs and projects in the District of Columbia, will preside at the meeting.

Plans for the clearance of an alley and the construction of model apartments in Southwest Washington will be presented by Mr. R. B. Turner and Dr. Leroy Halbert.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, will talk on "Housing Conditions of Self-Respecting Citizens in the Southwest."

Mrs. Alton R. Hodgkins and Miss Laura Silsby will be hostesses at the monthly bridge luncheon of the American Association of University Women today at 1:15 p. m. A Christmas party is planned.

Members will meet in the lounge tonight at 8 o'clock for the third old-fashioned square dance sponsored by the club this year. Mrs. Willed S. Crane is teaching the waltz quadrille, the mazurka, lancers, contras, the Money Musk and other old-fashioned dances to members who care to learn them. The group meets the second and fourth Saturdays of each month. Mrs. F. C. Brown is in charge of the section.

To stimulate interest in creative writing, the poetry section of the American Association of University Women is conducting the fifth annual poetry contest for undergraduate students in the colleges and universities of the District of Columbia and vicinity.

Students from the following colleges are invited to compete for the three prizes: American University, Gallaudet College, Georgetown University, George Washington University, Wilson Teachers College, Trinity College and the University of Maryland. The contest will close January 16, 1937. Information regarding it may be obtained through the English department of the institutions or at American Association of University Women Clubhouse.

Miss Ruth Henderson, chairman of the poetry group, is in charge of the contest. Other members of the committee are Miss Mary Louise Brown, Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, Miss Alberta Walker, Miss Grace Barnes and Miss Elizabeth Peet.

Awards will be made at a dinner at the clubhouse February 17, 1937.

Delegates who attend the D. A. R. Congress next April will be surprised at the changed appearance of Eighteenth street at the entrance to stately Constitution Hall.

Spacious lawns will front the building, and perhaps by the time of the Continental Congress, the last of the war-time barracks near Constitution Hall will have been demolished.

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R., today pointed to the changes that have taken place. She said:

"Surely those who planned our D. A. R. Headquarters, the largest group of buildings in the world built and financed entirely by a woman's organization, were guided by a Divine Hand.

"When Memorial Continental Hall was built in 1904, nothing much was thought about the rear end of the block reaching along Eighteenth street. Time passed on and when the World War came, the Eighteenth street side of the D. A. R. property became fringed about with stucco plastered war-time buildings. They still were there when the D. A. R. built Constitution Hall in 1928-1929.

"Construction of Constitution Hall was a vast improvement to Eighteenth street and it was in keeping with the Federal plans developed a few years later.

"The stately Interior Department Building enhances the beauty of Constitution Hall and makes the D. A. R. group of buildings one of the finest in the Nation's Capital.

Miss Leah Watters, of Lockport, N. Y., spoke on "Edinburgh, Burns and Scott" at the meeting of the Women's Alliance of All Souls' Unitarian Church yesterday. The lecture was illustrated. Mrs. Fred G. Harden was hostess at the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. B. R. Sonnen, Mrs. A. F. Spanhoofd, Mrs. Arthur Bryant, Mrs. F. O. Smith, Miss Helen Nichols, Mrs. W. F. Lawrence, Mrs. W. E. Bryant, Miss Ruth Hendershott, Mrs. W. R. Johnston, Mrs. T. L. Hutton and Mrs. J. C. Settle.

Mrs. William C. Teubner, regent of the E Pluribus Unum Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, presided at the meeting in the Wedgewood room of 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, Thursday night, when a special feature of the meeting was the collection of gifts for the annual Christmas barrel which is sent each year to the Hindman School, a mountain school in Kentucky. Attractive presents always are sent, and also clothing. Mrs. Lyle R. Mabrey is in charge of this feature this year.

Another important feature of Thursday's meeting was the ceremonial acceptance into this chapter of four new members and one transferred from another chapter. The new members are:

Mrs. C. P. Katlett, Mrs. L. G. Fishach, Mrs. William Gordon Hills and Mrs. Charles E. Hughes, jr.

The transferred member is Mrs. Rosalie Field Doss.

Mrs. Fulton R. Gordon gave a program of songs appropriate to the Christmas season. Mr. Ted Fields gave impersonations that won much applause.

Mrs. E. E. Curry reported on the November banquet and Mrs. Contee S. Ficklen on the tea and sale held December 5 for patriotic and educational funds. From this benefit a sum was raised to give one full scholarship to a deserving child for the Hindman School.

The first social meeting of the Washington Research Club will be a dinner in honor of the new superintendents of schools at the Mayflower Hotel on Monday, December 14, at 6:45 p. m.

Dr. Charles Tansill, head of the history department of the American University, of this city, will be the guest speaker. Dr. Tansill is nationally known in the field of history. He has recently returned from Germany, where he was sent by the Carl Schurz Foundation for purposes of promoting friendly relations. The subject of Dr. Tansill's talk is "Modern Trends in Biography." The members of the Research Club feel fortunate in having Dr. Tansill as the first speaker of what is expected to be a very successful year.

The present officers of the club are: President, Mrs. Dora Bresler; vice president, Miss M. Neeb; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. Percy; recording secretary, Miss C. M. Roach; treasurer, Mrs. R. Hall.

Joint Session at Club to Be Presided Over by Mrs. Wiley.

Among those attending the Kappa Kappa Gamma Alumnae Association dinner dance Wednesday evening at the Shoreham Hotel were: Mr. and Mrs. Archie Burgers, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Calhoun, Miss Martha Coffin, Mr. Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Banks Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Grove, Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hamilton Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Rothballer, Miss Suzanne Waters, Mr. Stimson and Mr. and Mrs. Torrence Wolford.

A tacky party will be held at Klein's Tavern, Rhode Island avenue at the District line, Saturday, December 19, by the Michigan Washington Democratic Club.

This party will be the last for this year. Music, dancing, refreshments will add to the gayety. All Michigan residents are invited.

The Service Council, an auxiliary of the Jewish Community Center, is sponsoring a minstrel show, "Hot Peppers," followed by dancing to music by Barnee and Shorham Hotel Orchestra, tomorrow evening at 8:15 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center auditorium, Sixteenth and Q streets. The Service Council was organized four years ago and is composed of young men and women interested in promoting the activities of the Jewish Community Center. This is the first time an activity of this type has been attempted and it is hoped that it will become an annual affair. The board of trustees, of which Mr. Benjamin Ourisman is president, is assisting the Service Council. Members of the Service Council are in the cast which is under the personal direction of Mr. Bernie Fischgrund, well-known director of this city.

Part of the proceeds of the minstrel is to be used to furnish a recreation room for the boys' and girls' clubs of the center. Mr. Lee W. Cowan, general manager for the Service Council, is being assisted by a committee on which the Misses Ann and Sadie Edlavitch, Henrietta Halam, Hilda Levy, Theresa Shefferman and Mr. Henry Salus are serving. Mr. Benjamin Goldstein, president of the Service Council; Mr. Benjamin Ourisman, president of the Jewish Community Center; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Viner, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Turover, Mr. and Mrs. Burnette Siman, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Streett, Mr. and Mrs. Moe Offenberg, Mr. and Mrs. David Weiner, Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Hershfield, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg and other members of the board of the center are to be patrons for the evening.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Little Fathy Helmy, sone of the agricultural attache of the Egyptian legation, who speaks four languages, the other morning was posing for pictures to be used in connection with the Christmas broadcast of the children of all of the embassies and legations here, which will take place in the Shoreham ballroom on December 21. Fathy regarded the cameraman and his "box" with serious round eyes and after he had posed a number of times walked over to examine it, acting as though he knew more about this business of clicking lenses than most of his elders do.

Another interesting youngster who is taking part in the international broadcast is Martin Althaus, son of the Peruvian Naval Attache, and Senora de Althaus. A young chap of four winters, he speaks German, English and Spanish fluently.

What would you think of a shoe size 3? Yes, we, too, were astounded and had visions of a person who would completely dwarf the Monument. However, the story soon cleared it all up. The Tom McAvoys were the bearers of this surprising bit of information. While they were down in Buenos Aires, Frances, whose trousseau was plentifully stocked with everything one could need in the way of clothes suitable for this climate, suddenly discovered, to her discomfort, that she had reckoned without considering the climate below the equator. So a-shopping she did go. First on the list of things to buy were shoes. In the course of her hunt for footgear she found no two pairs of shoes were alike—that exactly—because they were not made by patterns as are ours here, but are cleverly copied from those seen on the screen or in magazine pictures, to fit the feet of the buyer. Thus, there are any number of sizes. Frances McAvoy, who wears a six, was horrified when informed that her South American size was 37.

Jack Nicolls not only remembers faces and names of people he has met, but goes further. The other evening at the Pall Mall room he was introduced to a group of young people at a table near his own. Among those he met was Mary Munroe. Following the introduction, Jack thoughtfully regarded the titian-haired young girl (she, by the way, certainly knows her horses) and then came out with—

"Didn't I see you going into such and such a shop on Connecticut avenue a little before 6 this evening?"

He did. Each had been on a shopping expedition.

The Inauguration Dinner Rumored at Welles' House

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Rumor has it that the dinner inauguration eve, January 19, will be given by the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles at their home on Massachusetts avenue. With their stay in South America dependent on the duration of the peace conference, there is a possibility of course that they may not be able to return to the Capital in time to carry out such plans.

Naturally, no invitations have been issued because no one as yet has any idea just when the Buenos Aires parley will end. The approach of the New Year, however, with the inauguration coming close on the heels of the holidays, gives rise to speculation as to what the January social calendar may include in addition to the schedule of state functions at the White House already announced.

The peak of the inaugural festivities is reached the night preceding the ceremonies, with the ball inauguration night to complete the round of entertaining. In addition to the dinner always given by one of the Capital's leading hostesses for the Governors of the various States and other distinguished visitors in the Capital, there are countless smaller functions, including those arranged by the State societies honoring official representatives from their home States.

In the past, the inaugural eve dinner was usually given by the John R. McLeans and later by the Edward Beale McLeans. On the eve of President Roosevelt's first inauguration four years ago, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean entertained at a brilliant affair at the Sulgrave Club. This season, she is not expected to repeat the function because of the large dinner and ball for which she has issued invitations on New Year's.

The last official inaugural ball was given in the administration of William Howard Taft. Since then, the party on inauguration night has been held under the sponsorship of prominent Washington women, headed by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, who has been responsible for the success of four such occasions. Proceeds of the last were given to the Community Chest.

This year, all plans await the arrival of the President from South America the first of the week. Mrs. Dougherty, who has as her guest Mrs. Fenton B. Turck, of New York, and is entertaining at dinner for her on Tuesday, said last night nothing had even been discussed regarding it.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who has accepted the chairmanship of the inaugural ceremonies, has been busy with Red Cross work since his return from abroad and is preparing to devote attention to inauguration plans after the President's arrival. He and Mrs. Grayson may be among those entertaining when inauguration day arrives but as yet they have had no opportunity to make plans.

Morrises Hosts For Hutchins

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Morris will entertain tomorrow at dinner in honor of Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, who is to address the Town Hall at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow night.

Their other guests will be: Dr. Roberts Greenfield, who holds the chair of history at Johns Hopkins University, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman T. Arnold, of New Haven, Conn., and Mrs. Morris' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, and brother, Mr. Wilbur Hubbard, jr., who has come from Chestertown, Md., to spend the winter in the Capital.

Dr. Hutchins' subject will be, "Is Anything Wrong with Our Educational System?" Members of the panel will include: Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, former president of the University of Maryland, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District Board of Education; Canon Albert H. Lucas, headmaster at St. Alban's School for Boys; and Mr. Walter E. Myer, editor of the American Observer.

Bachelor Party Set for Tonight At Fort Myer

Unmarried Officers of Army Post Will Be Hosts of Wedded Couples.

Fort Myer, one of the busiest posts of the Army, socially, will be the scene of the Second Annual Bachelor Party tonight. At this affair, which was given for the first time last year, the officers of the post and their wives are the guests in whose honor the bachelor officers of the garrison entertain.

It will start off with a cocktail party in the "bachelor quarters" at 7:30 o'clock, to be followed an hour later by a buffet supper. At 9:30 o'clock there will be dancing at the hop hall.

Maj. George Millholland is in charge of arrangements and is assisted by Capt. David Erskine, Lieut. George Grunert, Lieut. Richard Bauer and Lieut. John Pugh.

The indoor horse shows, which are such a popular feature of the winter season at the Army post, are about to start again. The first of the series will be held in the large riding hall, Tuesday evening, December 22 at 7:30 o'clock. Maj. Arthur P. Thayer is in charge of the program and has selected a list of events that will be of equal interest to spectator as well as exhibitor.

Tea to Be Given For Daughter By Mrs. Gudger

Function Is in Compliment of New Book Written by Mrs. Keyes.

Mrs. Emmet Carlyle Gudger, wife of Capt. Gudger, U. S. N., has issued invitations for a tea which read "in compliment of her goddaughter, 'Honor Bright.'"

This is the book recently published by Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, and for which Mrs. Gudger's daughter, Elinor, served as model for the portrait on the jacket. The tea will be held on Thursday from 5 to 7 at Capt. and Mrs. Gudger's quarters at the Navy Yard.

Miss Elinor Gudger is at present in her senior year at Friends School. Although she posed for the picture on the jacket, this is her only connection with the book, as the characters are fictitious.

Mrs. Keyes, who has written several books and many magazine articles under the name "Frances Parkinson Keyes," is at present staying with Mrs. Gudger, having closed her home in Alexandria. Senator Keyes is at their home in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Keyes has traveled extensively throughout the world, and spent last summer in Europe. Her "Letters of a Senator's Wife" ran for several years in a national magazine, and several of her books have been best sellers.

Mississippi Society Entertains at Dance

In the absence of the president, Dr. R. W. Harned, James E. Lea, vice president, presided.

Mrs. James O. Lamkin was in charge of the program which preceded the dancing. G. W. Potter was in charge of the floor committee.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should First Cousins Marry, Asks Girl Whose Family Says, "Impossible and Unthinkable!"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps you can help us. The story is this: Dick and I are first cousins and very much in love with each other. The other evening we told our respective families we wished to marry some time soon. We were told downright that such a thing is impossible and unthinkable. This would not be the first time cousins in our family had married, and these marriages have all turned out to be sucessful and happy. For this reason we can not understand the sudden objection to our marrying.

• • • •

Our devotion to each other had been encouraged from the moment we met a year ago.. The fact that I was at that time engaged to marry a young man who was disliked by my parents was no doubt their reason for praising Dick to the skies.. We have been together almost constantly since we met and I feel positively lost without him.. Not to marry would mean a great sacrifice for both of us.

• • • •

Don't you think it rather late for objection, after a year of encouragement? It seems so to us. Dick has agreed that I write for your opinion in the matter. We would like to hear from you through your column soon. Please don't disappoint us. PUZZLED.

One Point of View.

DEAR PUZZLED: My first and purely intuitive reaction to the suggestion of first cousins' marrying is the same as your parents'—namely, that it is unthinkable. Unthinkable in the sense that it would no more occur to me to fall heterosexually in love with a first cousin than it would with a brother. And such love, of course is the romantic premise for—and binding tie in—marriage. You may argue that such a reaction is an acquired, artificial characteristic nurtured in traditional ecclesiastical prejudice—for it is well known that more than one religious denomination withholds its blessings from marriages contracted by first, second or even third cousins; or—shall we say?—forbids such marriages. But if it is spiritual prejudice in part, it is nevertheless a prejudice which has scientific endorsement where the law of eugenics is concerned.

• • • •

However, it seems to me this is not a problem for the layman to pronounce upon. The most enlightened, authoritative and liberal scientific advice is needed here, and it should be sought and respected, if you wish to proceed with confidence in the right direction. It may be that in this particular instance such a union as you dream of and yearn for would receive the blessing and approval of the liberal, enlightened man of science, and if such should be the case, you might be justified in risking the family's wrath. A first-class diagnostician with educated psychiatric insight into the laws of human relationships and the intricacies of sexual attraction, could best advise you. If you don't know whom to approach, I shall be glad to suggest a few names, either by telephone or through the mail. M. H.

Advice to the Melancholy.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: The number of sufferers from depression who have recently written to you for help make me think of a small cousin of mine. This child, whenever she walked carelessly and fell down, would get promptly to her feet and slap the first person she met as responsible for her tumble.

• • • •

It seems to me that those adults who have been depressed are also looking for outside causes for their melancholy, instead of realizing that the wisdom of the world teaches that we have a higher self and a lower self, and that the higher self may, with effort, be kept on top. From Bible wisdom we get. "As a Man Thinketh in his Heart, so is He." And:

"Let the counsel of thine own heart stand,
For there is no man more faithful unto thee than it.
For a man's mind is sometimes wont to show him more

• • • •

Omar declares, "I myself am Heaven or Hell." And Lord Haldane asserts, 'I can abstract myself from depression." Psychologists tell us that we are apt to hold those feelings on top which we enjoy; and many old New England stories deal with characters who "enjoyed a good cry," and "enjoyed poor health."

• • • •

Perhaps there is a little technique to practice if we wish to be at our best and conquer melancholy. The woman who placed a sign on her bed where she could see it the first thing every morning was practising that technique. The sign read thus: "I shall be better by 10 o'clock!" She realized the early morning melancholy mood would pass if sternly brushed from the mind until daily tasks could obliterate it entirely.

• • • •

Our reserve powers will act for us in depression if we do our part—which is to drop worry, relax and wait for uplift. Daily reading of something wise and inspiring, or singing, are practicable means of self help. It is up to us! Yours truly, GERTRUDE S. T.

Asking and Receiving.

DEAR GERTRUDE S. T.: Along with more mundane practical and specific suggestions which might seem to apply to individual cases, this column has pretty consistently preached the gospel of conscious faith and courageous optimism which you advocate as a solvent for many depressing problems. In fact, some reading along these lines has been prescribed here, and one of the most interesting of the new books along this line has been mentioned in this column twice before. I refer to Lucius Humphrey's "It Shall Be Done Unto You," which author and publisher describe as "a technique of constructive thinking." In clear, simple, self confident phrases, it tells the reader how to ask, spiritually, in order that he may receive, both materially and spiritually. The text is bountifully flavored with quotations from the Bible, the great literature of the world, and from great personages down the ages. M. H.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

IT'S A PROUD KIDDIE who'll wear this cutest of Claire Tilden frocks on all occasions—to school, play or parties! Your "two to ten" will be both smart and comfy in its full pleats, long or short puffed sleeves and fetching pointed yoke. She'll revel in the practicality of matching bloomers, with elastic drawn through the waist and legs! Even if mother has never made young Susan's frocks before, she'll have no trouble with Pattern 259, for its Detailed Sewing Guide clarifies every simple step of the making of this frock. For fabric, choose gayly printed cotton, wool challis, or jersey for everyday, and velveteen for dress-up.

Pattern 259 is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 2¾ yards 36-inch fabric.

South Africa's Mrs. Eybers Appears Typically British, But She Is American Native North Carolinian Cultivated English Speech, Customs.

By Elizabeth Young.

MRS. EBEN EYBERS, of Bloemfontein, South Africa, appears to be a typical Englishwoman in speech, dress, complexion and general appearance. Her sentences are clipped, precise and accented in the best British-speaking tradition. Her costuming is casual, comfortable and suitable, without any particular concession to chic. Her reddish gold hair is casually waved and pinned. On the sunny side of 40, her thin, fair skin is deeply crinkled about intelligent blue eyes, and it is safe to wager that she and cosmetics or rich emollient creams are strangers.

This phenomena of personality coloration is worthy of comment, for Mrs. Eybers was born Willard Goforth, of Lenoir, N. C., and was reared and principally educated below the Mason-Dixie line in these United States. She left the land of magnolia trees, studied feminine coquetry and drawling voices in 1919, to complete her education and take her degree at Barnard College for Women. The following year she married Prof. Eben Eybers, offshoot of a High Dutch family resident for generations in South Africa, and promptly set sail for the Orange Free State, where her husband had a teaching post awaiting him. Today he is professor of pedagogy at the University of South Africa.

"How-come this English voice? this—what shall we call it?—this English air?" Mrs. Eybers was asked at the outset of a 20-minute interview squeezed into the crowded calendar of a dual-purpose visit she and her husband are making in Washington. Mrs. Eybers smiled a little.

Effort Was Deliberate.

"I suppose it is the result of 17 years' more or less British environment and association, plus a deliberate effort in the beginning to merge with that environment and conform to that association," she replied. "When I first went to South Africa to live, everyone seemed much amused at my American accent—my American 'slanguage,' I believe they call it—and in self-defense, because I don't like being conspicuous, I very shortly picked up my adopted countrymen's way of speaking."

"As a matter of fact, I might say I found it necessary to learn two languages on arriving in South Africa—English for one, and Afrikaans for the other."

"Afrikaans," she explained, "is the youngest recognized language in the world. Derived from the High Dutch, or Holland tongue, it has been evolving in South Africa as a spoken language since the seventeenth century, and was finally recognized as an official language in 1925, since when its use is obligatory in Parliament and in all official documents, which must be published in both English and Afrikaans. Every person in South Africa has the right to choose which language of the two he prefers when being served by a public servant."

There is now an Afrikaans dictionary, the Bible has just been translated into Afrikaans after ten years' labor, and many scientific manuals, such as handbooks for doctors and nurses, are regularly published in the world's youngest authentic tongue. Since 1900, Afrikaans has been increasingly employed as a medium of literary expression, although to date its plays and fiction have been of a rather inferior quality, Mrs. Eybers believes. Its lyric poetry she finds much better—"very good," in fact.

Does Some Writing.

Mrs. Eybers, who does some writing herself, is interested in South African literature generally, and is personally acquainted with two of the Union's internationally known women writers—Mrs. Ethelreda Lewis, who wrote "Trader Horn," and is now writing a different kind of South African literature under another name; and Sara Gertrude Millen, whom she believes is making a lasting place for herself in the annals of literature. The two women lead markedly different lives, she tells.

"Mrs. Millen, whose husband is a very prominent advocate in Johannesburg, is very pleasant, very intelligent, with marked Hebraic characteristics, and moves in Johannesburg's best social circles," Mrs. Eybers remarked. "But she still finds time for writing. Mrs. Lewis, on the other hand, lives very quietly at East London, a small seaside resort, with her husband, who is a retired physician. Of recent years she has become much interested in the lives and problems of the black population in the Union, and all her recent writings have been concerned with them. Because this is an entirely different type of writing from the "Trader Horn" sort of thing, she has offered it under a pen name, and she closely guards the fact that this pen-name is a disguise for the author of 'Trader Horn.'" Mrs. Eybers declined to reveal the pseudonym.

Mrs. Eybers, whose interests include gardening, sports, organized women's activities, educational pursuits and travel, also "does a bit of writing on child psychology and some travel articles" for South African newspapers and periodicals, in addition to managing a household of four children, ranging in age from 3 to 14 years.

"Rearing children in South Africa is a perfect delight," she tells. "They are out of doors from 7 in the morning until 7 at night, for the climate is much like that of California. We have plenty of service, too. A household budget which in the United States would permit of only one servant, permits two or more there." Happily, Mrs. Eybers found her African environment very reminiscent of her native North Carolina, particularly in regard to the large colored population on the one hand, and in the warm hospitality of what is colloquially described as the "European population" on the other hand.

Prof. Eybers has a year's sabbatical leave from his teaching duties, and he and Mrs. Eybers are in Washington on the first lap of what is to be an eight months' tour of many countries, devoted to a first-hand study of the educational possibilities of radio broadcasting in the South African school system. They are traveling on a Carnegie fellowship grant.

Until December 23 they will be guests in Washington of Mrs. Eybers' brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Hogue, at 125 Third street northeast, and will go to North Carolina for the holidays, remaining until mid-February, when they will set sail for Naples, Italy. They will remain in Italy a month, and thereafter motor through Austria, Hungary, Germany, Switzerland, France, Belgium, Holland, England and Norway, making their longest stop-over in England, where they expect to stay two months.

Attended Radio Parley.

This week they attended all sessions of the First National Conference on Educational Broadcasting, which convened at the Mayflower Hotel, from Thursday through today. This conference was planned in co-operation with the United States Office of Education and the Federal Communications Commission.

"South Africa's vast distances, comparable to this country's far Western plains, create a need for the kind of educational service which radio broadcasting would seem potentially able to provide," says Mrs. Eybers, who has long been interested in radio development. As vice president of the Bloemfontein section of the National Council of Women of South Africa, Mrs. Eybers is also a member of the advisory committee of the Bloemfontein Board of the South Africa Radio Broadcasting Corporation. She shares responsibility for determining the whole program and policy of the broadcasting corporation, which is a public utility.

"We keep the corporation informed as to what the public wants and needs in the radio broadcasting field," she says. "We determine such policies as the percentage of time to be allocated to Africans or English broadcasting, whether politics is a proper subject for radio discussion, and so on."

Underwood & Underwood.

Mrs. Eben Eybers, above, who has lived in Blomfontein, South Africa, for 17 years, is intensely interested in gardening, sports, organized women's activities, educational pursuits, travel and writing. She was born and reared in Lenoir, North Carolina.

Nation's Doll Bill Is $25,000,000

1936 Estimate $9,000,000 Over Depression Trade.

That the mothers and fathers of America will spend $25,000,000 for American-made toy dolls in 1936, up more than $9,000,000 from the depression low of 1932, is revealed by Fortune Magazine which, in an article in its December issue, points out that "everybody knows that Christmas buying, which in 1935 didn't really start until October, was already heavy in September, 1936."

A new branch of the doll business, the doll's wardrobe, began soon after 1925 when the so-called "Patsy dolls" appeared, continuing a procession that started with "the billiken," and that included teddy bears, yellow kids and "bye-los" as native skill and industry developed. "Before Patsy's day," says Fortune, "dolls customarily came only with the clothes they wore, if any; either the child's mother or the doll's mother would run up a change on the sewing machine. But home sewing was on the way to becoming a lost art in the late twenties, and Patsy and her contemporaries offered auxiliary clothes to fill the gap." Manufacturers and retailers, the article reveals, welcome this new branch on the theory "that dolls' clothes do more than make a bigger initial sale.

The popular dolls of today are "Shirley," named for the child movie star, "Dy-Dee," and "The Dionnes," three lines that are getting "possibly 60 per cent of the total business."

Flowers for Size.

Consider your size when you order flowers for a corsage or garland. The small woman will appear best with petite flowers such as the sweet pea, or pompon chrysanthemum, while only the tall woman can wear the huge lily.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Among the many conditions for which we must blame rheumatism—or the infection which causes this disease—is chorea, or St. Vitus dance. It occurs, as a rule, in children between the ages of 5 and 15, more frequently among girls than boys. Many of us are familiar with the peculiar muscular movements which may affect almost any part of the body. The face particularly is spasmodically distorted with curious twitchings and grimaces. Between attacks the expression is usually dull and lifeless. In some cases marked mental symptoms are observed, the child crying without reason or an outburst of temper appearing from a clear sky.

Since the period of Thomas Sydenham, the old English writer, who described chorea so clearly in 1866, physicians have been reasonably efficient in the management of the disease. Rest in bed has been insisted upon, with the child isolated insofar as possible and kept from injuring himself during the periods of involuntary muscle jerkings.

Heat Used Successfully.

Now comes the suggestion that fever therapy, or a temperature induced by some vaccine, is of value. For more than a century it has been noted that should a patient with St. Vitus dance contract another disease, such as typhoid fever, the symptoms of the former abate completely. Some four or five years ago L. P. Sutton pointed out that the use of typhoid vaccine, known to give rise to a high temperature, would be followed by recovery. He later reported 150 cases of chorea treated in this manner with striking success. The duration of the symptoms was definitely shortened even in very severe cases and the percentage of cures was high.

In a recent report Weisman and Leslie, of New York City, studied carefully the effect of this treatment upon 50 children suffering from chorea in an aggravated form. They excluded all mild cases on the theory that they would get well under rest and sedatives, as they desired to give the plan a searching test. Three-fourths of their patients were unable to feed themselves because of their incessant movements.

Typhoid Administered.

The treatment involved the use of killed typhoid bacteria administered into a vein. As a result a temperature which varied from 105 to 107 degrees Fahrenheit was induced. The doses were given daily with but few intermissions. In the series reported there were no complications and no one of the children became alarmingly ill. Sedatives were used prior to the injections, largely to avoid the discomfort of the fever, and most of the children were thus rendered quite drowsy during the period.

So beneficial was the plan that from six to eight treatments and an entire hospital stay of 25 to 30 days sufficed for a serious case. Three patients showing heart symptoms were minus all signs of disease of this organ at the conclusion. Of the 50 cases, 46 were entirely symptom free on discharge and only two failed to be helped.

Because of the possible heart damage it would seem that the sooner chorea can be relieved the better, and it is reasonable to assume that this type of therapy will be used more extensively hereafter.

Age of 11 Is Safest Throughout Entire Span of Our Lives

The age of 11 is the safest one for a child, according to the Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

"The eleventh year, or thereabouts, is the optimum point, at which the high hazards of infancy and earliest childhood are past, and the new and gradually mounting risks of adolescence, maturity and old-age have not yet begun to exert their influences," says the bulletin.

Yule Exchange Of Gifts Calls For Etiquette

By Margaret Wallace.

THE EXCHANGE of Christmas gifts presents many problems of etiquette, judging by the number of letters received by this department. Many queries relate to the Christmas gift problem in offices. Many women want to know what is correct to give men.

If employes wish to give presents to their employers, these should be simple. This is true whether the gifts are individual or from the office force. Cards are in best taste.

If the employer is married, Christmas remembrances must be sent to his home and addressed to both him and his wife. They could take the form of books, or better still, flowers or growing plants.

Men who wish to remember a woman employer should send flowers or a box of candy or a book, if there is a special reason to do so. Otherwise a card is better taste. This card should be sent to the home address, as should any other remembrance.

It is acknowledged that a woman who goes shopping for a gift for a man friend has as great a problem as he has in shopping for her gift for her. A woman may not send a man candy or flowers nor can she send him any kind of wearing apparel, which, in its strictest interpretation, includes such things as handkerchiefs, neckties, and scarfs. A card case, cigarette case of leather or other material which could not be classed as jewelry, note books, pocket diaries, calendars, books and such articles are permissible as gifts.

Persons who are not intimate friends should exchange Christmas cards. Cards can be purchased of such real artistic value that they constitute a gift in themselves. If a gift of some kind is desired for these acquaintances it should be flowers or candy or an inexpensive book. It is always better to be sure that a gift to an acquaintance will not embarrass and surprise the recipient.

QUERY—I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send a Christmas card to a young man in our office who is very kind to me. He often drives me home when it is raining, and has brought me flowers from his mother's garden several times in the summertime. He has asked me to go to the motion pictures with him after office hours a number of times, and has called once or twice at my home.

ANSWER—It would be quite proper to send this man a Christmas card. It should be sent to his home address. If you have met his mother or she sent the flowers to you by her son, you should also send her a card.

Can Opener Used More Extensively By Modern Wives

The can opener is no longer used only by the bride, for now there are so many foods prepared in cans for quick and convenient use.

Rhubarb and broccoli are now being put up in cans, and pork sausage patties, fried and packed in their own fat, now appear in canned form, as does oyster soup.

If friends are coming in for lunch and you have only a little time to prepare the meal, you may serve potato or macaroni salad, sliced cold ham and hot tomato bouillon and get them all from cans.

Ham patties, frankfurters, lamb stew, pumpernickel bread and roast goose, duck and chicken, baked apples and cinnamon apples, are other new additions to the canned food field.

Vegetables are now being vacuum-packed. These include corn, peas, beans, carrots, beets and spinach.

Grapefruit Consumption Increases 500 Per Cent

National consumption of grapefruit has increased markedly in the last 20 years, rising from an average of two grapefruit to ten a year per person. A new high record of consumption, because of the fairly low prices, is expected.

Government food experts say that to preserve its flavor and high vitamin C content, grapefruit should not be cut until the last minute before it is to be used. They also suggest that grapefruit may be broiled. The fruit is cut in half, cored, sprinkled with sugar and put into a hot oven for 10 or 15 minutes.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 11.

ONE OF THE ODD conceits of our British cousins is that we quaint Americans practically live on ballyhoo—that everything we do is given the merry old razzle-dazzle in order that it may be blown up 50 times its natural size, and so rake in stupendous sums of vile money.

ALICE HUGHES.

This is absolutely droll, because our British friends, whatever their envious enemies and detractors may say, are very quick to learn—almost as fast on the uptake as our Japanese brothers across the Pacific. It is obvious to most of us vulgar-minded denizens of the United States that the approaching coronation of His Gracious Majesty, Edward VIII, is being given the old inflationary bellows in a style and degree to which even our most potent publicists can bow.

Hundreds of Londoners expect to, and will pay their rents, rates and income taxes for 1937 by letting their town houses to wealthy and generous trippers from the United States, and they will not ask pearl buttons, either, but important numbers of pounds sterling. In fact, Mrs. Grace Ansell, popular in society both here and in London, is in Gotham at the moment combining business with pleasure by acting as agent for Londoners desiring to rent their diggin's to visitors. Mrs. A. has at her command homes and apartments of all shapes, sizes and price-tags. All are fully staffed with servants, and with some go a Rolls, complete with chauffeur and footman. And I hear the leases are moving fast, through Mrs. Ansell.

Already not even hall-space is to be had in London 'otels—not a billiard table left, either. Add the grub and entertainment, and by the middle of next June Londoners will be several million pounds the richer. I'm sure we're all delighted—the Americans who scatter the gold will never miss it, bless them!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Always keeping in touch with lady authors, I find that Sylvia Thompson has signed to do her first children's book, and that Marjorie Hillis is in England arranging for publication of her overtouted little tome, "Live Alone, etc." . . . Mentioning Lunnon reminds me that one of its brightest youths, Oliver Messell, is being given the splurge all around here just now. He designed the settings for the filmed "Romeo and Juliet," and came over to see Gilbert Miller's production of "The Country Wife," starring Ruth Gordon, which he also designed, on its way. Ollie, he smart boy . . .

Most of us get sore, now and then, at a beauty-parlor worker, but we don't do much about it. Not so Miss Gertrude Mannis, a local high school teacher of Spanish! Dissatisfied with a finger wave, she was charged by Hair-Stylist Kyriak with smashing a mirror, busting three bowls worth $7, kicking him on the shins and then assaulting him with a coat-tree. Oh, boy, what a wave that must have been! . . .

France has just sent us a 19-year-old student, Jean Le Mee, to report on the social life of our colleges—and is he amazed! "Why, the students actually know the professors personally!" he chortles. Neighbor J. P. Morgan is not only a noted financier and collector, but a bit of a gourmet, too. One of his firmest beliefs is that meats and fowls should never be served on metal platters, as he says they absorb the taste of the dish. He has wooden serving platters, especially designed and made for him, and orders them in dozen lots. So he'll eat Christmas turkey carved on the wood.

'Baked Ham Hawaiian' Is Suggested As Dish in Keeping With Yule Season

Perennial Favorite as Festive Meat Served With New Tang.

By Rebekah Blake.

CHRISTMAS! Lovely, glamorous season with streets, stores, houses and even people reflecting its magic. Why shouldn't foods reflect it?

Using the same old foods that have been used for generations and handed down from mother to daughter as many other traditions, it is so easy to add that elusive quality we look for in our evening clothes and strive for on our tables, yet seldom find in our foods. This may be done merely by means of simple, new touches.

Baked ham is a perennial favorite and it well deserves the high position that it holds in the esteem of discriminating eaters, and because there are so many ways of baking ham, it is easy to escape any monotony in serving this dish.

Give your Christmas ham its preliminary baking or boiling. After having removed the rind and scored the fat into neat little squares, allow it to stand overnight with two cups of honey poured over it. The next day add to the honey about a cup of the syrup from a can of sliced pineapple and a cup of ginger ale. Insert a whole clove into the center of each square scored in the ham. Place the ham in a very slow oven and baste every 20 minutes for an hour, or until the baking period is completed and the outer surface of the ham evenly browned. Just before serving, garnish the surface of the ham with rings and wedges of sliced pineapple and sections of maraschino cherries, watercress or sprigs of parsley make an attractive green contrast for the base of the ham.

A big, spicey Christmas ham will do something to the day that all of the candy, cake, toys and decoration cannot do. Garnish your ham with pineapple and cherries and watercress and serve it with candied sweet potatoes and Brussels sprouts.

Rings of Pineapple.

As an accompaniment for your ham platter you may serve rings of pineapple heated in their own syrup, to which has been added a bit of spearmint extract and enough green coloring to give it a nice holiday tint. Allow the extract and the coloring to stand over night or longer in the syrup. You may slip a cube of red jelly in the center of each slice or you may alternate the rings of minted pineapple with pineapple slices which have been bathed in syrup. (A handful of red cinnamon candies added to the hot syrup.)

You may garnish your baked ham with cinnamon apple cups, apples cored and boiled in syrup tinted red and flavored with cinnamon bark, or a syrup to which has been added red cinnamon candies.

To make your Christmas ham completely regal, give it a crown by placing a paper frill around the hock end of the ham. This frill may easily be made by you and securely fastened to the meat with toothpicks.

Service your ham with cream of cauliflower soup or spiced cranberry juice, candied sweet potatoes (what ham could be complete without this accompaniment?), also Brussels sprouts, hot rolls and butter, frozen fruit salad and apple or minced pie and you will have a truly holiday feast.

Baked Ham Hawaiian.

1 smoked ham (12 pounds)
1 cup vinegar
1 large bottle ginger ale
2 quarts (8 cups canned pineapple juice)
Bouquet-garni
Brown sugar
1 cup raisins.

Soak the ham in cold water and vinegar overnight. Put the ham (which has been boned and tied, if possible) in a roaster, add the bouquet-garni and a little water to cover the bottom of the pan. Place in a hot oven (425 F.) for about 30 minutes to brown. Then add ginger ale and pineapple juice. During the next 45 minutes turn ham three times. Then reduce heat in oven to 325 F., put cover on roaster and bake slowly for four hours. Remove the skin, sprinkle with brown sugar, and place under flame or high heat to finish browning.

Strain the gravy, let stand a few minutes for fat to rise to top, remove grease and add slices of canned pineapple. Heat in the gravy, turning once so that pineapple will absorb some of the meat juice. Remove pineapple, drain and place around ham on platter as a garnish. Place a maraschino cherry in the center of each pineapple ring.

You may add raisins to the gravy, cook for 10 minutes, and thicken with flour, if necessary. White raisins make the best colored gravy but dark ones may be used.

To make bouquet-garni, tie together in a bundle, a handful of parsley, several green onions, a bay leaf, sprig of thyme, rosemary, marjoram and basil. Remove this bundle from the meat before serving.

Cupboards Built in.

The dining room that has a wide window, or double ones, lends itself to the building in of cupboards on either side for china and glassware. The back of the cupboards may be painted to match the floor covering.

FAVORITE FOODS of famous folk

Boston Cranberry Pie Is Favorite Dish in Lodge Family.

By Pattie Ellicott.

WHEN UNITED STATES Senator-elect and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge come to Washington to live with their interesting young family it is certain that they will do much entertaining for their friends and official folk.

Naturally, many of their menus will be based on traditional Boston dishes for both of them have passed much of their lives in that city and they adhere to the legend of culinary arts of their home region.

Just at this season of the year a favorite dish in the Lodge household in Boston is cranberry pie. The cranberry is a native fruit of the Old Bay State. It has been treated with due respect since the first Thanksgiving day.

Boston Cranberry Pie.

2 tablespoons cornstarch
1¼ cups hot water
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup seedless raisins
2 cups cranberries and
1 tablespoon butter

Blend cornstarch with sugar and salt, gradually adding the hot water and cook in double boiler until mixture thickens, stirring all the time. Add the raisins, butter, and cranberries, and cook 5 minutes. Line pie pan with pastry and brush with melted butter.

Add the filling and cover top with ½-inch strips of pastry. Bake in hot oven for 20 minutes.

Frieda likes big, soft puffs sewed in the center of good-sized hankies. The handkerchiefs fold over the puffs and keep them clean and spotless and powder doesn't have a chance to sift through her purse. Whenever one of Frieda's friends admires her little trick she has a half-dozen or so made up for the friend, so it keeps her favorite seamstress busy stitching away on powder puffs.

Contest for Week Devoted to Recipes Made of Oranges

ORANGES ARE excellent to fill up the toe in Johnny's stocking on Christmas morning, and when eaten, they are a grand change from the too-too sweet candies and cakes that are to be found on every table through the holiday season.

If you have a sweet tooth, you may make candy containing oranges or season your layer cake with orange flavoring. Baked oranges are delicious as an accompaniment to meat. Orange nut bread spread with cream cheese, will make luscious tea sandwiches or delicious bits for you to serve with salads. Orange marmalade or preserves will hit the spot any morning for breakfast with hot biscuits.

The recipe contest this week is for oranges. Unusual and interesting ways of using oranges are plentiful yet often difficult to find. If you have a recipe that you think might win a cash prize in this contest, type or write it neatly and send it to The Post Food Editor, Rebekah Blake, so that she will receive it not later than Saturday morning.

The first prize for an orange recipe is $3, the second $2 and there are three additional prizes of $1 each for the next best recipes.

Household Hints

Stewed prunes are delicious without any additional flavoring, but if you want to vary this flavor, add a slice or two of orange, or of lemon, or a piece of stick cinnamon, or a combination of all three to the prunes.

Food preparation is nine-tenths peeling, slicing, measuring, stirring and serving, and about one-tenth actually standing by the stove. There is even an approved method of slicing raisins. They look more attractive when cut with a scissors than by any other method of chopping.

Most persons enjoy the delicious flavor of cheese stuffed prunes, but do they know about prunes stuffed with meat? Use as a filling chopped dried beef, ham or crisp bacon, moistened with mayonnaise or boiled dressing. If served as a salad, such a filling needs no further dressing.

Soak 1 pair sweetbreads in cold water. Cook 20 minutes in boiling water with 1 tablespoon salt and 1 tablespoon vinegar. Chill in cold water and cut in dice. Make 1½ cups white sauce and add the diced sweetbreads, ¼ pound mushrooms sliced and pan-fried, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon butter and more salt, pepper and paprika to taste. Sprinkle with ⅓ cup shredded toasted almonds before serving.

Celery Salt Adds Zest to Soup, Eggs

Did you ever try sprinkling your boiled breakfast egg with celery salt? Did you ever use celery salt in cooking soup, especially if the grocer forgot to include fresh celery with the soup greens?

When celery salt is used the amount of ordinary salt should be reduced or omitted altogether, for, as its name implies, it is a combination of pulverized celery seed and salt. The amount of celery salt to be used during cooking varies according to the intensity of celery flavor that the dish requires. Individual servings of eggs need no more than a sprinkling, a stew may have a level teaspoonful, and a large pot of soup can take as much as a tablespoonful.

HERE'S the season of genial toasts!

What with bonuses, raises in salary, jobs more plentiful, folks are becoming gay again.

And when you're all bubbling over with good spirits, nothing expresses your feelings better or adds more to your popularity than a cordial toast like:

"A health to you, my comrades, all;
And plenty to you all;
And may each of you be at home
When fortune makes her call."

Or is a wedding the occasion for merrymaking? Here's a toast the party will love:

"Let us drink to the health of the bride,
Let us drink to the health of the groom,
Let us drink to the parson who tied,
And to every last guest in the room."

At your company dinner you can make a hit with:

"To the Boss: If he is as satisfied as we are, we have a job for life."

To liven the crowd supply yourself with fun-makers from our 40-page booklet, "Jokes and Toasts for all Occasions." 137 toasts for weddings, birthdays, anniversaries, for wishing health, success and happiness. 157 side-splitting jokes. Prepare yourself for the gay season just around the corner with wit or a toast to keep the fun rolling along.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Jokes and Toasts for All Occasions," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Head Dress of Shells.

Dixie Dunbar, movie actress, has ideas of her own when selecting a headdress to be worn with sports culottes. She wears tiny yellow shells strung on a white silken cord which ties at the back of her head. The simple ornamentation is ideal worn with a tailored culotte suit of heavy creamy biege crepe.

YES, THIS FOOD ENDS YOUR CONSTIPATION

Look out for those half-sick days, when you feel listless, headachy, out-of-sorts. Your trouble may be constipation. The real cause of common constipation is too little "bulk" in meals. Your system misses its regular exercise.

Get this needed "bulk" in a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Within the body, its "bulk" absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently sponges out the system.

Why keep on feeling bad when you can feel good? Millions of people use ALL-BRAN. Tests prove it's safe and effective. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Serve as a cereal, with milk or cream, or cook into recipes. Remember, ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Certainly you'd rather eat a food than take pills and drugs. Buy ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. (Adv.)

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Walsh-Healey

Few, if any, additions to the staff of the division at the Department of Labor enforcing the provisions of the Walsh-Healey act are likely until February, it was learned.

When Congress convenes a deficiency bill for $315,000, sufficient to carry on the administration of the act until the end of the fiscal year, is to be introduced. Until the bill is passed no funds are likely to be available for the division and it will continue functioning with the 30-odd employes it has borrowed from other bureaus, most of them in the Labor Department.

It has been estimated that a staff of about 100 persons will be required to administer the act. This would mean about 70 jobs next February. Under the law all employes, with the exception of lawyers and experts, must have civil service status.

All AAA employes to be furloughed will receive notices Dec. 15—with no additional dismissals January 1. Latest official estimate of the number to receive notices is about 600, with 400 more slated to leave in February or March.

Resolutions

Resettlement Lodge of the A. F. G. E. passed half a dozen resolutions at its last meeting, most of which should be of interest to employes in all emergency agencies fearing staff reductions.

The lodge asks that those RA employes transferred to Agriculture or any other Government agencies under the civil service, be blanketed into the civil service; that all employes now classified in grades lower than civil service standards be reclassified immediately to permit an easy shift into the merit system; that general qualifying examinations be given to dismissed employes of noncivil service agencies to make them eligible for civil service positions; that the hiring of all noncivil service Government personnel from the replacement division be made mandatory; that a WPA project be established for dismissed Government employes, and that the social security act be amended to provide unemployment insurance for Government employes.

National Herbarium

If you want a new world of perceptions opened to you, listen in on tomorrow morning's Office of Education-Smithsonian Institution broadcast on systematic botany or drop in and inspect the Smithsonian's national herbarium. There are nearly 2,000,000 plant specimens from all over the world in the herbarium, all neatly mounted on sheets 16½ inches by 11½, and kept in place with gummed linen or gummed paper strips. At first impression the collection seems like so many plants retrieved from books and letters where they had been sentimentally crushed, but as the herbarium scientists explain the whys and wherefores of "systematic botany" the specimens become alive in their peculiar way.

Classic example of the dollars and cents use of the herbarium is the story of the Amazon Valley "fish poisons." Some South American natives had come across this cube plant which when dropped into water paralyzed the fish and made fishing simply a matter of picking them up. So many small fish were killed that the practice was forbidden. In 1922, however, some of the plant roots were sent to the Department of Agriculture here to test as an insect poison. The roots were found better than most insecticides then being manufactured. More information on the plant was sought from the herbarium and in 1929 an expedition of Smithsonian botanists was sent to South America to track down the sources of the plant.

They succeeded. In 1932 4,000,000 tons of the cube plant roots were exported from the Amazon Valley; last year 460,000,000 tons.

Radio Augurs World Peace, Parley Hears

Political Use Discussed; Chains' Management Praised Highly.

The radio has "almost miraculous possibilities as an instrument of international peace and better understanding among nations," Ambassador de Laboulaye, of France, declared last night at the closing banquet of the first National Conference on Educational Broadcasting.

"Better understanding among nations," said Ambassador de Laboulaye, "is the wisest and most secure road toward international peace. By mutual understanding, secular hatreds may fade away, new friendships may be formed and old ones strengthened. Individuals will realize that they were not born to fight against each other in destructive wars, but to take part, under the rule of peace, in constructive universal co-operation."

Prof. James T. Shotwell, of Columbia University, also stressed the part radio is playing in bringing about more widespread international understanding.

"As I listened this evening," he said, "to the voice of the man who had been King and Emperor of more than 400,000,000 people and thought of the sympathy that went out to him from the lands over which he had no sovereign right, I thought that the sovereign right of the human spirit had been awakened by science."

Cites Diplomacy Change.

The radio, Prof. Shotwell added, will develop in the years to come a business technique in international diplomacy to replace the empty formalities of the present. Already, he said, statesmen must be careful of their language in addressing their constituents for fear the citizens of a neighboring land may be listening in.

Radio broadcasting, though an infant compared to the press and the public meeting, surpasses them both as a medium of reaching America's voters, Prof. Arthur N. Holcombe, of Harvard University, told the conference at the afternoon session.

While admitting the difficulty of calculating the effectiveness of broadcast speeches in the 1936 presidential campaign, Holcombe said no means of communication since the invention of printing has "so profoundly affected the working of political institutions" as the radio.

Recalls Campaign.

Roosevelt's opponents, by overusing the ether waves, probably did their cause more harm than good and Father Coughlin learned the radio could not enable him to dictate to voters, said the political economist.

The dearth of wave lengths and the relatively high cost of broadcasting time stand in the way of full freedom of the air, he told a capacity audience in the Hotel Mayflower ballroom.

"Up to now," he said, "the managements of the great chains have generally shown a sound discretion in the exercise of their editorial judgment concerning broadcasting material. They have recognized that they are in a sense trustees for the public, and not merely the managers of private profit-seeking businesses.

"The same, unfortunately, cannot always be said for the proprietors of local stations. But the leaders of the broadcasting industry have not been unmindful of their public obligations. They have fairly won the opportunity to continue in the management of the industry."

Urges Business Code.

He recommended framing of a voluntary code of fair practices by the broadcasting industry, with the assistance of the public.

Prof. Holcombe's was the only address of the afternoon general session, presided over by Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post.

Speaking on implications of radio as a social and educational phenomenon at the morning general session, Prof. Howard W. Odum, of the University of North Carolina, said:

"Whoever the American people are, whatever they do, wherever they be, they appear as never before both creators and creatures of the great mass power, the perfect laboratory for the limitless reaches of radio.

"We envisage the two-edged implication of radio: On the one hand, without radio, it does not appear possible to bring about that education, homogeneity of ideas and understanding, through which a better designed America may emerge; and, on the other, it may not be possible to attain maximum effectiveness of radio without adequate planning."

Chancellor Harry W. Chase, of New York University, was chairman of the session adressed by Prof. Odum.

At the Conference on Educational Broadcasting

Radio Is Deplored, Protested And Praised at Forum Here

Radio in all its phases was subjected yesterday to dissection by some of the country's leading educators, technicians, musicians and music critics, labor experts and authors.

Splitting into seminars at the conference on educational broadcasting being held at the Mayflower Hotel, they praised, deplored, suggested and protested.

Highlight speakers and excerpts from their remarks:

Gilbert Seldes, author and newspaperman—"A certain freedom and a high degree of variety in American broadcasting are due to a large extent to the same commercial system which must also take credit for a vast amount of stupidity and dullness."

Listener 'Egocentric.'

Samuel E. Gill, research director, Crossley, Inc.—"We have discovered that the average radio listener is, like the average individual in any classification, primarily an extreme egocentric. He must be shown what benefit he will derive from a radio program, whether it be pleasure, entertainment, knowledge or relaxation. He must be catered to."

Mme. Olga Samoroff Stokowski, director, Layman's Music Courses, Inc.—"Has the larger public really given a verdict in the matter that would place education somewhere between the bubonic plague and cholera among the things to be avoided, or are we merely assuming such a state of mind when it is said that musical education is taboo or that it can only be presented in disguise? If this conference could, even in a slight degree, clarify this matter we would be doing something very valuable for the future of music in America."

Paul L. Vogt, senior agricultural economist, Department of Agriculture—"In educational matters workers are by far the most neglected group in American life. Such education as is carried on is in large part in the hands of propaganda groups representing some "ism" or theory of reorganization of industry. . . . The radio, because it is suited to the convenience of the workers and the general public, offers an outstanding means of promoting a better understanding of our industrial problems and labor's interest in them."

Clyde R. Miller, Teachers College, Columbia University—"Good opinion can never be hurt by criticism, because the critical process strips propaganda of prejudice and emotion. The best way to deal with bad propaganda is not to exclude it from press and radio, but to subject it to this searching criticism."

Elite Feel "Cheated."

Mrs. Ruth Haller Ottaway, president, National Council of Women—"Thousands of professional musicians and the millions of club members have endeavored to raise the musical standard of programs. When great artists give serious programs in the concert hall then, facing the microphone, make a chameleon-like change and pander to the general public, both the public and the musically elite feel cheated."

W. Cabell Greet, editor, American Speech—"I doubt whether the speech influence of a year of radio is equal to that of a week's automobile trip in a distant State. After four years of the excellent radio speech of President Roosevelt, is his speech imitated by the youth of the land? It might be good if it were, but I have seen no signs of it."

H. L. Ewbank, University of Wisconsin—"Last year 100 juniors and seniors insisted on enrolling in my course in radio speaking and writing. There were football players, journalists, students of advertising, people who would not, under any circumstance, be found in a course in interpretative reading."

Nikolai Sokoloff, symphony conductor and director of the WPA project—"The fact is that the radio's influence upon education and the success of the radio appeal depends entirely upon an interest in 'living music.' There is great danger that the entire musical life of the country will atrophy if there is too much concentration upon a few great musical broadcasts instead of forwarding community interest in cultural interests of their own making."

Warns of Monopolies.

E. N. Nockels, Station WCFL, Chicago—"There lies ahead of us a definite danger of an attempt on the part of the same type of broadcasters who have heretofore endeavored to obtain a strangle hold on the channels of the air to extend their monopolistic attempts to include educational broadcasting, and to so control it as to appropriate its benefits in the way of increased and constant listening audiences to their own selfish gain."

Ernest La Prade, NBC—"I believe that when ways can be found for the listener to participate in broadcast programs, the educational possibilities of broadcasting are greatly enlarged."

Pierre V. R. Key, editor Musical Digest—"What needs attention, it seems to me, is greater care in the making of programs. Some of our good music comes from the so-called popular class. And much of what is labeled classic is not good music at all."

Spencer Miller, jr., director, Workers Education Bureau—"The labor movement has consistently and vigorously sought a wider use of all the facilities of radio for the purposes of information and public education."

Davidson Taylor, CBS—"Some stations look on Bach with fear and trembling, other stations feel there is no audience for radical contemporary composers."

Julius F. Seebach, Mutual Broadcasting Co.—"Intelligent people should cease to treat popular music as a thing to be deplored and begin to look at it as an integral part of our national life to be encouraged and from which to expect better things than are currently demanded of it."

Knight to Give Report At Nashville Parley

Hit-Run Driver Injures Young Roller Skater

12-Year-Old Boy Left in Road; 7 Others Hurt in D. C. Traffic.

While roller skating in Fourth street near Vista drive northwest last night, Joseph Campbell, 12, 491 Maryland avenue southwest, was struck by a hit-and-run automobile and left lying unconscious in the roadway.

The lad, unnoticed by passing cars, lay in the street for a quarter of an hour, when he regained consciousness and made his way to his home. His father took him to Casualty Hospital where he was treated for a probable skull fracture and concussion of the brain.

Three persons were injured when the automobile in which they were riding skidded into a post at Lincoln road and Bryant street northeast. M. Bernard Duff, 32, of Takoma Park, Md., driver of the car, was treated at Casualty Hospital for possible internal injuries and severe lacerations. The passengers, Lida Annals, 32, and James Bokey, 20, also of Takoma Park, Md., were treated at Sibley Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Samuel B. Sards, 62, address unknown, suffered a probable skull fracture, when he was struck at Third and Pennsylvania avenue southeast by an automobile driven, police said, by Ronald Spitzer, 4120 Fourteenth street northwest. He was treated at Providence Hospital.

William Lamarr, 26, 600 block of Ninth street northwest, suffered a fractured ankle when he was struck at Ninth and Q streets northwest by an automobile driven, police said, by Joseph Hubbard, 205 Sixteenth street southeast. He

Grocer Albert Katzval, 1101 Seventh street southeast, felt he was being imposed upon last night when the youth for whom he was changing a $10 bill demanded that he hand over the contents of his cash register.

So Grocer Katzval, without further ado, swung a terrific punch at the holdup man's jaw. Without waiting for his change the youth fled with Katzval in hot pursuit. After a three-block footrace, Katzval jumped on the running board of a police scout car and pursued the fugitive to Eleventh and M streets southeast where he was captured.

At the Fifth Precinct the fugitive identified himself as Albert Miller, 21, 901 Eleventh street southeast. He is being held "for investigation."

Earlier in the day a sneak thief walked out of the A. Kahn, Inc., jewelry store, 935 F street northwest with a tray full of yellow gold rings valued at $700. The loss was not discovered until a pre-closing inventory was made.

Paul Davis, 26, 1428 N street northwest, collector for an afternoon newspaper, reported he was robbed of $125 by two colored men at Q and Marion streets northwest. One of the robbers was armed, Davis said.

Gas Company Planning New Stock Issue

Move Disclosed to Retire $6,600,000 in Bonds Now Outstanding.

Step Will Bring Better Capital Structure Balance, PUC Told.

The way was paved for early issuance of additional common stock by the Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday at a conference between Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, and representatives of the banker-owners of the Washington and Suburban Companies.

A. J. Stillwell, of the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago, and J. D. Wittemore, of the Chase Bank, New York, making their third call on the commission, disclosed a plan for retiring all outstanding bonds of the common-law trust which owns the Washington Gas Co., and of freeing the latter of a covenant restriction which has hitherto prevented the stock issuance.

Five banks which control the Washington and Suburban Companies have agreed to lend the trust $6,600,000 for the recall of the bonds, Keech was told, with the understanding that the loan will be repaid when the holding company sells its 109,000 shares of Washington Gas Light Co. stock and other securities.

Other Banks Involved.

Besides the two banks, which were represented by the spokesmen, the other banks involved are Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago; the Public National Bank of New York, and the Central Republic Trust Co., Chicago.

The commission for some time has urged revision of the financing structure of the Washington Gas Light Company on the ground it is overbalanced with bonds as against stock.

It was with the objective of authorizing the issuance of additional voting stock that the commission supported the bill merging the Washington and Georgetown companies.

Hitch Developed.

After the passage of the legislation, however, it developed that the covenant between the Washington company and the trust prevented the former from issuing new stock unless the holding company was willing to buy its proportional share in order to retain its percentage control of the local organization. The trust declined to make the purchase.

The Washington and Suburban Companies will apply to the Securities and Exchange Commission early next week for authority to borrow the $6,600,000 for retirement of the 5½ per cent debenture bonds. The recall will be made as of December 31 with the deadline February 1.

The commission has no knowledge at this time as to how much new stock the Washington company may issue. It is known, however, that the company, besides facing capital expenditures of approximately $1,000,000 a year, wishes to retire some of its own bonds.

Updike Convicted On Driving Charge

Ralph E. Updike, former Representative from Indiana, was found guilty of reckless driving by a police court jury yesterday. He is to be sentenced a week from today.

The charge grew out of an accident at Twenty-sixth and U streets November 12, in which two persons were injured. Updike's case was decided by a jury of seven women and five men.

Updike, who lives at 2219 Randolph place northwest, pleaded not guilty. According to testimony, his car collided with a lumber company truck, which later careened across the street, tearing a porch from a house and caving in a brick wall.

Newspaperman Talks on Spain To Geographic

Neville Describes Scenes When Revolt Halted His Vacation.

A vacation in Spain, unexpectedly terminated by screeching of shells and blasts of bombs as the revolution broke, was described and pictured for members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall last night by Robert Neville, New York newspaper writer.

Entering Spain in July by way of the little border town of Irun, which was soon to be shattered by the impending conflict, Neville and his party stopped at nearby San Sebastian, gilded watering place of Spanish wealth and aristocracy, and crossed the then peaceful Guardarrama Mountains to Madrid. There was considerable political excitement in the Spanish capital, Neville said, but he and his companions did not suspect how close was the outbreak of civil war.

Near Madrid the speaker visited ancient Toledo, most Oriental of the Spanish cities, and numerous small villages where life was flowing in the peaceful ways it had known through the centuries.

Raids in Seville.

By the time Neville and his party reached Seville in southern Spain political conditions were rather turbulent. On several occasions when they were dining, their cafes were raided and waiters and fellow diners were arrested. They left Seville only a few hours before a state of siege was declared, journeying to Granada.

They had hardly established themselves there when the city was taken over by the rebels and all communication with the outside world was cut off. For nearly a month they lived in a suburban hotel on a hillside overlooking the city while it was attacked both from the ground and from the air by troops.

While in Granada, the speaker declared, he witnessed the most ruthless treatment of hostages in which both sides, he said, were equally culpable. For each bomb dropped on the city by government planes the rebel officers in control of the city shot five loyalist sympathizers. They were hauled in truck loads to the cemeteries and there shot.

Boarded the Oklahoma.

After living more than four weeks as virtual prisoners in their hotel in Granada, Neville and a score of other Americans persuaded the rebel authorities to fly them out in an army transport plane. They landed in Seville and from there were taken by bus to Cadiz, where they boarded the U. S. S. Oklahoma.

Neville, who has visited Spain repeatedly, showed lantern slides and motion pictures which drew a vivid contrast between the peaceful Spain of a few months ago and the war-torn country of today. The earlier pictures showed care-free crowds on the boulevards of San Sebastian and Madrid and in the narrow streets of Toledo, Seville and Granada, as well as scenes among the shepherds of the countryside, the peasants in the rural villages and workers in the orange orchards of Andalusia.

Motion pictures, some of them little more than a week old, showed modern buildings and unusual cathedrals blasted into fragments, pitiful refugees making their way from their splintered homes and men and women troops crumpling on the battlefield.

Church to Present Drama.

The Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, and Irving L. Koch, chairman of the arrangements committee, have charge of preparations for the twelfth annual presentation of Dr. Henry Van Dyke's famous story, "The Other Wise Man." The dramatization, directed by Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, will be given the nights of December 27, 28 and 29.

Postal Agents Uncover Fake Doctors' Ring

'GlimmerRacket' Charge Placed Against Hyman Schwartzman.

Arrested here yesterday in the Postoffice Department's Nationwide drive against operators of the so-called "glimmer racket"—a ring of fake eye specialists—Hyman Schwartzman, 62, was held in bond of $15,000 last night pending extradition proceedings.

Seized shortly before noon in offices of an Anacostia ginger ale company, Schwartzman was accused of swindling Mrs. Joseph Emmanuel, wealthy 80-year-old widow of Aiken, S. C.

According to postal inspectors, Mrs. Emmanuel gave Schwartzman six checks totaling $15,005. During the past four years, authorities said, the half-blind widow has been victimized in much larger sums by members of the ring.

Indicted in West.

Soon after his arrest, Schwartzman was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on a fugitive warrant. He already is under indictment in Milwaukee, Wis., for alleged fraudulent use of the mails and conspiracy to violate mail fraud statutes. The Postoffice Department holds South Carolina fugitive warrants against him.

A removal hearing before Commissioner Turnage is scheduled next week. It is likely Schwartzman will be taken to Milwaukee to face the indictments which were returned November 20.

Usually choosing as its victims aged persons of wealth and high standing, members of the gang pose as eye doctors, perform fake operations and charge exorbitant prices for cheap glasses.

Each "doctor" who attended Mrs. Emmanuel gave her name to fellow members of the ring, inspectors revealed. One at a time the fakers approached the suffering widow and told her the previous specialist was a fraud. In this manner she was duped of large sums of money, investiagtors said.

Checks Recovered.

Postal Inspector W. D. Conn, who with Inspector George W. Matthews, investigated the case, said canceled checks were recovered from an Aiken bank.

Schwartzman, who claims to be an optician, once was sentenced to serve two years in Sing Sing Prison on fraud counts and four years ago was arrested by Pennsylvania State police on false pretense charges, postal officials said. When arrested in Pennsylvania, Schwartzman allegedly used the name of "Dr. Bush."

THE POST'S New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

Calling All Stars!

HEYWOOD PATTERSON: Lieutenant Governor Knight, who prosecuted the Scottsboro case, visited New York the other day, for a consultation with Sam Leibowitz, attorney for the defense. Knight offered to accept a plea of guilty in a minor degree—not punishable by death. Leibowitz turned it down, offering instead to plead guilty for his clients—for vagrancy.

ASTHER: The Theater Guild has a swell role for you in its forthcoming play — but doesn't know where to find you . . . Lee Schubert: Julie Bryan, Gypsy Rose Lee's understudy in the "Follies," just signed with Minsky's. Her first step was to hire herself a bodyguard . . .

LESLIE HOWARD: Joan Adrian of your "Hamlet" cast entered a cab yesterday and asked the driver whether he had seen John Gielgud in "Hamlet." . . . "Naw", the hackie replied, "I don't like the name." . . . "You don't like the name Geilgud?" asked Miss Adrian. "I don't mean Gielgud", was the reply. "I don't like the name 'Hamlet.' . . . Shirley Temple: One year ago Darryl Zanuck heard a broadcast of the song 'That's What I Want for Christmas." He wired the composer: "Take it off the air. I may want to buy it." The author obliged, and this week—one year later—Zanuck bought the song—for your new picture.

F. D. R.: With Hearst employing your son-in-law, and with another of your sons marrying a Du Pont, the rumor now is that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be offered an editorial job with the Literary Digest . . . Mrs. Simpson: It's strange that Winston Churchill should be the King's defender, insisting that it's all right for a ruler to wed a twice-divorced commoner . . . that a person shall have the right of selecting a spouse. For Churchill won't let his Sarah marry a vaudevillian.

IRVING BERLIN: Hollywood insists your score for "On the Avenue" is the best you've ever written for the movies . . . Medical Assn.: Martin Beck, the producer, needed a tooth extracted yesterday as well as a minor operation on his back. His dentist and physician have offices in the same building. Beck had the operation performed while he still was under gas for the tooth extraction. After it was over he turned to Harry Goetz and explained: "Double Feature!"

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Idle Chatter.

Hollywood, Dec. 11.

CARY GRANT.

Andy Devine. Paul Lukas has cleaned up a fortune in European munitions stocks. Peas from the same pod: Arline Judge and Peggy Conklin (they even talk and dress alike). If Cary Grant has not changed, he leaves an I. O. U. tip for the waitress—and always pays up. Scene stealer: Basil Rathbone. Gladys Swarthout walks so rapidly, two blocks at her side might wind you. Current nonplus: To stare at Simone Simon's fascinating mouth or her shapely ankles?

Nordic Sonja Henie is one-fourth Irish, which explains the twinkle in her eye. There is something intriguing about the methodic way Norma Shearer picks at a chicken bone. In need of good pictures to bolster fading prestige — Jean Harlow and Mae West.

When Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor really want to dance (and they can) they visit a 40c ballroom on Hollywood's east hem. Shirley Temple's "health" playhouse is built of glass (parlor, bedroom, bath). Helen Wood. Twentieth Century-Fox ingenue from Tennessee, superstitiously motors around the studio to enter through the Tennessee street gate. Bette Davis' description of her stand-in: Blonde by per-oxy.

Robert Young, proposing to Florence Rice for a picture scene, jumbled the line: "Could you manage to marry me?" and said: "Could you marry to manage me?" From where I sit, the second reading is nearer to Honest-to-Gawd truth.

Around Hollywood, men seldom wear hats, (and it isn't because hats are not made big enough). It is because fine climate (Chamber of Commerce, please note) dispels need of them. To quit blathering and tell my story, Gene Raymond is a non-hatter, but when he is away from Hollywood he feels compelled to wear one lest he be ridiculed as a show-off.

Some time ago I went with Gene to Wichita, Kans., where he made personal appearances for charity, obviously hindered by my own feeble attempts to m. c. the occasion. He left four hats behind him, and only today did the last one make its way back to Hollywood. One was mailed from Wichita, two from plane stops along the way, and the last—a $40 Panama—arrived from Albuquerque in a cardboard box, 29c, C. O. D.

Leon Errol and Bing Crosby Are the Costars on New Bill at Earle Theater

Stage Comic's Revue Is Outstanding Hit of Week's Program.

BELL.

Leon Errol, veteran of burlesque, the Ziegfeld "Follies," "Louis the Fourteenth," "Sally," and more musical revues than you can count on your fingers and toes, is the prevalent figure on the Earle Theater stage this week in a Fanchon and Marco tabloid revue that is fast, tuneful, clever and full of dances.

Errol is surrounded by youthful players who pick this thing up and make it one of the high spots of the season in the theaters still courageous enough to present vaudeville as a regular part of their weekly bills.

Leon Errol possesses a distinctive brand of comic ebullience that few can approach. His forte is the impersonation of inebriety. He still is the best "drunk" on the stage. This is manifested several times in his present activities, but probably the high point of his pastiming is the direction of a screen play which is projected from the booth but directed by Mr. Errol at the microphone. The participants in the action are the members of the cast of his present revue. All are capable artists, one or two being of outstanding caliber.

Sunnie Shines.

Fairly sharing honors with the start in his "Hollywood Follies of 1937" is Sunnie O'Dea, seen with Eddie Cantor in "Strike Me Pink" and with Irene Dunne in "Show Boat." Miss O'Dea is a very evident threat to the eminence of Eleanor Powell, Ruby Keeler, Eleanore Whitney and the other tap dancers who seem to dominate their field at present. Sunnie steps out with a couple of routines in the present divertissement that are as intricate as they are neatly and rhythmically executed.

Then there are the other singers and dancers who amplify the appeal of this expertly contrived diversion—Lou Ashe, Yola Galli, 12 Hollywood models who look as if they really might be; John Crabbe, Jack Wood, Gresham and Blake and all the rest contribute swiftly and beneficially to this high-pressure bit of compact entertainment into which has been crammed almost as much amusement as one might expect from a full evening's musical comedy.

Screen Trailers Help.

The screen plays an important part in more ways than one in the Errol act. The whole merry business is introduced by a "trailer"—they call them that because they come before, rather than after, the item they introduce—visualizing the departure from Hollywood of the star and his cast, aboard a giant American Airline plane. The landing seems quite realistically to occur on the stage of the Earle Theater and the debarking of the troupe all seems part of a direct and unbroken continuity.

Mr. Errol is the last to bail out, but he always is worth waiting for.

There is, of course, a picture also on the bill at the Earle this week. It is "Pennies From Heaven," a Columbia production in which Bing Crosby is the star, supported by Madge Evans and little Miss Edith Fellows. This Miss Fellows, to my mind, is the best of the juvenile actresses, not excepting the prodigious Miss Shirley Temple. She has a considerable part in this picture and plays it with precocious skill. Miss Evans has been better in better parts, but, by and large, "Pennies From Heaven" adds up on the right side, particularly with Mr. Crosby singing as much as he does and Louis Armstrong trumpeting a little, too, with his swing band to add still further zest to the occasion.

Long Live the King.

The story doesn't amount to too much, but will do in a pinch. It is the old one about the "last of the vagabond troubadours," who gets out of jail just in time to do a kindly service for the man who was electrocuted that morning. It seems he had killed Miss Fellows' father and wanted to do something about it. It is Bing who finally does it.

When he learns that the child is confined in an orphanage, he manages her escape by taking a carnival company to the institution to put on a show. The show is a major factor in the interest of the picture.

The bill is augmented by a close-up of the abdicated King Edward VIII, with running comment by Lowell Thomas that is just a little incongruous, since it assumes from the start that King Edward would rule the entire span of his life. The announcement of his abdication comes as a belated addendum to a misleading recital.

The Paramount News further supplements a feature that is of less consequence than the personal appearance on the stage of Mr. Errol and his talented cohorts.

RKO-Keith's

"REMBRANDT," London Film's production of a story by Carl Zuckmayer, starring Charles Laughton, supported by Gertrude Lawrence, Elsa Lanchester, John Bryning and Roger Livesey. Directed by Alexander Korda. Reviewed second week by Dorothea Lewis.

England here gives us a truly beautiful picture, lovingly done, simple and moving with all the color, richness and depth of the paintings of Rembrandt Van Rijn. It is a quiet picture, but not a static or a slow one, being about people of great life and vitality.

Charles Laughton, in the title role, does a magnificent piece of acting—though magnificent is a little too big and blousy a word to be exactly the right one. This performance has all the detail and tenderness of intaglio carving about it. The reunion of Laughton and Alexander Korda has resulted in another brilliant translation of a character into a man, which makes you feel how grand to be an actor and to have such a part to play, and how grand to have this part to be played and such an actor to play it.

Is Gallant Figure.

Only once or twice, does Laughton betray himself by rolling his eyes about and making familiar faces. For the rest of the time he is the gusty Rembrandt of the 1600's, a man whose life was made up of his painting, two women whom he loved, and one who hounded and nagged and scolded him into fury and financial failure, but never into "painting properly," when that meant flattering unworthy subjects.

Elsa Lanchester is quite perfect and very gentle as Henrickje, though her accent vanishes a little quickly. Gertrude Lawrence, forgetting glamor, proves her acting mettle as the disagreeable, but very human Geertje Dirx. The beggar of Roger Livesey is a ripe, wise, merry creature who poses as a model for King Saul and then teaches Rembrandt how to beg.

Everyone in the cast and the director and photographer, particularly, have made it seem a labor of love. Scene after scene is stirring and memorable, and the screen this time has all the dimensions of the theater. Don't miss it.

As good measure there's an interesting "March of Time," traveling to Belgium, over the proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway route, and on one-night stands about the U. S. A. with the Federal Theater Project, including a glimpse of Sinclair Lewis' surprising play, "It Can't Happen Here." A newsreel and a colored cartoon complete the bill.

Bab and Bud Go Into Their Dance

Stage and Screen Split Even On Ace Bill at Loew's Capitol

"BANJO ON MY KNEE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the novel by Parry Hamilton, adapted to the screen by Nunnally Johnson, with music and lyrics by Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson, costarring Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, with Walter Brennan, Buddy Ebsen, Helen Westley, Katherine De Mille, Walter Catlett, Spencer Charters, Anthony Martin, Victor Killian and Minna Gombell. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed at Loew's Capitol Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Between the shanty boat swing of "Banjo on My Knee" and the Russian-tropical swing of Dave Apollon, audiences at the Capitol this week are swingin' for fair. Stage and screen fare run a dead heat in interest, with Phil Lampkin and his lads taking both place and show honors with an orchestral mixture titled "Edward of Windsor," but winding up with the highly equivocal sentiment of "God Save the King."

Dave Apollon's admirers will be glad to hear that he has a spang-new line-up. Dave is by way of being a star scout for fresh talent. The newcomers in his show are all smart show folk and their varied talents offer a neatly balanced program. If there is a criticism, it is that the show is so big that it automatically eliminates the usual ratio of excellent Apollon music.

Woods Rings the Bell.

Leading the Apollon crew is Johnny Woods, impresonator, who lays the audience especially low with his take-offs of Kate Smith, Alfred E. Smith (Forgotten Man of Politics), also with a perfectly respectful, but telling impression of the President.

Lyda Sue, a dancing vision in pink, Charles and Charlotte Lamberton, ballroom dancers (you'd never dream they're deaf-mutes) and our own Johnny Barnes make up a practically impregnable stepping ensemble. But not to be forgotten is Apollon's slick new dancing chorus and Tommy Brent's "trucking" puppet. The rest of the Brent puppet show seemed to this critic to be too much in the broader puppet tradition. Yvonne Moray, midget blues artist, is about the biggest gal you ever saw for her size. She must be all of 30 inches high, but she dances that firebrand of a Dave Apollon all over the stage.

An unheralded part of the stage show is the new girl soloist with Phil Lampkin's orchestra. Her rendering of "Romance" was delightful and would have rated a couple of encores if it had not occurred in the middle of the "Edward of Windsor" overture.

"Banjo On My Knee," though intrinsically weak, has so many big moments, so many monkeyshines and shindigs, such swell dancing and shanty music by Buddy Ebsen and Walter Brennan, that it climbs right up into the higher entertainment notches.

You will be lucky if you start to see "Banjo On My Knee" right in the middle of the picture. It is a nifty from there to the end, but the first half is apt to annoy you, especially the spectacle of Barbara Stanwyck hanging onto Joel McCrea and begging for just one more kiss while the police are banging on the door with the idea of grabbing Joel on a hanging matter. The too-talkative high-school kid in back of us remarked, "I'd give her a kiss—right on the schnozzle." He said it.

Joel McCrea hits a fine pace throughout the picture. The role of the shanty-boat boy who is too handy with his fists is right up his lane. Right next to him certainly comes Buddy Ebsen and Walter Brennan. Not only do they provide dancing and musical specialties that largely make the picture, but they also prove comedians of the first water.

Stanwyck At Her Best.

Barbara Stanwyck is better than she has been for just too long. The role of the artless and uneducated, but sincere and brave little shanty boat girl is ineffably better suited to the Stanwyck talents than the semi-sophisticated parts she has been doing. Helen Westley is condemned to the role of a half-witted old crone, but that other excellent character actor, Walter Catlett, draws a better opportunity and does well by it. Anthony Martin and Katherine De Mille efficiency supply the tangled love interests.

The story of "Banjo on My Knee," not important, still contains plenty of action and deft suspense that increases right up to the last moment. It revolves around the marriage of a pair of young shanty-boaters and their immediate separation as the result of a fight that at first appears to involve a bit of manslaughter. The result is to carry the folks involved up and down Ol' Man River for hundreds of miles from Arkansas to New Orleans where matters come to a head in the doggonedest barroom battle you are ever likely to witness (we hope).

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher" Ely Culbertson says.

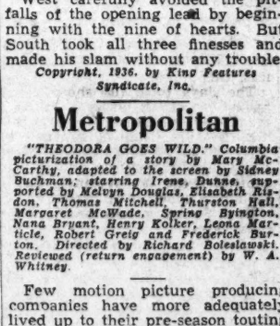
What Are the Odds?

Most bridge players know that a finesse has a 50 per cent chance of success. For there are only two possibilities: Either one opponent or the other has the missing high card—and, in the absence of any illuminating bidding or play, one opponent is just as likely as the other to hold it. But very few players know what chance there is that two of three finesses will succeed.

How often you will hear a player exclaim "We were certainly lucky to make ten tricks, but I'm glad we didn't bid game. Why, we needed two finesses out of three!"

But actually the two cases are exactly the same. You have exactly an even chance to win two finesses out of three. Therefore, it is not only good to bid a game in such a case, but even a slam is a fair bet. Remarkably enough, a hand which exactly illustrated this point was dealt in a duplicate game and only one player had a clear enough idea of his prospects to bid the slam.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 hearts	Pass	4 hearts	Pass
6 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding was excellent from start to finish. South had only four possible losing cards and over six and one-half honor tricks so that his two-bid was amply warranted. North's response was peculiarly enlightening.

The bid, in the Culbertson system, is used to show a very weak hand which contains, nevertheless, good trump support. The requirements are: Four trumps to the Queen, or any five trumps; and no singleton, void, King, or Act in the hand. In other words, the bid means: "Partner, I like your suit, but can furnish absolutely no help toward slam."

South knew what North's response meant but properly disregarded its note of warning. He could be sure of being able to enter North's hand at least three times with his low hearts. That meant that he would be able to take all three finesses. Since this would give him a 50 per cent chance for a slam (with the added advantage that any opening lead but a heart would give him), he bid six at once. Since it was duplicate bridge, he properly bid the slam in no-trump to take advantage of the extra value of the notrump trick score—an important item in tournament bridge.

West carefully avoided the pitfalls of the opening lead by beginning with the nine of hearts. But South took all three finesses and made his slam without any trouble.

Metropolitan

"THEODORA GOES WILD." Columbia picturization of a story by Mary McCarthy, adapted to the screen by Sidney Buchman; starring Irene Dunne, supported by Melvyn Douglas, Elizabeth Risdon, Thomas Mitchell, Thurston Hall, Margaret McWade, Spring Byington, Nana Bryant, Henry Kolker, Leona Maricle, Robert Greig and Frederick Burton. Directed by Richard Boleslawski. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Few motion picture producing companies have more adequately lived up to their pre-season touting of bigger and better" pictures than has Columbia, and "Theodora Goes Wild" is added fuel to that burning flame of achievement.

Admirably blending elements of the bucolic and urban, after the manner of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," the current return engagement at the Metropolitan Theater amusingly recounts the story of a demure country lass who has made anonymous fame as the author of "Sinned Against," a yarn in content diametrically opposed to the smug life of her little town.

Deciding to shake off her inhibitions, she goes on a rampage, much of which centers upon a handsome, though married, young interloper. What happens, and how, forms the basis for one of the season's best comedy fabrications.

Supplementing the feature are "Don't Look Now," a Merry Melody in Technicolor; a musical reel, featuring Emil Coleman and his orchestra, and the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels.

Columbia

"COME AND GET IT." United Artists release of the Samuel Goldwyn picturization of a story by Edna Ferber, adapted to the screen by Jane Murfin and Jules Furthman, starring Edward Arnold, supported by Frances Farmer, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Andrea Leeds, Frank Shields, Mady Christians, Mary Nash, Edwin Maxwell, Cecil Cunningham and Charles Halton. Directed by Howard Hawkes and William Wyler. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Drama full of substance, with dashes of comedy and excitement, "Come and Get It," is again on view for those who missed this cinematized Edna Ferber story in the pre-Thanksgiving rush. Many a Washingtonian, who knew him when he was buffo for Uncle Steve Cochran's National Theater Players, will particularly like this picture, not only for its substantial drama, but for Edward Arnold's excellent work as an industrial colossus who has ruthlessly attained his position of eminence.

Forceful as is the plain story of the rise of Barney Glasgow, it has been augmented by the addition of a "private life" theme which finds its high point in the love of father and son for the daughter of the father's one-time doting admirer, who was tossed aside.

Easily topping anything he has ever done, Mr. Arnold dominated the picture, yet the while permitting Frances Farmer, in the dual role of mother and daughter, to scale heights of histrionic excellence not earlier attained.

The Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Sporting Pals;" "Parked in Paree," with Buster West and Tom Patrisola in a comedy-song-dance concoction, and a release of "News of the Day" round out a highly satisfying program.

Lost and Found By Priscilla Wayne

SYNOPSIS.

Doris Lee is doubly a prisoner in the home of a mysterious, surly, handsome young man whom she knows only as George, after being saved by George and his dog, Patrick, from death in a blizzard high in the Jemez Mountains. Her injuries and the snow with which the blizzard blocked the highways make a prisoner of Doris, and so does George. Before she has been in his modern mountain cabin a few days, she realizes that he suspects her—of what she does not know. She is not without suspicion of him—a young man, apparently a physician, he has chosen to hide himself, to conceal his real name, for what reason? George's suspicions of Doris are based on a radio broadcast, picked up the night he rescued her from the blizzard, describing a fugitive gun woman who took part in a bank robbery and murder and escaped into the mountains. The description fits Doris, although the girl wanted is named Polly. After several days together both George and Doris feel, but do not admit, an increasing interest in each other. Doris' own clothing had been torn by cactus and caked with mud while she was lost in the mountain. She now wears clothing lent her by Chicquita, George's housekeeper, young Indian wife of his houseman, Teck.

CHAPTER EIGHT.

Chicquita was a blessing. In the five long, snow-bound days that Doris lived under George's roof the girl decided she would have gone insane from worry and grief if it had not been for Chicquita.

Chicquita was of the Jemez tribe of Indians. Born and reared in the mountains, in one of the several villages of the Jemez, the girl retained all of the simple, childlike qualities of her race, although she had a rather superior education, and learned a great deal of the white man's ways.

There was one topic that Chicquita would not discuss freely—and that was her employer. Always she referred to George as doctor. But not once did she add another name.

In some ways she discussed George quite freely.

Her father and motner had served many years in George's family. It was not an ordinary thing for Indians to be servants, she explained to Doris proudly. Mexicans were house servants. And, if you would accept Chicquita's notion of it, they were not very good servants, at that.

When an Indian consented to serve in a menial capacity it was only because he respected and loved the ones he served.

Chicquita's parents had loved and respected George's parents. Because of that love and respect they had become life-long servants in George's parental home. A rare thing, Chicquita explained, but it happened occasionally. Why the doctor and Teck had been in school together when they were boys.

Questions.

Doris ventured a few questions about Teck. Who was Teck? How did he happen in on this adoration of families? Well, Teck was an orphan Navajo whom her father had provided for, Chicquita explained. And Teck wasn't his Indian name any more than Chicquita was her Indian name—but her father had called them by those names, which were really terms of endearment.

And when they grew up, well, it had been quite natural for the two to fall in love. At least so Chicquita explained with many blushes and much conversation. It had been quite natural for her to fall in love with Teck because he was so tall and handsome and so gentle and kind.

Gazing with admiration at the little brown woman Doris decided that it was not amazing that Teck had fallen in love with Chicquita Chicquita was amazingly smart and amazingly pretty.

Unusual, all of them, Doris decided. Among the few things she knew of the Indians of the Southwest, Doris knew the clannishness of the tribes. Intermarriage was extremely rare, certainly intermarriage between two such fundamentally different tribes. The Navajos, fierce and warlike, herdsmen and weavers, differed greatly from members of the quiet, agricultural Jemez tribe.

Chicquita told Doris many stories of her tribe. They were fascinating to the white girl. And Chicquita's quick, neat way of doing housework interested Doris.

Doris Helps.

"Just be careful that you don't turn your ankle," George cautioned her. "It's not a bad sprain but it could be. Take it easy, that's all."

And Doris was glad that the restrictions of sitting quiet had been removed from her. She couldn't have endured reading much longer and it was too disconcerting to sit across from George hour after hour and play cards and to know that for some reason or other he distrusted her completely.

Once she even ventured asking Chicquita about it. "Your doctor boss seems so quiet and so different," she said. Sometimes he doesn't even speak to me for an hour at a time. Just deals the cards and plays. It gets on my nerves."

Chicquita sighed. "It's good that he plays the cards, Teck says so, too. There were many months that doctor did not even play solitaire. Or read. Or listen to the radio. I thought I would go wild just watching him."

"What was wrong, Chicquita?" Doris asked. "Nerves? Did he have a breakdown or something?"

"I think," Chicquita said pointedly, "that I will go now and make up the beds."

But Doris brought the subject back to the mysterious Doctor George. "Just a minute, Please, Chicquita. You infer that it is surprising that Doctor George plays cards with me. Is he a woman hater, then?"

Chicquita shrugged her shoulders. "How should I know? I'm not Dr. George."

Doris tried a different slant. "Why shouldn't he like me? I'm young. Some men have even called me pretty. And your Dr. George must be a bit lonely—up here in the mountain alone, even if he does live like a prince. I'd think he'd welcome the diversion of having company. I know I would. I think instead of almost snubbing me at times, he'd just be downright delighted that the storm blew me in. At least it gave him someone to talk to."

Chicquita gathered up her dust cloths and vacuum cleaner. "If I don't finish soon," she remarked, "you'll have no lunch."

"I don't care about lunch. I hate lunch."

Doris was instantly contrite. "Please don't mind my acting like an ungrateful bear, Chicquita. I do like the lunches you prepare. They're wonderful. You're a grand cook. But I just get so blue. I wonder if this storm will ever stop?"

Chicquita grinned at that. "Two—three days more, maybe. The storm always stops. Nothing lasts forever."

"Well, if being a prisoner up here lasts much longer, Chicquita, I'm telling you that I can't stand it. If we could only listen to the radio. But it's out of order." She was watching Chicquita closely as she spoke.

"It seems queer, too. The vacuum cleaner and the lights and everything work. Why doesn't the radio? Everything else works. Why don't you say something, Chicquita?"

Chicquita stood at the doorway with her cleaning things. She was eager to close the conversation. That fact showed in every line of her pretty face. "I need to make the beds, Miss Doris."

"The beds can wait another minute or two, Chicquita. I want you to tell me why the radio is out of order."

"If I knew, Miss Doris, I could fix it."

"Have you ever tried plugging it in down in the basement?"

Chicquita grinned. "No, have you?"

"I haven't gone down into the basement, no. But I pulled on the cord up here. It ought to be plugged in some place, hadn't it? Well, it isn't. It's loose."

Chicquita showed astonishment. "Well, that's odd, isn't it?"

"Mighty odd if you ask me, Chicquita. I want you to answer a question for me. Will you?"

Chicquita fidgeted from one foot to the other. "I will if I can."

"You mean you will if you must. Well, you must, Chicquita. And that question is this. Am I a prisoner here? It looks very much as though I might consider myself a prisoner."

Chicquita parried with another question. "Is there any reason why you should consider yourself a prisoner?"

"Perhaps there is. Perhaps there isn't."

"Well, you'll have to decide that for yourself, Miss Doris." Chicquita said with finality.

"Huh, how could I decide it? You know I couldn't get away with the snow. And with his hurt ankle. I'd be foolish to try, wouldn't I?"

No Reason.

Chicquita nodded solemnly. "Yes, I guess you would be foolish to try. That is—unless there's some reason why you should run away."

"There isn't any reason why I should run away. Why should there be?"

"I don't know," Chicquita said stupidly.

"Well, I'm going to have it out with your mysterious Doctor George. You hear that? I'll not be watched and spied upon and kept prisoner this way. I'll not be."

King-Smith

"MOOR BORN." The King-Smith Playhouse presents the biographical drama in five parts, by Dan Totheroh, staged by S. Wesley McKee, with setting by Hugo Inden. At the King-Smith Playhouse, December 10 and 11. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. A. Whitney.

An intensely played drama of family history, written almost in the O'Neill manner, "Moor Born" was presented Thursday evening "under" the Shoreham Hotel, as the King-Smith Playhouse unfolded Dan Totheroh's dramatization of the Bronte sisters. And the players again came through with a sterling production, a worthy successor to their work in "Hotel Universe."

The story of how Anne, Charlotte and Emily Bronte became figures in English letters under the noms de guerre (and in those days—1845—it was war, too) respectively of Acton, Currer and Ellis Bell, and how they submerged their own identities by parental dictum, to the unsubstantiated genius of the brother, Branwell, offers stern drama with but little physical movement.

Played with a near-professional smoothness, with characterizations for the most part clear cut and lines read with believable sincerity, "Moor Born" brought to life, under the able direction of S. Wesley McKee, as dramatic a biographical story of literary folk as one might wish.

The sisters were played by Jane Eoff, as Anne, demure and lovely; Linda Grantham, as Charlotte, author of "Jane Eyre;" and Phillipa Jane Hutchins, as Emily, of "Wuthering Heights" fame. Of the three, Miss Hutchins was particularly fine, rising superbly in her closing scene.

Likewise in a last scene, Carl Christianson, as brother Branwell, addicted to liquor and opium, gave a great interpretation of the genius whose talents were never realized.

Fight for Title Before April Ordered

Later Dates Spurned as Precluding Contest With Joe Louis.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 11.—The Jimmy Braddock-Max Schmeling heavyweight championship fight was right back there behind the eight ball tonight.

A hectic three-hour session of the New York State Athletic Commission, during which sharp words flew back and forth, accomplished nothing except to show the gladiators are far apart in their demands.

Obviously disgusted when an afternoon of bickering saw the proceedings getting exactly nowhere, the commission summarily ordered the opposing camps to get together on a date in February or March and make it snappy.

This proposal was counted out from the start. Joe Gould said he positively wouldn't send Braddock into an indoor title bout and James J. Johnston, speaking for Madison Square Garden, the promoter, didn't see much chance of taking it to Florida.

A contract submitted by the Garden calling for the show to be staged in the Long Island City Bowl on June 3 was agreeable to Schmeling, but flatly rejected by the Braddock camp.

Might Block Louis Bout.

The objection was based on a clause that neither principal is to fight in anything but four-round exhibitions in the interim. If signed it automatically would block Braddock's proposed Atlantic City no-decision contest with Joe Louis.

"That was inserted for our protection and for Schmeling's," explained Johnston. "It is satisfactory to Schmeling and we want no interference.

"We lost money when Braddock hurt his hand and couldn't go through with the September fight and we don't want that to happen again."

Gould said he had s'gned an earlier agreement with the Garden for a June date, was willing to go through with it and post a $5,000 check to prove it.

"Will you agree not to fight anyone else before June?" asked Chairman John J. Phelan.

"No sir," was Gould's emphatic reply.

Schmeling told the commission he is ready to fight now, in February or any time and said he thought Braddock should fight him first.

"If he fights someone else and is knocked out, the title is a joke by the time I get a chance at it," he said. "I'll fight him anywhere."

"Schmeling wants to fight, your doctors say Braddock is ready, so let the commission name the date," suggested Johnston.

Whereupon the commissioners went into a huddle and came up with the February-March idea and called it a day.

Col. Walker D. Wear said if an agreement isn't reached shortly he'll suggest the fight be called off.

Phelan told all concerned there is nothing in the New York rules to keep the principals from fighting as many tune-ups as they like provided these bouts are for less than 15 rounds.

Must Post $25,000.

He said also that if contracts are signed they must carry a rider agreeing that the winner is to post $25,000 with the comission that he will defend the title within six months somewhere in the United States.

This was agreed to by Braddock, but Schmeling objected and said he'd do so only under protest.

"I can't agree to that," he said, "but I'll give my word of honor and take Gould's."

The Twentieth Century Sporting Club, co-promoter with the Garden in the June fight, did not enter the proceedings except to say through an attorney its contract with the Garden called for the fight to go on in June and it would expect the Garden to go through with it.

Eastern Cagers Rout St. Alban's

Coach Mike Kelley's rampaging Eastern High basketball team gave another convincing exhibition of strength yesterday by routing St. Alban's School, 40 to 9, at Eastern. St. Alban's was expected to bring out one of the strongest prep school fives in the District and the overwhelming triumph came as a sharp surprise.

Fifteen men were used by Coach Kelley but it failed to affect the score materially. Clint Quantrille, Eastern's big center, led the scoring again with 10 points. It was the last game of the year for St. Alban's which had opened its season a few days ago with an easy conquest of Rockville High.

Freak Mutuel Marks Charles Town Payoff

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 11—The vagaries of mutuel betting were strikingly illustrated today when Rough Party, the odds-on favorite, won the fifth race at the Charles Town track.

Rough Party which returned $3 on $2 win tickets also paid $3 to place and $3 to show in what is believed to be the first such freak odds in the history of mutuel betting.

8th Triumph Santa Clara's Aim Today

Texas Christian Is Underdog; 40,000 to See Game at San Francisco.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 11.—The colorful Texas Christian Horned frogs and Santa Clara Bronchos clash here tomorrow in a game 40,000 football fans will view as a "battle of the bowls."

Santa Clara, only undefeated, untied major eleven in the country, will meet Louisiana State in the New Orleans Sugar Bowl.

Won by Field Goals.

The battle is expected to surpass in thrills and yard play the meetings in 1934 and 1935—both won by the Texans by field goals.

Sentiment locally favors the Broncos at 10 to 6 odds.

Texas Christian's great aerial attacked is sparked by Sammy Baugh, quarterback, whom Coach "Dutch" Meyer ranks as the finest he ever has watched.

Santa Clara's veteran eleven, coached to its best record by "Buck" Shaw in his first year, has victories over Stanford, Alabama Poly, St. Mary's and four other opponents.

Boston's 'Garden' Groups in Merger

By the United Press.

Boston, Dec. 11.—Merger of the Boston Garden Corporation and the new Boston Arena Co.—two of New England's most prominent sporting enterprises—was effected late today.

The new combine will be known as the Boston Garden-Arena Corporation.

At the same time it was disclosed that the Boston Garden Corporation had bought out controlling interest from the Madison Square Garden Corporation of New York during the past month.

Announcement of the merger said the new corporation was "entirely divorced" from any connection with the New York Madison Square Garden group and represented an all-New England set-up.

Henry G. Lapham, prominent Boston financier and sportsman, and donor of the Lapham field house at Yale, was named head of the new corporation.

Colleges Play 'Too Many Games, Drain on Youths'

Atlanta, Dec. 11 (AP).—A. H. Armstrong, faculty athletic chairman at Georgia Tech, says colleges and universities are playing "too many" football games.

Armstrong, before leaving for the Southeastern Conference meeting at Tuscaloosa, Ala., today, said football players "are kept at work too long and the drain on their physical resources is too great, I fear."

He planned to propose an eight-game schedule for Southeastern Conference teams.

Billiard Play Thrown Into 3-Way Tie

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, forced a playoff for the world's three-cushion billiards championship tonight by defeating Kinrey Matsuyama, of Japan, 50 to 26, in 32 innings. Cochran's victory leaves himself, Matsuyama and Tiff Denton, of Kansas City, tied for first place, each having won six games and lost three.

The game was the last of the regular tourney schedule and the playoff program tomorrow will send Matsuyama against Denton in the afternoon, Cochran against Denton in the first game of the evening and Matsuyama against Cochran in the last tilt.

Cochran, who defeated Johnny Layton, of Sedalia, Mo., this afternoon, 50 to 32 in 40 innings, continued "hot" against Matsuyama. The San Francisco star, in the first inning, made his high run of the tournament, 11, and held command throughout as the diminutive Oriental ace fought doggedly to hang on.

At the intermission point Cochran was leading, 28 to 11, scoring 28 points in 14 frames. His brilliant string of 11, made after Matsuyama had won the lag and ran two, was the best first-inning run of the closely fought tourney.

Dowler Will Leave W. & M. Grid Staff

Williamsburg, Va., Dec. 11 (AP).—Charles Duke, chairman of the athletic committee of the College of William and Mary, today announced the resignation of Tommy Dowler from the school's coaching staff, effective June 1.

Dowler has been a member of the William and Mary coaching staff for four years. He started as backfield coach, then succeeded John Kellison as head coach with Kellison, becoming his assistant. Later, Dowler and Kellison were made co-ordinate coaches.

Pitt Leaves for Coast Wednesday; Drill Listed

Pittsburgh, Dec. 11 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh's football team will leave next Wednesday night on the long trip to the West Coast, where the Panthers will meet Washington's Huskies New Year's Day in the Rose Bowl.

The Panthers will drill at Albuquerque en route, then hasten to Lake Arrowhead, their training quarters some miles from Los Angeles, where they will remain until New Year's Day.

Oregon Coach Resigns.

Portland, Oreg., Dec. 11 (AP).—The Rev. Michael J. Early, president of the University of Portland, announced acceptance "with real regret" today of the resignation of Eugene L. ("Gene") Murphy, head football and baseball coach, who will enter private business here.

Blue Jays' Dazzling Attack Has American U. Cage Team Helpless.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 11.—Johns Hopkins won its opening basketball game tonight in such a manner as to leave a fair-sized crowd dizzy and unbelieving. For the Blue Jays, always a calm deliberate, defensive team, went on the most dazzling kind of a scoring rampage and won, 58 to 30, from American University.

The Jays took 103 shots at the basket, used 12 players, made a creditable first-game showing from the foul line, and in general impressed with their play. Taking advantage of superior height, they controlled the tap at center and in rebounds under both baskets.

Herb Siegel, captain and forward, raced away to a fine start in the high-scoring competition, registering 17 points from six baskets and five out of six successful free throws.

The regulars left the game midway of the second half, while the reserves ran the show for some minutes. The starting team returned a while, and then let the substitutes finish out the last few minutes. American U. showed some passing ability early in the contest, but had no defense to check the Jays once their attack began clicking.

Toledo Checker Player Is Near World's Crown

West Palm Beach, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—Asa Long, of Toledo, Ohio, had only to play two more draws tonight to clinch his world's championship checker title.

The title holder successfully blocked two games earlier today, maintaining his three-to-one lead over Challenger Edwin Hunt, of Nashville, Tenn. They started the final two heats of the 40-match tournament tonight.

For ten days the scholars of the squared board have bent over their men and moved them with such caution and precision that all except four of the games have ended with neither able to win.

Ohio Conference Ousts Akron on 'Ringer' Rule

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 11 (AP).—The Ohio Athletic Conference expelled the University of Akron from membership tonight by a vote of 32 to 8 for using ineligible football players during the 1936 season.

Dean Fred Ayer, of Akron, protested that each of the five boys ruled ineligible by the conference was eligible under University of Akron rules, but that they were banned through retroactive legislation passed by the conference last May.

60-Yard Runback Beats Miami, 6 to 3

By the United Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11.—A 60-yard touchdown jaunt in the third period by Jack Lyons gave South Carolina a 6-3 triumph over Miami University before 8,000 spectators who watched the teams close their 1936 football campaigns.

It was shortly afterward that Lyons took a punt on his 40 from Wolcuff and galloped 60 yards for the touchdown. He twisted his way through a mass of tacklers before his interference formed and brought him out in the open. Art Urbanyi's try for the extra point failed.

Guldahl Choice In Nassau's Open Golf

By the Associated Press.

Nassau, Bahamas, Dec. 11.—Ralph Guldahl, golfing phenomenon of the year, was the odds-on favorite today as 81 American club-swingers warmed up for tomorrow's start of the $4,000 Nassau open tournament.

The husky St. Louis player and Radix cupholder, whose putting turned the greens into winning greenbacks at the Augusta and Biltmore meets, held the favorite position, Leo Mallory, of Noroton, Conn., last year's conqueror of the 72-hole skirmish being placed far down the list because of a wrenched wrist.

If Guldahl officially the low scoring pro of the year, does shoot to top honors of the layout, he will have to excell some of the Nation's brightest fairway stars, including Denny Shute, the new P. G. A. titleholder, and Tony Manero, the National open champion.

The Nassau program calls for 18 holes tomorrow, two rounds Sunday and a final 18 Monday.

3 Teams Tied for First In Six-Day Bike Race

Minneapolis, Dec. 11 (AP).—Three teams were tied for first place in the Minneapolis six-day bicycle race at the end of the twenty-third hour at 10 o'clock tonight.

After traveling 371 miles, 8 laps, "Torchy" Peden and George Demsey, Rodman-Defillipo and Behringer-Bolleart were tied at the top.

More Liberal System Is Aimed to Correct 'Intolerable' Condition

New Rule States Athletes Shall Not Be Aided 'Primarily on Account of Any Athletic Ability;' Question of Virginia's Return Is Moot.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 11.—The Southern Conference, after hearing the resignation of the University of Virginia, abolished the Graham plan tonight and substituted another more liberal system for the elimination of athletic subsidies.

A proposal by William H. Harth, University of South Carolina athletic director, providing that athletic ability be recognized in the awarding of aid not exceeding legitimate college expenses was voted down, 11 to 4.

Favoring this plan, which in effect has been approved by the three other major conferences in the South, were Furman, Clemson, the Citadel and South Carolina.

Uniform scholastic proposals made by Clemson and Maryland were tabled until tomorrow morning, but it was virtually assured that the conference will write into its regulations some minimum number of classes which an athlete must pass in order to be eligible for intercollegiate competition.

Will Virginia Return?

Whether this action on the part of the conference, together with the likelihood of the passage of a uniform scholastic rule, would result in an application from Virginia for readmission was hte subject of considerable speculation after the meeting's close tonight.

President Fletcher said he did not know exactly what procedure would be followed should the Charlottesvill school attempt to get back into the organization. Virginia officials would not comment.

There was a wide disagreement over the extent which the new regulation liberalized the stringent rule 13 (Graham plan).

Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and father of the rule, said the new plan covered "most of the fundamentals" of the old measure.

The New Rule.

The article of the new plan, substituted for the most controversial portion of the Graham Plan (Section 1, paragraph A), governing subsidization follows:

"No student shall represent his university or college in any athletic contest who receives from others than those upon whom he is naturally dependent for financial aid money, by gift or loan, or the equivalent of money, such as board, lodging, etc., unless the source and character of these gifts or payments shall be approved by the faculty committee on the ground that they have not accrued to him primarily because of his ability as an athlete."

Opponents of the old plan said the introduction of the word "primarily in the last sentence of the article eliminated much of their objection to the anti-subsidization measure.

Breeds Distrust.

The University of Virginia charged that present Southern Conference regulations "breeds suspicion, distrust and mutual recriminations" in submitting its resignation to the 15-year-old athletic group.

There was no discussion of the move of Virginia, a charter member of the organization, and Forest Fletcher, Conference president, said no action was necessary under the constitution to complete the withdrawal of the institution.

Capt. Norton Pritchett, Virginia athletic director, who read the resignation, withdrew from the session, and after hearing several routine reports, delegates from the other 15 member schools launched their discussion of the controversial Graham plan, the Conference method of prohibiting subsidization.

The Virginia statement, drawn by the board of visitors, expressed approval of the "fundamental ideals as expressed in the Graham plan" but said that the hope of the institution that the regulations would improve

Movie Scouting Is Barred by S. E. Group

Conference Not to Add to Membership; Frosh to Play Only 2 Games.

By the Associated Press.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Dec. 11.—The Southeastern Conference barred movies for scouting and instructional purposes today and vetoed a proposal to require each member to play at least five intra-league gridiron opponents each season.

The conference heads in annual convention here likewise refused to increase its present membership of 13 and turned down a proposal to allow four freshmen football games instead of two.

President John J. Tigert, of the University of Florida, conference head, was upheld in a ruling that present by-laws prohibit motion pictures for scouting purposes.

Coach William A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, said the rule had been violated generally because members did not give it the same interpretation as that announced today by President Tigert.

The rule, as it stands, says:

"No member of the conference shall make, purchase or otherwise secure motion pictures of football teams of other members for scouting purposes or team instruction."

Tigert also was upheld in a ruling prohibiting sale of passes given football players. Speakers said in some instances players might be given money instead of passes, and that this also is a direct violation of conference rules.

An amendment to increase the membership was voted down by delegates in executive session. Loyola University, of New Orleans, and Southwestern College, of Memphis, were regarded as possible bidders for membership.

Open Subsidizing In S. W. Is Sought

Dallas, Dec. 11 (AP).—Unimpeachable sources said tonight a plan for open subsidizing of athletes by Southwest Conference schools would be recommended at the executive session of faculty representatives here tomorrow.

A source which would not be quoted said one of the seven Southwest Conference schools had instructed its representatives to move for "out in the open" subsidization.

One source said a suggestion might be made to allow athletes a limit of $50 monthly as pay during school months.

Hunch Players Win, Cloudy Weather Pays $39 at Charles Town

Rough Party Is Hancock Winner

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 11.—One of the best hunch bets in the history of this turf plant proved a winner today. A chosen few, who stick pins through programs and look for their wives' names among the horses, scored a ten strike when Cloudy Weather merely galloped along in front of his field to win the Pleasant Purse. Although the name "Cloudy Weather" was sufficient to please even the most superstitious of betters, the gelding's breeding made the hunch most binding.

The juvenile is out of the mare Just and by the sire Mud. With the track a sea of ooze and the skies sagging, the setting was complete.

Cloudy Weather was in front before the field reached the half pole and stayed there while Jockey F. Cusimano, of Washington, D. C., did the booting. White Sweets did a lot of huffing and puffing but came over the line three lengths behind the winner. Addis Ababa closed some ground to be a distant third.

Returns $39.

In the Hancock Purse, Rough Party finally made good. The expensive Strolling Player filly, twice beaten at the meeting, easily led a group of eight to the wire over the 6-furlong course. Rough Party paid $3 to win, place and show.

Yard Stick, a $5.80 favorite, was fully extended in winning the first race, a dash for juveniles. With Johnny Shanks in the saddle, Yard Stick had to be driven hard through the stretch to take a head decision from Disown, which led most of the way. Boos and applause greeted the judges' decision, but from the press box it appeared that Yard Stick had a good head the best of it.

Busy Sally Pays $31.80.

Jockey L. Garrett rode his first winner since his suspension in the second race, scoring easily with Lady Beacon, a $20.40 shot. Surry second from the start, took place money. Gaylass came from far back to be third.

Easter Herald, owned by Mrs. C. M. Feltner and ridden by Jockey L. Machado, won by three lengths in the third race, defeating the favored Balmacan. Third money in the group of eight went to Serenabit. Easter Herald was in front throughout the running of the six and a half furlongs test. The winner paid a $7.60 mutuel.

Skyride, proved the third winner of the day for Jockey Machado, the daughter of Happy Argo defeating the favorite, Irish Vote. Third was Standout. Skyride was second choice in the betting at a $6.60 mutuel.

Tinker Reported Sinking.

Orlando, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—Joe Tinker, former big league baseball player, who has been ill with Bright's disease and diabetes, was reported today to have suffered another sinking spell.

Hospital attaches said Tinker has rallied from previous similar spells and may recover.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, HEAVY.

FIRST RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:32. Off at 1:36. Winner, C. Skinker's b. c. (2), by Mayne—Hannah Lee. Trained by W. C. Kennedy. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:29.

HELEN V. D.	(Cusimano)	109	8	8	8	8	8	8		93.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—YARD STICK, $5.80, $4.40, $3.20; DISOWN, $12.40, $6.60; HAPPY HOSTESS, $4.00.

YARD STICK, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, gained gradually on DISOWN, went to the inside of leader entering the stretch, and under severe pressure was up in the final 20 yards. DISOWN went to the front at once, saved ground while setting the pace, swung out at the stretch turn and could not resist the winner. HAPPY HOSTESS was forwardly placed throughout and had no excuses. GLOSS could not threaten. FLYING NETTA raced very wide at the first turn. PRETTY PAL, pinched back going to the first turn, could not figure.

SECOND RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:00½. Off at 2:03½. Winner, S. B. Webb's b. f. (3), by Mount Beacon—Verity. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:35 2-5.

BANANA	(Johnson)	114	5	8	8²	8	8	8	8	11.70

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY BEACON, $20.40, $7.60, $5.40; SURRY, $4.40, $3.20; GAY LASS, $3.80.

LADY BEACON, first out of the gate and hard ridden to shake off SURRY, opened a good lead along the backstretch, was steered slightly wide entering the stretch and was taken in hand nearing the finish. SURRY was closest to the pacemaker from the start and could not threaten after saving ground entering the stretch. GAY LASS, lacking early speed, rallied when placed to drive and gained slowly through the final straightaway. BLACK CHIEF dropped out of it in the final eighth. TIME WINNER had early speed.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:29. Off at 2:30. Winner, Mrs. C. M. Feltner's b. g. (6), by Easter Bells—Annunciation. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:28 4-5.

SUN DREAMER	(Shanks)	113	3	8	8	7⁶	8	8	8	14.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EASTER HERALD, $7.60, $3.00, $2.60; BALMACAN, $2.40, $2.20; SERENABIT, $3.00.

EASTER HERALD drew clear of BALMACAN going into the backstretch to open a gap, and was kept to a strong hand ride to the end. BALMACAN was hard ridden throughout while closest to the pacemaker and gained gradually through the stretch. SERENABIT closed willingly. TWIDGETS, going forwardly, had to be pulled up sharply on the backstretch when she stumbled. CLAPWORTH had speed in spots. MARGIE LOU went evenly.

DAILY DOUBLE, LADY BEACON AND EASTER HERALD, PAID $95.40.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; handicap. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:57½. Off at 3:01½. Winner, P. C. Randolph's ch. g. (2), by Mud—Just. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:28 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOUDY WEATHER, $39.00, $11.80, $7.60; WHITE SWEETS, $4.80, $4.00; ADDIS ABABA, $5.60.

CLOUDY WEATHER, hard ridden to dispose of MARGARET NADI, went to the front approaching the far turn and lasted under a drive to hold WHITE SWEETS safe. The latter racked early but stuck under steadier handling but could not menace the winner. ADDIS ABABA closed well. SHANTEB could not threaten at any stage. MARGARET NADI stepped after setting the pace under hustling tactics.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING. TRACK, HEAVY.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course (6 furlongs and 40 yards). Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:29. Winner, J. Y. Christmas' ch. f. (4), by Strolling Player—Celebration. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:24 2-5.

GOOD GRACIOUS	(Snyder)	107	7	2	2¹	4⁵	8	8		11.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH PARTY, $3.00, $3.00, $3.00; ROY BOY, $14.40, $10.40; TOM'S BOY, $11.80.

ROUGH PARTY, rated while in close quarters to the backstretch, moved up to dispose of TOM'S BOY and drew ou to a long lead and was taken in hand at the end. ROY BOY, slow to strike a stride, gained steadily throughout and was a next best. TOM'S BOY was hard ridden from the start and was tiring at the end. SUMAC faltered after reaching contention. JUSTA PLAY tired.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, HEAVY.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:58. Winner, K. D. Kolseth's b. f. (3), by Happy Argo—Flying Comet. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:52 2-5.

†Pulled up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKYRIDE, $6.60, $2.40, $2.40; IRISH VOTE, $2.20, $2.20; STANDOUT, $2.80.

SKYRIDE, hustled to the front in the sprint to the turn, shook off repeated challenges by IRISH VOTE and drew out in the stretch. IRISH VOTE pressed the pace from the beginning, but was not good enough. STANDOUT gained sharply during the run up the backstretch, but could not menace. WAR PROFITS went evenly. DILWIN ran out at the turns, while going forwardly and was pulled up. HYDRO GIRL showed early speed and was pulled up when tiring.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:26½. Winner, S. B. Webb's b. f. (3), by Busy American—Exquisite. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:59 3-5.

BUSY SALLY, hustled to the front in the race, drew out to a good lead on the backstretch and easily held away to the end. JORDAN ROSE, a forward factor from the beginning, gained when placed to drive entering the stretch. VENNIE H. rallied mildly in the closing stages. CANTERET was used up pressing the pace and tired. LUCID went evenly. The others were outrun.

Time Out! By Chet Smith

Dear Al:—Providing the West Virginia Racing Commission approves this track will have 53 racing days next year. The Jockey Club announced today that it has selected the dates of May 29 to July 10, 37 days and, December 1 to December 18, 16 days. In addition the usual short meeting of the Horse Show Association, will be held early in August. Clocker Mike was feeling bad about the King of England being claimed by Mrs. Simpson. Mike asked, "What's Edward going to use for money!" When informed that Edward has $70,000,000, Mike came back with, "Wouldn't those 8-5 shots here catch the dickens if I had that kind of betting money." Today's final program here is a good one. The track will be muddy but the percentage of favorites winning here has been very high. Due to the long also eligible lists, limit fields are assured in each of the races. The farewell show and the last chance to see races in the section is expected to draw 8,000 fans. Don't forget those dimes. BILL.

First race—Douglas F, cake-walked home in the mud last out and appears capable of bouncing to another set of brackets in this company despite the 115-pound assignment. Gold Clip is a fair sort and figures to be close. Kyoto has worked well and may stage a surprise party.

Second race—This would be a good race if the also eligibles did the racing. Of those assured a chance to start, Tweety appears the best. Beauty B and Henryman for the place and show. If the reserves get in action, I'll take White Sweets, Tuleyries' Ruby, and Addis Ababa.

Third race—Whiskora will like the muddy track and we can expect a good effort. Needs only the right ride. Snow Coat has a lot of speed, but has shown little hereabouts. On best effort this one is dangerous. Doeskin for the third.

Fourth race—Buck Langhorne seems headed for another victory in this field. He did everything asked last out. Zippy ran like Man O'War to beat cheap ones here the other day and will be dangerous if in action. Sunsweep to take care of the other eligibles. Enthusiasm is too far down the list to be considered.

Fifth race—Miss Catalan looks like the best bet of the day. Jockey Garrett will do the riding and any price will be a good one. Don Tasker should not be worse than second. Brown Wren and The Scaup will be factors if in action.

Sixth race—Minna defeated a somewhat similar field here last week under the same conditions. Has only Morun to beat. Star Special may run back to one of those good races on the milers.

Seventh race—Luculent, Jimmy D, and Dunair is the way I prefer them in the final test of the meeting.

1—Douglas F, Old Dominion, Soupcon.
2—Centrite, Tweety, White Sweets.
3—Doeskin, Garne, Tell It.
4—Buck Langhorne, Darling Pat, Bubbling Spring.
5—Miss Catalan, Brown Wren, Fair Billy.
6—Star Special, Hannah Anne, Minna.
7—Luculent, Never Idol, Great Loss.
Best bet—Star Special.

G. W. Coach, With Star Court Squad, Not to Have 'Regular' Five

Kiesel, Alone, Regarded as Starter

Line-ups Will Be Named Before Each Game; Face 20 Contests.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bill Reinhart, coach of George Washington's basketball team, startled the sports world yesterday with an announcement that the school will have no regular quintet this winter, despite an impressive 20-game schedule arranged for it.

He meant it, too, but not literally. It seems that the Colonials are so abundantly blessed with material that Reinhart has decide the best results will be obtained by choosing his starting line-up just before the opening tap-off of each game throughout the year. He has so many men of the same approximate ability it would take a Solomon in all his wisdom to select the five best, but he can't possibly go wrong using all.

Only one player, "Legs" Kiesel, center, for whom, it was rumored, a new gym is being sought to permit full use of his ample height, is fairly confident of appearing in every starting line-up. But even Kiesel will not be without competition for his berth, not with Bruce Borum, a 6-foot 3-incher, and Jack Butterworth, 6 feet 4 inches, trying to get regular work.

Squad Resembles Celtics.

As far as the rest of the squad is concerned it resembles a branch office of the New York Celtics numbering, in all, 14 hand-picked dribblers. Four men are left from last year's quintet, which captured 16 of 19 games, but none are certain of retaining their positions. George Freidlicher, guard and keyman in the attack, and "Tuffy" Leemans were lost by graduation, but it is safe to say they will not be missed.

Coming up to replace the two departed—and some more, maybe—are the freshmen of last year, District unlimited A. A. U. champions, victors in 22 of 24 games, and one of the best-looking yearling teams Washington has seen since Don Dutton, Fred Mesmer and others of Georgetown's later famous team first donned the Blue and Gray. Borum, Sid Silkowitz, Pete Beronio, Joe Brennan, and Bob Farris are the outstanding members of this group, but their compatriots are just about as good.

O'Brien Again Available.

Held over from last season are Tommy O'Brien, owner of one of the town's most accurate scoring eyes, Milton Quincy (Mickey Mouse) Schonfeld; Ben Goldfaden, Walter Bakum, and Clarence Berg, all tried and proven performers. Arvid Anderson and Dave Osborne, two who can't be overlooked, round out the roster and don't do it any harm.

Reinhart isn't looking at the campaign through rose-colored glasses, not with Villanova, St. John's of Brooklyn and Long Island on the schedule, but he does expect to win more than his share of games. With that team he can't possibly miss equalling and possibly bettering last year's record.

December 17, at Johns Hopkins; 21, Marshall; January 2, Nebraska; 7, Mount St. Mary's, St. John's; 11, Elon; 14, Wake Forest; 22, at Villanova; 23, at Long Island; 27, at West Point; February 3, Geneva; 6, at Mount St. Mary's; 11, Davis-Elkins; 15, Westminster; 19, at West Virginia; 22, Loyola (Chicago); 25, at Geneva; 26, at Westminster; March 3, Long Island; 6, Villanova.

G. U. Prep Beaten, 29-22, at Frederick

Frederick, Md., Dec. 11.—The Maryland State School for the Deaf basketball team registered its third straight triumph today by defeating Georgetown Prep, 29-22.

The Mutes led all the way, getting off to a 7-0 lead in the first period. The visitors rallied at the outset of the third quarter to reduce the Maryland school's lead to three points, but field goals by Hudson and Juchno widened the gap.

Woodward Prep Five Downs Charlotte Hall

Woodward Prep overcame a 14-2 lead held by Charlotte Hall Military Academy in their game at the Central Y. M. C. A. yesterday and handed the cadets a 35-25 defeat. It was the first game of the season for both schools. Wilson, Woodward guard, scored 13 points to pace Coach Bernie Phillips' proteges to victory.

Wildcat Grads Offer to Help All-High Gridmen Pick College

By John R. Vosburgh.

Members of the All-High football team selected by The Washington Post were invited to confer with "counselors" of Northwestern University concerning their choice of college, at the football banquet of Northwestern alumni held last night at the Women's University Club.

The invitation was extended by Courtland Ferguson, president of the Washington Alumni Association of Northwestern. The All-High team was invited to attend as guests of honor of the Wildcat grads who were celebrating the winning of the Big Ten championship by Northwestern.

"If you need help in selecting your college," Ferguson told the ten high school stars present, "see men of our alumni association. Northwestern men will gladly help you in solving the problem of what college you should attend."

Asked whether this meant Northwestern might be extending financial inducement through scholarships to boys unable to pay entirely for a college education, Ferguson answered that he "couldn't say."

Some 100 persons attended the banquet, including Coach Elmer P. (Hap) Hardell, of Tech; Coach Hardy Pearce, of Central; Coach Artie Boyd, of Eastern; Coach Herman Littman, of Roosevelt, and Coach Carl Heintell, of Wilson.

Judge Isaac R. Hitt, member of the Northwestern football team of 1886 and '87, delivered a brief talk in which he claimed football "is much more scientific today" than it was in his time "when 500 people, instead of 50,000, were considered a good crowd for a Northwestern game."

Other speakers included Francis Stan, sports writer of the Star; Kirk Miller, sports editor of the Times; Bernie Harter, sports editor of the Herald; John W. Dodge, director of the Northwestern Alumni Foundation.

The coaches also delivered a few remarks, including Hardell, who said he felt rather odd, being a Michigan man, to be present at a Northwestern banquet celebrating the Big Ten championship, especially since his star fullback of last year went to Minnesota. Heintel remarked that he could not enter into the celebration with full enthusiasm, inasmuch as he was an Iowa man.

Sound movies of Northwestern's 6-0 victory over Minnesota concluded the occasion. The All-High players present were Biff Oliphant, Phil Crabbe, Jim Farquharson and Len Weinstein, of Western; Bill Wooten, Charlie Jones and Hugh Cramer, of Central; Al Kidwell and Bill Kemp, of Eastern, and Pim King, of Tech. Johnny Williamson, of Tech, was playing basketball in Baltimore.

Paul Tangora, the Washington boy who made good with Northwestern, probably never would have become an all-American if it hadn't been for Coach Lyn Waldorf . . . Tangora, a very nervous type, was ruining all his chances by his excessive over-anxiety until Lyn took over the Wildcats . . . Waldorf calmed Paul down to the proper speed in a series of long, heart-to-heart talks . . . Incidentally, Waldorf is more proud of the fact that Don Heap has worked himself up into part ownership in the co-operative bookstore at Northwestern and maintains a high scholastic average than that Don received all-America mention this year . . . Jack Hagerty, Hoya coach, says Jack Masterson, the Miami end, is the best Georgetown has faced this year . . . He thinks it unfortunate that Masterson is on a small team where he hasn't much chance to achieve national prominence . . . That big prize fight may yet be put on in Hollywood . . . Duckpin Stars To Vie Today In Doubles

10-Game Competition at Temple and Recreation; Other Bowling News.

Leading duckpin stars from Washington and vicinity will flock to the mapleways this afternoon at the Northeast Temple to compete in the sixth annual Atlantic Coast Doubles championship.

The event consists of ten games, the first block to be rolled at the Temple alleys at 2 o'clock and the second at the Recreation at 7:30. About 20 teams are expected to go into action, wih many having earned a free shot at the trophies and cash prizes by winning preliminary sweepstakes.

Paul Jarman and Russ Spilman, of Rosslyn, Va., are the defending champions, winning over a strong field last season with a total pinfall of 2,553. Both of the titleholders have been traveling at a fast clip this season, and are determined not to relinquish their title.

With a $100 guarantee going to the winner, the classic has attracted feminine stars all along the Atlantic seaboard.

An interesting sidelight of the event will be the renewal of hostilities between Lorraine Gulli, local dethroned national champion, and Ida Simmons, of Norfolk, Va., the present titleholder.

With the Maryland State Tournament open to bowlers outside of the State, many of the District's top-notch stars will compete in the night in the Monumental City.
event tomorrow afternoon and
Ten games will be rolled, the first block starting at 2:15 and 4:15 p. m. at the Victoria alleys and the second at 8 p. m. at the Wilkens avenue drives.

Martin McCarthy, prominent local golfer, proved as adept on the mapleways as on the greens last night in the Country Golf League at Lucky Strike, chipping the pins for a 153 game and 386 set in Beaver Dam's clean sweep over Kenwood No. 2. Doc Parks helped Kenwood No. 1 to retain first place, rolling a 347 set in his team's odd game victory over Argyle No. 1. Billie LaBille shot 133 and 366 in Manor's three wins over Indian Springs.

A 174 game by Sam Smith, of the Examiners, established an all-time record in the Inetrstate Commerce Commission League. Smith then followed with a 404 set for a new season record mark. The first place B. & M. Shop No. 1 stopped the Optical team twice in the Columbia Lodge No. 174, Navy Yard League. Reds Burdett featured with a top game of 153 and a 359 set. With Mamie Payne leading the individual scoring, Kanns annexed team laurels in the Ladies Independent League, shooting 522 and 1513. A. Lansdale's 153 game and W. Woody's 375 set were the best efforts in the Maritime League at Arcadia.

Virginia Resigns From Conference

the athletic situation in the conference had "not been fulfilled."

"In view of our experience, we feel that the possibility of uniform enforcement of conference regulations is so remote that present tendencies, clearly evident, may become more damaging than the ills we have sought to cure," the resignation statement said.

"The present situation is intolerable because it breeds suspicion, distrust, and mutual recriminations, which we believe to be distinctly harmful to student attitude, athletic rivalry, and to institutional relationships.

"We believe that the predominant sentiment of our alumni and students is sympathetic with the views expressed herein.

"We shall formulate our own regulations concerning athletic eligibility, and we shall be glad to give definite assurance regarding our policy to such institutions as may wish to meet our teams on a basis of mutual understanding and good will."

The Graham plan, under which the conference has been operating since September, prohibits the awarding of scholarships, loans, jobs, and any other material consideration within direct or indirect control of the institution to athletes as athletes. It provides that all such assistance must be open to all students on an equal basis.

The Southern is the only major conference in the South prohibiting the consideration of a student's athletic ability in the awarding of aid.

Lee W. Milford, faculty chairman of athletics at Clemson, took the lead in the fight against the plan by presenting a motion for its elimination the moment the question was reached on the conference docket.

Mr. Milford said "it is impossible to live up to the plan" and pictured it as a possible developer of "dishonesty" among football players.

"I do not favor professionalism but I can't see anything wrong in helping an athlete any more than there is harm in helping a member of the band, or of the glee club, if they are deserving students."

Leemans in Cage Game Tomorrow

Three 15-minute periods instead of the customary 20-minute halves will prevail tomorrow afternoon at Heurich's Gym in the professional basketball game between the Heurich Brewers and the Kendrick team, of Alexandria. Game time is 3:30.

Tuffy Leemans, former George Washington University football and basketball captain, and Ed Hargaden, ertswhile Georgetown captain, will make their professional debuts with Heurich.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

I doubt if Washington is fully alive to the significance of the decision George Preston Marshall will make in a few days, when he will name the new base of operations for his Boston Redskins, the Eastern champions of the National Professional Football League, who are now a homeless outfit.

POVICH.

Marshall is leaning between Washington and Philadelphia as the new home of his surprising Redskins and the Capital is the distinct favorite to win the franchise.

The coming of the Redskins to Washington would be a tremendous boon to the sports scene here. Only the presence of the Washington Baseball Club saves the Capital from being a bush-league sports town. With the Redskins operating in and out of Washington, Capital fans would be provided with tops in football entertainment for the National Professional League is the ultimate in skilled football.

The Redskins, moreover, are a team that Washington could take to its collective heart. With Marshall's club here, the Capital would have more than mere representation in the league. It would boast the best professional football team in the East and, if the Redskins knock off the Green Bay Packers tomorrow at the Polo Grounds, then Washington would boast no less than the champions of the football sphere.

Personally, I'm thinking that Washington fans would go mildly nuts over the Redskins. The spectacle of a home-town team taking the field against such as the Packers, the Chicago Bears, and Cardinals and the Detroit Lions and New York Giants with an even chance to win would be an amazing new high in Washington football.

The prospect of fellows like Cliff Battles, "Turk" Edwards, Don Irwin, and Wayne Millner performing in Washington regalia is enough to excite the imagination of the fans of any city that has been denied even a peep at the big-shot stars of pro football.

In Battles Washington would boast the absolute best ball carrier in professional ranks, and in the 259-pound Edwards the local clients could thrill to the feats of a tackle who shames the all-American selections. In three successive plays against the Giants in New York, the giant Edwards downed a punt on the 1-foot line, blocked a punt and recovered a fumble.

Marshall's team began to develop in the last month of the league season after a poor start that ruined their Boston patronage. In one game, against the Chicago Cardinals, the Redskins' fury demonstrated itself in the final figures which showed that the net results of the Cardinals' attempt to rush the ball during the game was a 2-yard loss. In their next game the Redskins held the opposition to a total of 17 yards gained.

Marshall has never announced officially that his team would not return to Boston next season, but he forever cut himself adrift from the Hub when he decided on New York as the site of his championship game with the Packers. It was Marshall's privilege to give Boston fans the title contest, but in snubbing the Hub he made his future position in Boston intolerable.

In Short—

Boston soured on the Redskins a few minutes before the season started, according to Boston sports writers who are voting good riddance to Marshall and his team . . . it seems that Marshall, without warning, doubled the bleacher price from 55 cents to $1.10 for the opening game, and thousands of indignant fans turned away . . . Marshall further incurred the wrath of Boston newspapers by tightening up on the complimentary tickets when important games were scheduled . . . and also he had the ill luck to see his Redskins perform very drably in their early games at home . . . and in the Boston Shamrocks, of the American League, Marshall found an annoying competitor for Boston patronage . . . the Shamrocks, operating in a minor league, cleverly signed up a host of Irish lads who had starred with Holy Cross and Boston College and injected local interest into their games . . . that transplanted bit of Erin known as Boston is strongly partial to Irish athletes and it was in disgust that Marshall saw the lower-paid Irishmen contest for the Boston patronage . . . Marshall did come up with a coach fittingly named Ray Flaherty, but by the time Flaherty managed to get the Redskins clicking Boston fans were very much uninterested . . . and Marshall, with the Eastern league champions as his ball club, will lose $30,000 on the season.

Helen Stephens, Olympic Star, Seeks Role as Hotel Hostess

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Helen Stephens, women's Olympic sprint champion from Fulton, Mo., came to town today "to see how much hay Radio City will hold."

She decided it would hold "quite a pile" and then said she was negotiating for a job as hostess in a Broadway hotel.

"I'm going to make my home here after January," said Helen, who will leave William Woods College next month. "I like night life and I have a chance to make my living here."

Obviously embarrassed when questioned about the job, Miss Stephens said it was not absolutely necessary that she earn her own living. One questioner asked her if she drank.

"Well, no, I don't, but I think it's fine that other people do," she conceded.

Miss Stephens said she had three other things in mind: she is thinking about getting married, though she would not divulge the name of the man; she wants to take up tap dancing.

Miss Stephens, who bettered the women's world and Olympic 100-meter records with a mark of 11.4 seconds at Berlin, has turned down several offers to turn professional.

Natie Brown Wins Easily In His 'Comeback' Debut

Natie Brown, Washington heavyweight, won a handy decision over Johnny Whiters, Pontiac, Mich., negro in the other main bout, which went the full 10 rounds. Each weighed 200.

Bethesda Bows To Western's Rally, 23-20

Burns' Pair of Baskets in Last Six Minutes Clinches Victory.

Western High rallied in the last quarter yesterday to overcome a four-point lead and deal Bethesda-Chevy Chase a 23-20 defeat by some fast last-minute shooting by Gerald Burns, captain for the day.

The Marylanders started off by taking a 6-4 lead in the first quarter and at the half had a 12-8 lead. The Georgetowners were unable to cut it down in the third period and started the final quarter, trailing 17-13. With six minutes to play, Bethesda-Chevy Chase led 19-17, whereupon Burns sank a basket to tie the score.

George DeWitt shot a foul shot and Western led for the first time, 20-19, but Schneider of Bethesda-Chevy Chase also sank a free shot and it was 20-20 with the time going fast. Burns came through with another basket, however, and Western led, 22-20. A foul shot by Hugo Schulze just before the final whistle was superfluous.

Colonia l Frosh Swamp Devitt In Practice

Trio of D. C. High School Products Help Roll Up 63-10 Score.

Liberally sprinkled with All-Stars from various sections of the country, the George Washington freshman basketball team opened its season yesterday by swamping Devitt Prep, 63-10, in a light workout in the George Washington gymnasium.

Chick Hollidge, last year's All-High forward from Eastern, scored eight points and Buddy Shaner, erstwhile Eastern center, slipped in a couple of baskets also. George Garber, All-New York City high school star of last year, tucked away eight points in addition, but the real scoring honors went to Myer Arronson, the All-Star guard from New Jersey, who played part of the game and rolled up 13 points.

Among those contributing to the deluge of 29 field goals were Bill Hockenberry, George Washington's great punting backfield star of its Freshman team this fall, and Nowaski, the smashing Colonial Cub end. Billy Mitchell, formerly of Wilson Teachers, played guard for George Washington for awhile.

Squash on Racquet Club's Schedule

Washington will be represented by a first-class squash racquet team this season, the combined University-Racquet Club announced yesterday. The team will open an ambitious season today against the Maryland Club, of Baltimore, in an eight-man match.

At least half a dozen other encounters are to be played, including a 15-man team match with the Baltimore A. C. in Baltimore, December 19 and a tussle with the Penn A. C., using eight-man teams on January 9. Other matches are pending with the Merion Cricket Club, Wilmington Country Club and Tennis and Racquet Club, of New York.

Coach Otto Gloeckler is whipping the squad into shape with a club tournament helping to weed out the candidates. The club championships start January 18, but a handicap tourney for junior and senior classes will begin January 4.

Savings Bond Sales Are $690,000,000

The Secretary of the Treasury announced yesterday that more than 700,000 investors throughout the country had purchased to date approximately $690,000,000, maturity value, of United States Savings Bonds. The sale began on March 1, last year, and an average of more than $1,000,000, maturity value, of these bonds have been bought each business day since that date.

Sales for the first ten days of this month indicate that December will show total tales substantially exceeding the average. These increased sales are attributed in part to purchases by recipients of dividends, wage increases and bonuses. The Treasury Department is also receiving orders for Savings Bonds to be distributed to lists of employes as Christmas bonuses. Savings bonds are also being purchased for Christmas gifts to an increased extent.

Farm, Rubber, Cotton Shares Lead Market

Advance 60 to 68 Per Cent Against Average Gain of 30 Per Cent.

Agricultural equipment, rubber and tire, and cotton shares have been this year's stock market leaders, recording gains of from 60 per cent to 68 per cent from January 1 to November 13, according to the Industries Survey of 28 industries published by Fenner & Beane, members of the New York Stock Exchange, with a Washington office at 807 Fifteenth street northwest.

In this ten and one-half month interval, shares of 18 out of the 48 industrial groups represented, recorded a greater gain than the average for all stocks, which appreciated about 30 per cent from the beginning of the year. Market valuation of shares in six groups declined in face of a broadly advancing trend in stock values.

"No better illustration of the selectivity of today's stock market and of the need for diversification of holdings can be found than in this study of the relative market action of the shares of different industrial groups," according to the firm. "Whereas prior to the depression, the stock market tended to advance or react, as a unit, today's market is composed of the shares of industrial groups individual in their action and requiring constant appraisal of their relative attractiveness as media for investment.

Group Differences.

"Whereas for example, in the first ten and one-half months this year, agricultural equipment shares advanced 68 per cent over the year's opening levels, radio and cigarette stocks appreciated only about 2 per cent, while meat packing shares declined 3 per cent and cottonseed oil issues 20 per cent.

Distillery issues recorded a 3 per cent decline following a 50 per cent gain in the preceding 10-month period between Febraury 28, 1935 and December 31, 1935. Wool issues this year declined about 3 per cent, having appreciated over 65 per cent in the 1935 period.

Sugar refinery issues, on the other hand, which depreciated over 20 per cent in 1935, reversed this trend to gain 15 per cent this year. Aviation transport and aviation manufacturing shares, however, which gained 117 per cent and 135 per cent, respectively, last year, modified their advance this year to only 21 per cent and 8 per cent, indicating the need for continuous analysis of prospects as among the shares of different industrial groups.

Daily Oil Output Drops 10,450 Bbls.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 10,450 barrels in the week ended December 5, totaling 3,000,200 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicated.

Prices Dip in Active Market; Low-Priced Shares in Demand

By Frederick Gardner.

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 11.—Low-priced specialties held most of the buying interest in today's stock market while the majority of recent leaders was left to shift for themselves. Visions of improved business and speculative profits hopes, brokers said, attracted wide public participation in numerous issues selling below $10.

On the other hand, many traders were thought to have followed their usual custom of stepping out of some of their "blue chip" commitments over the week-end as a precaution against unexpected news happenings.

A brisk pick-up in London securities reflected lessening tension over the abdication of King Edward and domestic market interest in foreign affairs appeared to have waned considerably.

Stocks in the favored classes were turned over in such large volume during the first hour or so the ticker tape frequently fell behind floor dealings. The proceedings slowed somewhat in later tradings.

Transfers totaled 2,611,590 shares, the largest turnover since November 18, last, and compared with 2,440,670 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 0.5 of a point at 70.5.

Mining Issues Dull.

Another boost in lead prices failed to spur mining stocks. The rails took a recess to await signs of a decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the extension of emergency freight rates. Official figures on last week's car loadings disclosed a less than seasonal advance.

The major steels dipped, but a few of the so-called "independents" were in demand. Merchandising shares paid little heed to another optimistic week-end trade review by Dun & Bradstreet. A few oils and alcohols found support on indications of expanding consumption in these lines.

American Can dropped 3¼ points at 114¾, which was a bit puzzling to analysts in veiw of the extra dividend voted last month. Others off fractions to a point or more were U. S. Steel at 76⅝, Bethlehem 73¾, General Motors 68⅝, Chrysler 123⅜, Western Union 83⅛, Santa Fe 72⅝, Consolidated Edison 44¾, Anaconda 50½, Loew's 63¼, Continental Can 65¼.

Conspicuous gainers were Seaboard Oil at 39⅞, Commercial Solvents 18⅛, Pathe 11, Canada Dry 23¼, Budd Manufacturing 13⅞, United Aircraft 28¾, Mohawk Carpet 30⅞, General Realty 4⅜, Central Foundry 8⅜, Crucible Steel 53, Walworth 12 and Superior Oil 5.

Bonds Irregular.

Trading interest in the bond market today continued to show a pronounced leaning toward issues directly or indirectly tied to stocks. A numrbe of unusually wide advances and also a few sharp declines were registered in close conformity with the movements in the related equities.

The main body of the list moved rather sluggishly within a narrow range. Some of the morning gains were cancelled in the late trading and the close was mixed. The Associated Press rail average declined .2 of a point, utilities improved .1 and industrials were unchanged. Dealings in all groups totaled $13,077,000, aginst $16,380,000 on the previous day.

The United States Government list had a better tone following a downward drift in recent sessions. Gains in the Treasury list, ranging from 1-32 to 4-32 of a point, outnumbered declines, which ran from 1-32 to 3-32. The guaranteed issues were 1-32 to 4-32 higher.

Some of the larger advances were scored by Central Foundry convertible 6s, closing at 172, up 16; American Type Founders convertible 5s at 171, up 6; United States Pipe & Foundry convertible 3½s at 142, up 3½; New Orleans, Texas & Mexico 5s at 50, up 2½; Allis-Chalmers 4s at 212, up 2.

Declines of 1 to more than 3 points were recorded by obligations of Manati Sugar, Warner-Quinlan, Union Oil of California, Hudson & Manhattan Railway, Botany Mills, Richfield Oil, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, New Haven and Great Northern.

In the foriegn sector the principal movements were in Abitibi Paper & Power 5s, up 1⅝; Italian 7s, up 1¾; Norway 6s, up ¾, and Rome 6½, up ⅝. Cuban 5½s and Polish 7s fell 1¾ and 1¼.

U. S. $700,000,000 7 Times Subscribed

Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday a 15 per cent allotment of 2½ per cent 13-17-Treasury bonds. The bond offering, totaling $700,000,000, drew $4,959,000,000 of subscriptions. Subscriptions up to $1,000 were allotted in full and those over $1,000 were allotted 15 per cent, but not less than $1,000 on any one subscription. Morgenthau said preliminary reports indicated that practically all of $886,000,000 of maturing notes would be exchanged for new Treasury obligations.

On the Air Today

The first ratings of programs, as given by Washington listeners will appear in the Sunday Post, radio page, tomorrow. The tabulation is based on poll forms returned by listeners. And in case you haven't sent one in yet, join the crowd by clipping the form from tomorrow's Post and expressing yourself, too, on your "10 favorite programs."

Each poll form also provides for the listener's expression as to tastes in variety shows, comedians, male and female popular singers, orchestras and so on.

The first week's poll forms show that Rudy Vallee and his "Varieties" is the tops in this classification of program with Washington listeners. Vallee's show is running 3½ times stronger than the nearest competitor, Bing Crosby and the "Music Hall."

Tied for third position are "Hollywood Hotel" and "Show Boat." Other programs to receive a bit of attention are Kate Smith's "Bandwagon", Fred Allen's "Town Hall Tonight" and the "Magic Key."

Jack Benny runs away with the choice for "Best Comedian." His nearest competitor, with one-third the votes, is Eddie Cantor. Close behind in third position is Fred Allen, and trailing in turn are Bob Burns, Stoopnagle and Budd and Ed Wynn. "Amos 'n' Andy", Phil Baker and Edward Everett Horton get a smattering of recognition.

Wayne King's orchestra is the most popular dance organization, according to Washington listeners thus far. Guy Lombardo is only a few votes behind. Fred Waring is in third position; Benny Goodman, fourth. Andre Kostelanetz is next.

The competition for symphony honors is keen with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony leading; the "Sunday Evening Hour" a very close second, and G. M. Concerts third. The Boston Symphony is fourth.

The "Radio Theater" runs off with the "Drama" classification: "First Nighter" second. Under the heading of "Radio Serials," "One Man's Family" is first with Helen Hayes ("Bambi") second; "Amos 'n' Andy" third, and "Easy Aces," fourth.

Nelson Eddy is the outstanding male singer on the air. He received the most votes under two classifications—"Popular Singer, Male" and "Classical Singer." Bing Crosby, as second choice of popular singers, is far ahead of the rest of the field.

Kate Smith and Jessica Dragonette are tied for honors as the best liked "Popular Singer—Female." Margaret Speaks and Frances Langford are next.

Second to Eddy under the heading "Classical Singer" is Lily Pons. In order, then, are Lawrence Tibbett, Richard Crooks, Nino Martini, John Charles Thomas and Marion Talley. Miss Dragonette also is mentioned under this classification.

Milton Cross stands out as the "best announcer" with Jimmy Wallington, Ted Husing, Harry von Zell, Graham McNamee and David Ross following in order.

Tampa Flogging Victim Eulogized by Thomas

Tampa, Fla., Dec. 11 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist Party leader, said in a prepared speech tonight the fatal flogging here of Joseph Shoemaker, organizer of unemployed workmen, was "an evidence of the decline of civil liberties in this country."

He spoke on the anniversary of the funeral. Shoemaker died December 9, 1935, nine days after he was abducted with two companions, and tarred and feathered. Four Tampa policemen were convicted on a charge of kidnaping E. F. Poulnot, one of the victims. All are free under appeal bonds.

Roosevelt Ship Quits Trinidad After 4 Hours

By the Associated Press.

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 11.—President Roosevelt started the last lap of his return from a Latin-American peace mission today, leaving Port-of-Spain for Charleston, S. C., where he was due Tuesday.

Tomorrow, the cruisers Indianapolis and Chester were to stop at Birds Island, west of the Windward chain in the Caribbean Sea, if the water was smooth enough for Mr. Roosevelt to fish from a small boat.

Otherwise, he planned to continue on to North Cuban Island, east of Puerto Rico, to fish there.

Ashore 4 Hours.

He spent four hours ashore here, having lunch at the Government House and then taking a 25-mile auto ride through the countryside of this British island.

Capt. Devasseau Latham, of the French cruiser Jeanne D'Arc, also came aboard.

Then Mr. Roosevelt transferred to the coastwise steamer Tobago and was taken to a Port-of-Spain dock while the occupants of many small craft shouted a welcome.

Municipal officials welcomed the United States executive on the pier, and he drove with Gov. Gen. Fletcher to the two-storied, stone-columned Government House before beginning the drive into the country.

Plans Indies Hotels.

President Roosevelt disclosed at a press conference he had discussed with the British Ambassador in Washington during the last two years a plan to develop all the West Indies by building better hotels on the smaller islands for winter tourists. The ambassador was sympathetic, he said.

The United States, Mr. Roosevelt declared, already had begun such work with construction of hotels in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

W. S. Burns, former chief boatswain of the cruiser Chester, presented to the President a model of the old four-masted bark Shenandoah, which Mr. Roosevelt said he would place in a glass case in his White House study.

Welfare Sessions Open Here Today

The American Public Welfare Association will convene today at the Wardman Park Hotel for a two-day session, with more than 400 delegates, representing 44 States and thre eCanadian provinces, attending.

These delegates will include Federal, State and local public welfare officials. Among them will be Frank Bane, executive director of the Social Security Board, who will speak.

Participating in the round table discussions will be Elwood Street, director of public welfare for the District, and Fred Hoehler, executive director of the Welfare Association.

Today's speakers will include Sanford Bates, director of the Bureau of Prisons; William Hodson, commissioner of public welfare of New York City, and Raymond Clapper, political commentator.

Remaining Wires At Airport to Go

The last remaining overhead power and light wires bordering Washington Airport will be replaced by underground construction as a result of an agreement reached yesterday between officials of the airport and the Braddock Light & Power Co., a subsidiary of the Potomac Electric Power Co.

Involved are approximately 2,000 feet of underground construction, extending along Jefferson Davis highway, from about the center of the airport boundary to the vicinity of Columbia pike.

The plan finally agreed upon is one which, in the opinion of airport officials, will result in elimination of all overhead wires and poles, now constituting a hazard to air transport activities.

Ax Couldn't Have Made Wound In Maxwell's Head, Witness Says.

Implement Proves Boomerang When Prosecution Testimony by Physician Is Adverse; Coroner McDonald Will Testify Today.

While the trial is on, the Dodson's, they are the "kinfolk" of Edith's mother, who was Anne Dotson, sit behind the table used by defense counsel and the kinfolk of Trigg Maxwell gather behind Skeen as he sits with the prosecutor on the other side of the courtroom.

D. C. Coroner Arrives.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner of the District of Columbia, arrived here today, but will not be called to the witness stand until tomorrow. He was shown a copy of the autopsy report by a Post reporter a year ago. After reading it, he became convinced that Maxwell did not die as a result of the slipper blow on his head, and he will so testify.

For the second time, the prosecution today put a former convict on the stand. He was Bill Fortner, a rum-runner, who was a trusty in the Wise jail at the time Edith was incarcerated.

"Did you talk to Edith," he was asked.

"Yes, sir, I did. She talked a lot, and I told her to keep her mouth shut.

"One day she was telling me how she hit her father, and I asked her 'What did you hit him with?' She said, 'I hit him with a slipper, but that didn't kill him.'"

Attorney Smith objected to Fortner's testimony, but Judge Carter allowed it to stand.

Edith May Not Testify.

In the course of today's session, Attorney Smith revealed that he might not even put Edith Maxwell on the stand. If he does that, he will contend that the prosecution has not proved that there was a murder.

The first witness called this morning was Dr. Tudor.

Dr. Tudor said the wound on the head of the deceased was about three-quarters of an inch long.

However, he said, the skull was not fractured.

He said that blood clots found in the brain made him "confident" that he would find a fracture of the skull, and he admitted that he was surprised when none was revealed.

"What kind of instrument was used to inflict the wound?" he was asked.

"I can't say. It might have been a blunt instrument or it might have been a sharp one. It must have been wielded with terrific force."

Vickars picked up the ax introduced yesterday and asked Dr. Tudor if that could have been used.

"This weapon," he concluded, "would have made a wound larger than the one we found."

Skeen Paid Physician.

Asked directly what caused Maxwell's death, Dr. Tudor expressed the belief that it was concussion of the brain.

Defense Counsel Smith brought out that Dr. Tudor was paid by Lee Skeen, uncle of Edith, who is trying to send her to the penitentiary.

Smith asked Dr. Tudor why Dr. Hicks, Wise County coroner, did not perform the autopsy. Tudor was unable to explain.

The physician would not agree that Maxwell would have become unconscious if he suffered a concussion.

"Soldiers have been known to run a great distance after suffering a concussion," he said.

Dr. Tudor said that he made the autopsy after an undertaker had embalmed Maxwell. He admitted that the embalming fluid may have caused the blood clots at the base of the skull.

"If you knew that Trigg Maxwell was conscious for 40 minutes or more after being struck, how would that affect your theory that he suffered a concussion?"

"It would militate against it."

Dr. Tudor said that his opinion that Maxwell died from a blow on the head was based half on his examination of the brain and half on the history of the case.

Fred H. King, the undertaker who handled Maxwell's body testified that Lee Skeen authorized the autopsy.

Dr. Faust, who helped Dr. Tudor perform the autopsy was called and gave substantially the same testimony as his colleague.

He, too, said he was surprised when he found no skull fracture.

Asked by Prosecutor Greear if the ax could have inflicted the wound, Dr. Faust hesitated and observed: "Very possibly."

Dr. P. L. Sykes, who pronounced Trigg Maxwell dead, told of being with Trigg the afternoon of the tragedy.

He said he and Trigg had two bottles of beer together.

"Was he drunk or sober?" Dr. Sykes was asked.

"He was sober."

Dr. Sykes told of being called later that night by Edith to attend the dying Trigg.

Defense Counsel Smith questioned Dr. Sykes.

"You say Edith came to your house to ask you to attend her father?"

"Yes."

"Did she seem nervous and worried?"

"Yes, I'd say so."

She said she heard Edith cry out: "Mommy, how can you lo[ok] when he is staring at you like that."

Mabel explained that Trigg, lying there dead in the kitchen doorway, had his eyes and mouth open.

Gladys Robinson, Edith's married sister, was there, Miss Mullins said, and asked what had happened.

"Edith said that her poppy had been drunk," Miss Mullins testified. "Gladys said, 'Edith, how can you say such a thing?'"

"Edith said, 'Gladys, do you think I could tell a lie with a dead man laying at my feet?'"

Former Deputy Sheriff R. S. Hubbard, who arrested Edith after Trigg's death, was recalled to the witness stand.

The prosecution asked him to repeat what Edith told him at the time, but the defense objected. Judge Carter was still pondering this objection when he adjourned court and went out to hear former King Edward's broadcast.
